XI. FORM AND SUFFICIENCY.<sup>1</sup>—A. WHAT LAW GOVERNS.

The form and sufficiency of a judgment are governed entirely by the law of the jurisdiction rendering the same.<sup>2</sup> If sufficient there, it is sufficient in any court, even though it would be insufficient if rendered in the court where it is offered.<sup>3</sup>

B. FORMAL REQUISITES.—1. In General.—Unless prescribed by statute, no particular form of words is necessary to a valid judgment,<sup>4</sup> though it is necessary such words be used as to show that a judicial determination has been made and entered.<sup>5</sup> Especially is

1. Form and sufficiency of judgments by confession, see 14 STANDARD PROC. 811, 834; of judgments by default, see 14 STANDARD PROC. 900, et seq.; of judgments by consent, see 14 STANDARD PROC. 919; of judgments on the pleadings, see 14 STANDARD PROC. 957; of judgments in particular actions or proceedings, see the specific titles throughout this work.

2. U. S.—Cline v. Southern Ry. Co., 231 Fed. 238; Woodbridge, etc. Engineering Co. v. Ritter, 70 Fed. 677. Ill. McMillan v. Lovejoy, 115 Ill. 498, 4 N. E. 772; Kimmel v. Shultz, 1 Ill. 169; Kopperl v. Nagy, 37 Ill. App. 23. Ia. Taylor v. Runyon, 3 Iowa 474. S. C. Morrow v. Atlanta, etc. R. Co., 84 S. C. 224, 66 S. E. 186.

[a] Where it is manifest from the record that technicalities in forms of action have been abolished in the state rendering the judgment, the judgment will be treated as the courts of the state rendering it would treat it. Griffin v. Eaton, 27 Ill. 379.

[b] The form of a judgment record is regulated by the practice of the court in which it was rendered. Cline v. Diamond (Ga. App.), 87 S. E. 1101.

[c] Law and Practice of State Rendering May Be Shown.—Where the record does not conform to what would be necessary for a judgment in the state where the issue is raised, the laws and practice of the state in which it was rendered may be introduced to show its sufficiency. Taylor v. Runyon, 3 Iowa 474.

3. U. S.—Woodbridge, etc. Engineering Co. v. Ritter, 70 Fed. 677. Ga. Cline v. Diamond (Ga. App.), 87 S. E. 1101. Ill.—Schertz v. Chester First Nat. Bank, 47 Ill. App. 124.

4. Cal.—McGarrahan v. Maxwell, 28 Cal. 75, 85. Ill.—Guild v. Hall, 91 Ill. 223; Johnson v. Gillett, 52 Ill. 358; Wells v. Hogan, 1 Ill. 337; Tisdale v.

Davis, etc. Mfg. Co., 182 Ill. App. 31; Hastings Co. v. Gray Dental Co., 108 Ill. App. 98; Kopperl v. Nagy, 37 Ill. App. 23; Schemerhorn v. Mitchell, 15 Ill. App. 418. Ia.—Church v. Crossman, 41 Iowa 373; Barrett v. Garragan, 16 Iowa 47; Taylor, etc. Co. v. Runyon, 3 Iowa 474, 480.

[a] "In 1 Black on Judgments, sec. 115, after discussing the form of a judgment the author says: 'It may, therefore, be stated as the modern rule that the form of the judgment is not material, provided that in substance it shows distinctly and not inferentially that the matter had been determined in favor of one of the litigants, or that the rights of the parties in litigation had been adjudicated. In other words, the sufficiency of the writing claimed to be a judgment should always be tested by its substance rather than its form.' " Newberry v. Dutton, 114 Va. 95, 75 S. E. 785.

[b] Litigants are not entitled to any particular form of a judgment order other than that which suffices to express the judgment of the court. Tisdale v. Davis, etc. Mfg. Co., 182 Ill. App. 31.

[c] A judgment will not be reversed because of the use of untechnical or inappropriate words. Minkhart v. Hankler, 19 Ill. 47.

Language of judgment, see infra, XI, B, 2.

5. Taylor, etc. Co. v. Runyon, 3 Iowa 474, 480; Dean v. Williams, 1 Chand. (Wis.) 22.

As to rendition and entry, see 14 STANDARD PROC. 971, et seq.

[a] Memorandum Is Not a Judgment.—The record returned by the clerk should be in due legal form, and not mere memorandums or minutes of the clerk. Wheeler v. Scott, 3 Wis. 362.

strict formality not essential to the validity of judgments of courts of inferior jurisdiction.<sup>6</sup>

Importance and Necessity of Writing. — Whatever is of sufficient importance to be the subject of judicial investigation is of sufficient importance when judicially determined, to have the decision preserved in some permanent and appropriate memorial. Hence all courts possessed of judicial functions are required to reduce their decisions to writing in some book or record kept for that purpose;<sup>7</sup> they are not to be entrusted to the memory of the officers of the court. This rule is universal.<sup>8</sup>

2. Language. — The language of a judgment usually is, "it is considered by the court that the plaintiff have and recover,"<sup>9</sup> or "that the defendant go hence without day,"<sup>10</sup> or that "the plaintiff take

This implies that the judgment is not so much the decision of the court, as the sentence of the law, pronounced and decreed by the court, after due deliberation and inquiry.'" Needham v. Gillespy, 49 Ind. 245.

[b] The word "recover" should be used (Needham v. Gillespy, 49 Ind. 245. And see City of La Porte v. Organ, 5 Ind. App. 369, 32 N. E. 342, wherein the court said that "where a money judgment is rendered the word 'recover' is the most appropriate, and should be used.") The judgment is not invalid, however, because it does not say that the party should recover. Bradley v. Clark, 3 Day (Conn.) 502.

nothing by his writ."<sup>11</sup> But strict formality in the language of a judgment is not essential.<sup>12</sup> If the language used shows that it expresses the determination of the court it will be sufficient in substance as a judgment.<sup>13</sup> Accordingly, equivalent expressions may be used without invalidating the judgment.<sup>14</sup> It is immaterial that in entering the said (defendant) do go thereof without day." People v. Severson, 113 Ill. App. 496; Spriek v. Washington County, 3 Neb. 253.

[b] "The omission to insert in the judgment that the defendant go without day, or words to that effect, does not affect the substantial rights of the plaintiff, and must, therefore, be disregarded." The Aetna Ins. Co. v. Swift, 12 Minn. 437.

[c] Where a demurrer to a plaintiff's evidence is sustained and thereafter a judgment rendered in favor of the defendant for costs of action it will be deemed a final judgment even though the entry neither refers to the defendant's "going hence without day" or to the plaintiff's taking nothing by his action nor contains any equivalent expression. *White v. [a] Where the language used was, "The plaintiff's action is hereby dismissed. Done in open court this 8th day of December, 1897," it was held that while the same was irregular and highly improper in form, it nevertheless embodied the judicial determination of the court and was sufficient in substance. McTavish v. Great Northern R. Co., 8 N. D. 333, 79 N. W. 443.

[b] "After hearing all the evidence the jurors returned a verdict for plaintiff for the sum of 48.05 and costs of suit," was held to be a good judgment. Overall v. Pero, 7 Mich. 315.

[c] Judgment for Costs.—The expression "at the cost of the plaintiff" in the dismissal of an action is a final determination with reference to the costs as well as to the action itself and is in effect an order and judgment that the plaintiff shall pay the costs. Houston v. Clark, 36 Kan. 412, 13 Pac. 739.

[d] The short entry (1) usually made, "judgment on verdict," may in a scire facias upon it, be considered as the judgment which the plaintiff was entitled to have. Shirtz v. Shirtz, 5 Watts (Pa.) 255. (2) But where the language of a purported judgment was upon the verdict of the jury as follows: "Whereupon the court enters judgment upon the finding," it was held to be no judgment. *Faulk v. 3. Date.—The date of a judgment is a material part of it,<sup>17</sup> and should be recited therein.<sup>18</sup> A judgment is not rendered void, however, simply by an omission of the date,<sup>19</sup> or an error therein;<sup>20</sup> the omission or error may be supplied or rectified by reference to the records in the case.<sup>21</sup> In giving the date of the judgment, it is una nullity. Ark.—Ware v. Pennington, 15 Ark. 226. Cal.—Hentig v. Johnson, 8 Cal. App. 221, 96 Pac. 390. Ia.—See Taylor, etc. Co. v. Runyon, 3 Iowa 474. necessary to specify the hour.<sup>22</sup> Nor is it necessary that the date should be expressed in words, figures alone being sufficient.<sup>23</sup> A judgment post dated is not valid, at least until the arrival of the date mentioned;<sup>24</sup> but it may be antedated to the time when the court directed judgment to be entered.<sup>25</sup> Where judgment is entered nunc pro tunc, it is proper to date the judgment as of the date when rendered and the fact that it is to take effect as of a certain earlier day should be mentioned therein.<sup>26</sup>

Presumption as to Date. — Under the common law all judgments were supposed to be entered as of the first day of the term at which they were rendered and in the absence of a date a presumption to that effect prevailed;<sup>27</sup> but this rule did not apply where a judgment was rendered during term in a case which was in such a condition that judgment could not have been rendered on the first day of the term.<sup>28</sup> Now, in many of the states, judgments are supposed to be entered as of the last day of the term and the presumption is in accordance therewith.<sup>29</sup>

The legislature by passing §1451 Burns 1908, §1331 R. [a] Rendition of Judgment Controls. It is a matter of no consequence whether the judge sign the judgment or not. Its rendition is the vital thing.

it was entered by the clerk will raise the presumption that it was authorized by the court.<sup>34</sup>

The clerk should attest the entry by his signature; but his failure so to do will not affect the validity of the judgment.<sup>35</sup>

Seal.—It is not necessary to the validity of a judgment that it should contain the seal of the court rendering the same.<sup>36</sup>

b. Sufficiency of Signing.—If the judgment is required to be signed, a delay in so doing does not invalidate it. It may be signed at any time before proceedings are taken on it, or before it is relied<sup>37</sup>

Simpkin v. Snyder Island Drainage Dist., 223 Ill. 67, 79 N. E. 38.

[b] The signature of the judge is merely to give the clerk a surer means of correctly entering what has been adjudged, and is not necessary to the validity of the judgment. Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478, 26 Pac. 1074, 23 Am. St. Rep. 491; Estate of Cook, 77 Cal. 220, 227, 17 Pac. 923, 19 Pac. 431.

[c] Not Essential to Probate Decree.—The signature of a judge is not essential to the validity of a judgment admitting a will to probate. Beer v. Plant (Neb.), 96 N. W. 348.

[d] At Common Law.—In French v. Pease, 10 Kan. 51, the court said: "It is claimed that at common law judgments were not valid unless they were signed; and authorities are cited to show the same. 'Signing judgment,' however, at common law did not mean such a signing of judgments as we have been considering. None of the authorities cited by counsel for plaintiff in error show that a complete judgment entry, after it was made, needed to be signed, or that it would be invalid if not signed. The words 'signing judgment,' and other similar words, as used at common law, meant a very different thing from signing the completed judgment entry. Such words simply meant the allowance or permission by the master, prothonotary, or other proper officer, to the plaintiff or defendant to have judgment entered in his favor when the cause had reached such a stage that he was entitled to have a judgment rendered in his favor. Bouv. Law Diet. tit. 'Signing Judgments;' also, tit. 'Postea;' 3 Bouv. Inst. 531, No. 3,313, §6. And the common-law authorities nearly always speak of one of the parties, generally the plaintiff, 'signing judgment,' and seldom speak of an officer 'signing judgment.' Jac. Law Diet. tit. 'Judgment;' 2 Tidd, Pr. 465, 469, 903. And the judgment here spoken of as thus 'signed' is in fact no judgment at all. It is not a completed judgment. It has not yet been entered in full. It has not yet become a part of the permanent rolls of the court. It is really only a right and a permission to take judgment, and although an execution may in some cases be issued on it, yet it cannot be used as evidence in any court of justice. 1 *Bouv. on in any way. But it must be signed in term time;<sup>38</sup> and in open court.<sup>39</sup> A premature signing of a judgment, though irregular, is not a fatal defect.<sup>40</sup> The signing of a judgment by the judge in another county than that in which the action is tried does not render it invalid,<sup>41</sup> especially when such signature is made with the consent of the parties to the action.<sup>42</sup>

The signature of the judge to the minutes of the court cannot be regarded as his signature to the final judgment.<sup>43</sup> But his signature appearing in the body of the judgment instead of at the end thereof, while irregular, will not vitiate the judgment.<sup>44</sup> It is irregular and improper for any officer to sign a judgment record in blank.<sup>45</sup> terms granting a new trial in a cause, the court cannot afterwards, and before the new trial, sign the judgment as to one of the parties defendant. Converse, etc. Co. v. Bloom, etc. Co., 20 La. Ann. 555.

38. Culver, Simonds & Co. v. Leavy, 21 La. Ann. 306, signature of judge placed to final judgment, out of term time, of no effect.

[a] Signature may be made in vacation with consent of parties, however. Rust v. Faust, 15 La. Ann. 477; Heryey & Co. v. Edmunds, 68 N. C. 243. And in Indiana, the fact that the signing was in vacation, though irregular, does not affect the validity of the judgment. Catterlin v. City of Frankfort, 87 Ind. 45, 56. See also Beitman v. Hopkins, 109 Ind. 177, 9 N. E. 720.

[b] Nunc Pro Tunc.—When the judgment has been duly entered by the clerk, the record may be signed by the judge nunc pro tunc. Weatherman v. Com., 91 Va. 796, 22 S. E. 349. See also Kent v. Fullenlove, 38 Ind. 522; Pittsburgh. C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Johnson, 52 Ind. App. 457, 468, 99 N. E. 508; State v. Wyatt, 6 La. Ann. 701.

[c] Signature at Subsequent Term. Where a special judge fails to sign a judgment at the term at which it is rendered, he may sign it at a subsequent term. Beitman v. Hopkins, 109 Ind. 177, 9 N. E. 720.

39. State v. Judges, 48 La. Ann. 905, 19 So. 932, unless there is an agreement of the parties, or their counsel, that cause may be taken under advisement and judgment signed in chambers. Compare, Cooper v. Cooper, 14 La. Ann. 665.

40. Thus, where a motion for a new trial is made, a signing of the judgment before the motion is disposed of,

does not invalidate it. See Succession of Gilmore, 12 La. Ann. 562. So also, a signing of a judgment before the time has elapsed for a new trial, does not make it final and effective, where a motion for a new trial is seasonably made and subsequently granted. State ex rel. Allen v. Judge, 35 La. Ann. 1104.

[a] As between the parties, premature signing of a judgment is not assignable in error. Opothlarholer v. Gardiner, 15 La. 512.

[b] The early practice would not permit the signing of a judgment upon a verdict until four days after the filing of the postea or rule to sign the same. Snyder v. Jenkins, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 533; Bank of Orange v. Brown, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 31; Standfast v. Chamberlaine, 3 Salk. 215, 91 Eng. Reprint 785; Reignots v. Tipping, 6 Mod. 241, 87 Eng. Reprint 990.

41. Ottillie v. Waechter, 33 Wis. 252, holding that the fact that the judgment was signed in another county did not affect its validity; the judgment is nevertheless to be considered the judgment of the county where the action was really tried and determined.

42. National Bank of Greensboro v. Gilmer, 118 N. C. 668, 24 S. E. 423.

43. Scott v. Goodrich, 24 La. Ann. 259. Compare, Sweeney v. Sweeney, 119 Ga. 76, 46 S. E. 76; Tharpe v. Crumpler, 63 Ga. 273; Sloan v. Cooper, 54 Ga. 486, holding that a judgment entered on the minutes of the day's proceedings and signed by the judge, though the judgment itself bears only the signature of the counsel, is irregular, but not void.

44. Hurley v. Hewett, 89 Me. 100, 35 Atl. 1026.

45. Frost v. Flint, 2 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 125.

When a special judge is appointed because of the disqualification of the regular judge, the judgment must be signed by the special judge,<sup>46</sup> and a signing by him in blank before entry of the judgment is not sufficient.<sup>47</sup>

Where a court is composed of more than one member, the signature of any one of them is sufficient.<sup>48</sup>

If a judge be prevented by absence, death or other cause creating a vacancy in the office from signing the judgment, it may be signed by his successor.<sup>49</sup>

C. COMPLETENESS AND CERTAINTY.<sup>50</sup> — 1. In General. — The judgment of the court should be complete in itself.<sup>51</sup> It must determine all the issues properly raised in the case, between all parties properly before the court.<sup>52</sup> It must determine the rights recovered or the penalties imposed,<sup>53</sup> and award the proper relief.<sup>54</sup> It should express with certainty and precision the determination of the court,<sup>55</sup> and must

(4) A judgment to be binding must be certain and complete in itself, without reference to anything else to ascertain its meaning. Dickerson v. Walker, 1 Ala. 48. Compare, infra, XII, B, 3 and 6.

[b] A judgment annulling a former judgment described by number of suit, names of parties, and court in which it was rendered and declaring the title of plaintiff superior to that of defendant in the land described and annulling certain muniments of title and conveyance by names and dates is sufficiently certain. *Morrison v. [a] "Judgments must be certain. Their validity and binding force must rest upon facts existing at the time of their rendition. They cannot rest upon what may or may not occur after their rendition. They take their validity from the action of the court, and not from what persons may or may not do after the court has rendered them. The decisions of the courts of other states are to the effect of the one we make. . . . The case of Strickland v. Cox, 102 N. C. 411, 9 S. E. 414, is quite like the present one. In that case it was ruled: 'Where a judge granted a judgment for plaintiff in an action for the possession of land, to be stricken out if defendant filed a proper bond in thirty days after adjournment of court, the judgment was void.' It is perhaps not necessary to go to the extent of that case, and hold the conditional portion of the judgment void, but it certainly can be held irregular, and voidable upon direct attack." The Consolidated Min., etc. Co. v. Huff, 62 Kan. 405, 63 Pac. 442.

[b] A judgment permitting a defendant to verify his answer upon the condition that if the ruling of the court giving judgment for plaintiff for want of a properly verified answer should be sustained the defendant would submit to a judgment for a certain sum, is vitiated by the condition. Hinton v. Life Ins. Co., 116 N. C. 22, 21 S. E. 209.

[c] Invalid Condition Does Not Affect Judgment.—Where the judge signed a judgment, but directed the clerk to strike it out if a bond was filed in a specified time it was held that the judgment was valid but that the order to strike it out on the condition named was invalid. Hopkins v. Bowers, 111 N. C. 175, 16 S. E. 1, distinguishing Strickland v. Cox, 102 N. C. 411, 9 S. E. 414, wherein the judgment itself was conditional "to be stricken out if," etc., and hence was held invalid.

68. Necessity for judgment by de-

1. Conformity to Process.—The judgment rendered in a case must be in conformity with the writ or summons.<sup>69</sup> A judgment for an amount greater than that named in the ad damnum in the writ is erroneous,<sup>70</sup> but not void.<sup>71</sup> Where it is required that the amount of the demand be specified in or endorsed on the process,<sup>72</sup> the judgment, where the defendant fails to appear, cannot be rendered for an amount exceeding the amount stated in or endorsed on the process.<sup>73</sup> An endorsement which is made in a case where it is not required will fault conforming to pleadings and process, see supra, V, J, 4.

Amendment of judgment to conform to verdict, findings, and pleadings, see infra, XIII, A, 3, b, (VII).

69. Hughes v. Union Ins. Co., 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 294, 5 L. ed. 620.

[a] A judgment must be responsive to the writ, and must, therefore, either be given for the whole sum demanded or exhibit the cause why it is given for a less sum, otherwise, non constat, but the difference still remains due. Hughes v. Union Ins. Co., 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 294, 310, 5 L. ed. 620.

[b] A variance (1) in the Christian name of a defendant, between the writ and declaration on the one hand and the verdict and judgment on the other is fatal. Sweazy v. Nettles, 2 Mo. 6. (2) But a summons against Sue Dixon is sufficient to sustain a judgment against Sue R. Dixon, unless it is made to appear that Sue Dixon and Sue R. Dixon are different persons. Dixon v. Melton, 137 Ky. 689, 126 S. W. 358.

[c] Where suit is brought against a person by the name of John Cox, service is had on James Cox, and judgment is rendered against J. Cox, there is error unless it is shown in the record that the person served was the person sued. Sutter v. Cox, 6 Cal. 415. Designation of parties generally, see infra, XI, F.

[a] Where Action Is Referred. After the action together with other claims against the defendant has been referred to arbitrators under a rule of court, it is not error to render a judgment for an amount exceeding the ad damnum in the writ. Day v. Berkshire Woollen Co., 1 Gray (Mass.) 420.

[b] Under a statute, providing that if there be a plea of payment with notice of set-off and if it shall appear that any part of the debt has been paid, it shall be the duty of the jury to discount so much, and find a verdict for the balance, for which the plaintiff shall have judgment, if there had been a payment to the amount of one dollar, the jury must find the balance due, and that judgment must be rendered accordingly although the balance far exceeds the writ. The same course is to be pursued if there is a finding that no payment has been made. Smock v. Warford, 4 N. J. L. 306.

[c] Cure of Error.—The error in rendering judgment for more than is laid in the writ is not cured by crediting the excess on the execution. Robinet v. Morris' Admrs., Hard. (Ky.) 93.

[d] Omission of Ad Damnum.—Where the ad damnum of a writ is omitted or other inconsistencies appear therein and a judgment is rendered for a certain sum, the judgment is insufficient. Bickford v. Flannery, 70 Me. 106.

71. Smith v. Keen, 26 Me. 411; Chaffee v. Hooper, 54 Vt. 513.

72. See the title "Process."

73. Cal.—Lamping v. Hyatt, 27 Cal. 99; Lattimer v. Ryan, 20 Cal. 628. Ill.—Brown v. Phillips, 6 Ill. App. 250. Neb.—Erek v. Omaha Nat. Bank, 43 Neb. 613, 62 N. W. 67; *Cleveland Cop. See also supra, V, J, 4. But see Hopper v. Steelman, 3 N. J. L. 907.

[a] The court under this statute is without jurisdiction to render judgment against a defendant on his default for an amount greater than that endorsed on the summons. The error in rendering judgment for a greater limit the judgment to what is claimed in the notice.<sup>74</sup> A judgment, however, exceeding the amount specified in the process is proper, if the excess is for interest.<sup>75</sup> If because of negligence or clerical error a summons is issued for less than the damages laid in the declaration, a judgment exceeding the amount stated in the summons but within the declaration will be upheld on error.<sup>76</sup>

Where the defendant appears and answers to the merits, the fact that the judgment exceeds the amount endorsed on the summons is unimportant.<sup>77</sup>

2. Conformity to Pleadings and Evidence.—a. General Rule. Judgments must be secundum allegata et probata, or in other words, judgments rendered must be in accordance with both the pleadings and the evidence.<sup>78</sup> This rule, though one of the common law, obtains under the codes also, although it may not be so strictly applied.<sup>79</sup> amount cannot be cured by an offer to remit. American Audit Co. v. Miller, 11 Ohio Cir. Ct. (N. S.) 368.

[b] Where the face of the summons specifies the rate of interest demanded, as ten per cent, and the indorsement on the summons recites that judgment on default would be taken for a certain sum with interest, without specifying the rate, it is not prejudicial error to resort to the face of the summons to determine the rate of interest, and a judgment for interest in excess of seven per cent but less than ten per cent will be upheld. McKibben v. Harris, 54 Neb. 520, 74 N. W. 952.

[c] Statute Is Mandatory.—A statute providing that if the defendant fails to appear judgment shall not be rendered for a larger amount than that endorsed on the summons is mandatory. Cleveland Co-op. Stove Co. v. Grimes, 9 Neb. 123, 2 N. W. 345.

74. Watson v. McCartney, 1 Neb. 131, an endorsement which does not indicate all the relief prayed for is deceptive and calculated to mislead a defendant.

75. Ill.—Elliott v. Knight, 64 Ill. App. 87, where the excess is for less than the interest which accrued after suit brought. See Welch v. Karstens, 60 Ill. 117; Dowling v. Stewart, 4 Ill. 193. Miss.—Lynch v. Comrs. of the Sinking Fund, 4 How. 377. Pa.—Graff v. Graybill, 1 Watts 428.

[a] On a summons containing a notice that the plaintiff will take judgment for a specified sum "with interest in addition thereto," a judgment for the sum with interest may be rendered, such a summons being proper under the code. DeWitt v. Swift, 3 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 280.

79. Under the codes, "the courts

In accordance with this rule, judgments based upon allegations in the pleadings which are not sustained by the proof are erroneous.<sup>80</sup> And judgments based upon facts found which are not involved in the issues raised by the pleadings,<sup>81</sup> or which are in substantial variance from are more liberal than formerly in making or allowing amendments of pleadings, and when the substantial rights of the parties have been fairly tried, trifling variances are disregarded, and judgment given according to the real right of the case as established. . . . This right of disregarding variances proceeds upon the ground, that the substantial rights of the parties are set up in the pleadings and section 169 forbids amendments where the party will be misled or surprised. But the whole scope of these provisions of the code, in respect to pleadings and amendments thereof, implies that all the material allegations of the plaintiff or defendant shall be spread upon the record, shall be actually inserted in the pleadings, and when variances are disregarded, it is upon the principle that they may be amended nunc pro tunc at the trial and the court will so order to perfect the record so that it shall show the question really litigated and decided. The principle still remains that the judgment to be rendered by any court must be secundum allegata et probata." Wright v. Delafield, 25 N. Y. 266.

[a] Under a statute providing that judgments may be given for or against one or more of several plaintiffs, and for or against one or more of several defendants, and that the court may determine the ultimate rights of the parties as between themselves and may grant to the defendant any relief to which he may be entitled, judgments must be warranted by and based upon the allegations of the complaint and answer as much as was ever the case in the courts of law and equity. Wright v. Delafield, 25 N. Y. 266.

[a] Under a statute making railroad companies responsible in damages for property injured by fire caused by their engines without proof of negligence, a party may recover without proof of negligence although he has alleged negligence, for by the statement of more than is required, he does not forfeit his right to recover upon the facts he is required to and did state. *Campbell v. However strongly a plaintiff may have planted himself upon the theory that his action is founded on tort, he is still entitled to claim a judgment upon the theory of contract; and if the law is so that the plaintiff is entitled, upon the facts alleged and proved, to a judgment, it is the duty of the court to render that judgment, although the cause proved should be classed as one founded on contract, and the plaintiff has never ceased to claim that it is founded on tort."

[a] "A judgment must be in accord with the pleadings and record as a whole. It is not rendered on the petition and answer only, but on the plaintiff's pleading, those of the defendant, and the findings of the court. Although the judgment would be sustained by the petition and answer, it is erroneous if the plaintiff's pleadings, taken together, show that she is not entitled to recover, unless the defect is supplied in the pleadings of the defendant." Solt v. Anderson, 67 Neb. 103, 93 N. W. 205.

[b] Unessential allegations in the petition may be disregarded and judgment rendered on the remainder. Connell v. Brumback, 18 Ohio Cir. Ct. 502, 10 Ohio Cir. Dec. 149.

[c] The rendition of judgment upon a contract as pleaded in the answer, instead of on the contract in the complaint is not error. Ach v. Carter, 21 Wash. 140, 57 Pac. 344.

[d] In determining whether a complaint contains averments sufficient to support a judgment, every intendment will be indulged in favor of the judgment and all doubts of construction will be indulged in support thereof. San Gabriel Valley Bank v. L. V. Town Co., 4 Cal. App. 630, 89 Pac. 360. Construction of judgments generally, see infra, XII, B.

[e] Presumption.—"In the absence of the pleadings or averment as to their contents, it ought to be assumed that they were broad enough to authorize the relief given by the judgment, notwithstanding the allegation here [in an application invoking the inherent power of a court to correct its judgment] of the conclusion that they were not." *Indiana, etc. R. Judgment will not be a fatal error.<sup>80</sup>

A judgment in favor of a party must accord with and be warranted by his pleadings.<sup>81</sup> The plaintiff's right to recover is limited to the facts alleged in his pleading,<sup>81</sup> or as is sometimes stated, a plaintiff must recover upon the cause of action alleged in his complaint.<sup>82</sup>

ago.—Where a judgment gave a lien on real property as well as personal and the declaration claimed a lien on personal property only, this recital in the judgment was treated as surplusage and did not affect the validity of the judgment. Conlin v. Lamont Iron Co., 116 Mich. 626, 74 N. W. 1004.

[h] In Louisiana, to prevent delay and to save costs, although a petitioner may have mistaken the ground of the defendant's liability, judgment will be rendered for him. Russell v. Cash, 2 La. 185. See also Peterson v. Short, 15 La. 159.

This rule is not so strictly applied to defendants, as they are sometimes allowed the benefit of defenses which they did not raise in their pleadings,<sup>93</sup> but a judgment cannot be given a demurrant on a ground different from that stated in his demurrer.<sup>94</sup>

A judgment upon a finding which is contrary to an admission in the pleadings is erroneous.<sup>95</sup>

(III.) As to Form of Action.<sup>3</sup> — The judgment should conform to the pleadings with respect to the form of the action shown thereby.<sup>4</sup> Therefore a money judgment cannot be rendered upon a declaration or complaint in unlawful detainer,<sup>5</sup> or detainee.<sup>6</sup> Nor may a judgment in ejectment be rendered upon a complaint in assumpsit.<sup>7</sup> And in an action of debt, the rendition of a judgment as in assumpsit is erroneous;<sup>8</sup> but the rendition of a judgment for damages upon a

[a] A judgment entered by the court confessedly outside the issues rests upon the same footing as a judgment in which the subject-matter is entirely foreign to the jurisdiction conferred upon the court. Lincoln Nat. Bank v. Virgin, 36 Neb. 735, 55 N. W. 218.

[b] A judgment which cannot be rendered under a complaint is as invalid as a judgment on a complaint which fails to state the cause of action. Kirkland v. Pilcher, 174 Ala. 170, 57 So. 46.

Supp. 933. Tenn.—Wright v. Durrett, 52 S. W. 710. Tex.—Williamson v. Wright, 1 Tex. Unrep. Cas. 711.

See generally the title "Variance and Failure of Proof."

[a] "Evidence of facts or stipulations as to the facts of a case, cannot make the case broader than it appears by allegation, nor can a party by mere force of facts admitted or proven become entitled to relief to which he would not have been entitled had his case been resisted only by general demurrer interposed to the pleadings upon which he relies." Hicks v. Murray, 43 Cal. 515.

99. Campbell v. Consalus, 25 N. Y. 613.

1. Acquiescence in trial of a new and different cause of action may be by silence or conduct. Reed v. McConnell, 133 N. Y. 425, 31 N. E. 22.

[a] Consent Implied.—"In the absence of amended pleading or of stipulation, the court of review must infer the consent to try issues from the evidence offered upon the one side, and the absence of objections or the character of objections, if any are made upon the other side." Frear v. Sweet, 118 N. Y. 454, 458, 23 N. E. 910.

Where the judgment is by agreement, see 14 STANDARD PROC. 919.

2. Where a party approves a form of judgment submitted to him, he waives a defect that the judgment is broader than the issues. National Circle Co. v. Hines, 83 Conn. 676, 92 Atl. 401.

3. Conformity as to theory of action, see supra, XI, D, 2, a.

4. See the cases generally throughout this section.

[a] In an action upon a covenant for a liquidated sum, the rendition of a judgment for the sum and interest declaring it to be "the debt in the declaration" instead of putting the principal and interest together and calling it damages is not reversible error. Jenkins v. Yeates, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 48.

[b] Under a statute relating to bonds dispensing with a formal judgment for the penalty and authorizing the court to give a judgment for what is due in equity and good conscience, a judgment for damages is proper. Sinclair v. Gadecomb, 1 Vt. 22.

5. Kirkland v. Pilcher, 174 Ala. 170, 57 So. 46.

As to judgment in debt generally, see 6 STANDARD PROC. 492.

declaration in debt, although technically an error<sup>9</sup> is not an error affecting the validity of the judgment.<sup>10</sup>

In code states, this rule has been modified and the courts will render such judgment as the evidence and pleadings show the party entitled to, regardless of the form of action.<sup>11</sup> But even under the code practice if a party brings an equitable action he must maintain it upon equitable grounds or fail, even though he may prove a good legal action,<sup>12</sup> for to hold otherwise would be in violation of the rule

[a] But if the judgment entered as in assumpsit binds the defendant to pay no more than an accurate judgment in debt would have done, it will not be reversed merely because in assumpsit. Sandford v. Richardson, 1 Ala. 182; Carroll v. Meeks, 3 Port. 226.

[b] Where the verdict and judgment on a declaration in debt are for "rent due," as the verdict and judgment seem to exclude interest, they must have been for the debt alone and will be sustained. Brown v. Keller, 38 Ill. 63.

9. Bowden v. Bowden, 75 Ill. 111; Rockford, R. I. & St. L. R. Co. v. Steele, 69 Ill. 253; Jones v. Lloyd, 1 Ill. 225; Independent Order v. Stahl, 64 Ill. App. 314; Bradford v. Curlee, 41 Miss. 558.

10. Bradford v. Curlee, 41 Miss. 558 (the error is no ground of reversal); Smith v. Nolen, 2 How. (Miss.) 755.

[a] The objection is merely technical and the judgment will not be reversed unless the question was raised in the trial court. Bowden v. Bowden, 75 Ill. 111. To same effect see Rockford, R. I. & St. L. R. Co. v. Steele, 69 Ill. 253; Independent Order v. Stahl, 64 Ill. App. 314.

[a] The rights of a party are not to be determined by the label which he places upon his petition, but upon the facts pleaded. Although a party may have erroneously alleged a conversion of money he may recover for money had and received if the facts pleaded and proved warrant it. Lee v. Coon Rapids Nat. Bank, 166 Iowa 242, 144 N. W. 630.

12. Brinkerhoff v. Bostwick, 105 N. Y. 567, 12 N. E. 58; Sternberger v. McGovern, 56 N. Y. 12; Bradley v. Aldrich, 40 N. Y. 504; Heywood v. Buffalo, 14 N. Y. 534; Dalton v. Vanderveer, 31 Abb. N. C. 430, 23 Civ. Pro. 443, 8 Misc. 484; Mann v. Fairchild, 41 N. Y. 106, 111.

[a] Under the code, actions at law and suits in equity are in fact retained. The pleader need not state whether his action is at law or in equity, but he is only required to state the facts constituting his cause of action, and if the facts justify a recovery at law, a judgment granting such relief will be granted. Likewise if the facts justify a recovery in equity a judgment will be rendered granting such relief. But the judgment in every case must be warranted by the facts stated. Stevens v. New York, 84 N. Y. 296, 304.

[b] The rule, that when equity has obtained jurisdiction of the parties and subject-matter of the action, it may adapt the relief to the exigencies of the case, even to rendering a personal judgment in order to prevent a failure of justice, applies when the general basis of fact upon which equitable relief was sought has been made out, but for some reason it becomes impracticable to grant such relief, or when the relief would be insufficient. It does not apply to a case where it appears there was never any ground for equitable relief whatever but the sole remedy was an action at law. Dudley v. Third Order St. Francis, 138 N. Y. 451, 34 N. E. 281.

[c] Where Facts Are Insufficient to Obtain Equitable Relief.—But where a party proceeds upon the theory that that the complainant must recover upon the cause of action alleged.<sup>13</sup>

(IV.) As to Parties.<sup>14</sup> — (A.) IN GENERAL. — The judgment must correspond to the pleading as to the parties for and against whom it is rendered.<sup>15</sup> A judgment in favor of or against persons not parties to the action is erroneous.<sup>16</sup> In accordance with the rule restricting a party to the relief sought, a judgment against a party against whom a judgment is not asked is erroneous.<sup>17</sup> And a general judgment cannot be rendered against "defendants" where different relief is asked against different defendants.<sup>18</sup>

(B.) CONFORMITY AS TO CAPACITY. — The judgment must conform to the pleadings as to the capacity in which the parties sue and are sued.<sup>19</sup> Where a person sues or is sued in his individual capacity the court cannot render a judgment for or against him in a representative capacity,<sup>20</sup> and conversely, where he sues or is sued in a representative capacity upon a cause of action for or against him as such, a judgment for or against him as an individual is improper.<sup>21</sup> But a person his relief is in equity but fails to state sufficient facts to entitle him to equitable relief, he will be given the relief to which he appears to be entitled. If the plaintiff is entitled to a money judgment, a money judgment will be rendered. Donovan v. McDevitt, 36 Mont. 61, 92 Pac. 49.

13. Anderson v. Chilson, 8 S. D. 64, 65 N. W. 435.

14. Designation of parties and additions, see infra, XI, F.

15. A complaint alleging the performance of services for defendant and another, and a promise by the defendant to pay therefor supports a judgment against the defendant. Delafield v. San Francisco, etc. R. Co., 107 Cal. xvii, 40 Pac. 958.

[a] Variance as to Name. — That the defendant company is named as a "railroad" company in the complaint and a "railway" company in the judgment is not a material variance. St. Louis, etc. Ry. Co. v. State, 55 Ark. 200, 17 S. W. 806. See also Bole v. Sands & Maxwell Lumber Co., 77 Mich. 239, 43 N. W. 873.

[b] A party may be estopped to object to a variance in the name of the party in whose favor a judgment is rendered, as where he attempts by petition to set it aside on other grounds. Glover v. Cox, 137 Ga. 684, 73 S. E. 1068.

16. See 14 STANDARD PROC. 782.

[a] The amendment of pleadings so as to leave out some of the parties defendant operates as a discontinuance as to them, but the entitling of the judgment as against them is merely a clerical misprision. It is only the name given to designate the cause and is of no effect against the omitted defendants. The error is unimportant. Browner v. Davis, 15 Cal. 9.

[a] But when the plaintiff amends his pleading charging a defendant as an individual, and complains of him both as an individual and in his representative capacity, the court has authority to render judgment against him in both capacities. Pryor v. Krause (Tex. Civ. App.), 168 S. W. 498.

21. Austin v. Munroe, 47 N. Y. 360, distinguished in Wick v. Jewett, 9 N. Y. St. 477.

[a] Where an administrator or executor is sued in his representative who sues in a representative capacity, such as executor or administrator, and sets forth a cause of action accruing to him in his own right may recover a judgment in his individual capacity and the words describing the capacity in which he sues will be considered mere description of the person, and not invalidate the judgment.<sup>22</sup>

(V.) As to Description of Property.<sup>23</sup> — The description of the property in the judgment should follow the description in the complaint.<sup>24</sup> A slight variance between the description in the judgment and that in the declaration or complaint will not invalidate the judgment, however.<sup>25</sup> But a material variance is cause for reversal.<sup>26</sup>

(VI.) As to Relief.<sup>27</sup> — (A.) IN GENERAL. — The rule that judgments must conform to the pleadings applies to the relief granted.<sup>28</sup> And

[a] A plaintiff is entitled to relief to the extent that the averments of his petition are sustained by the proof (Toy v. McHugh, 62 Neb. 820, 87 N. W. 1059); but relief beyond that authorized by the facts alleged cannot be granted. See 6 STANDARD PROC. 715.

[b] Where in obedience to an order of the appellate court directing a court to render judgment as prayed for in as a general rule a judgment granting relief which has not been asked for by the party is erroneous.<sup>29</sup> It is true that under a prayer for general relief, the court may render a judgment granting the relief the parties are entitled to under the pleadings and proofs.<sup>30</sup>

the answer, the court rendered judgment as prayed for, except for the addition of the order, "And said defendant is entitled to and shall have any appropriate process of this court to enforce said judgment hereby given, and each and every part thereof," there is no error. White v. Wise, 1 Cal. App. xviii, 81 Pac. 664.

[c] The consent of the parties to the rendition of a judgment exceeding the cause of action stated in the complaint is as ineffectual to confer authority upon the court to render it, as if there had been no cause of action stated in the complaint. Rosebrough v. Ansley, 35 Ohio St. 107.

[d] To What Cases Rule Applies. The rule requiring the recovery to be secundum allegata et probata obtains in all cases where it does not appear that substituted issues were litigated on the trial. Riker v. Curtis, 10 Misc. 125, 30 N. Y. Supp. 940.

[e] In Replevin.—A judgment of retorno habendum cannot be had in replevin where the plea is non cepit and the verdict is "not guilty," as this plea only puts in issue the taking of the property. Rohe v. Pease, 189 Ill. 207, 59 N. E. 520. See generally the title "Replevin."

See also 6 STANDARD PROC. 719; and generally the title "Prayer."

[a] It is not the duty of a court to extend to a party a real or supposed benefit which he manifests no desire to obtain. Nevada County & S. C. Co. v. Kidd, 37 Cal. 282, 304; Morrison v. Bowman, 29 Cal. 337, 354.

[b] Relief cannot be granted by a judgment which is not specifically prayed for or within the contemplation of a prayer for general relief. Walker v. Walker, 93 Iowa 643, 61 N. W. 930.

[c] "When the plaintiff by the prayer of the petition asks a particular recovery or special relief, which is consistent with the case stated, and there is no prayer for general relief, the special prayer must be regarded as evidencing the nature and object of the suit and in this respect as giving character to it; and the plaintiff will not in general be entitled to a different relief from that which he asked, for the presumption is that the plaintiff best knows the nature of his case and the injury he has sustained." Hogan v. Kellum, 13 Tex. 396, quoted and applied in City of Houston v. Emery's Sons, 76 Tex. 282, 13 S. W. 264.

[d] As to judgment for more land than claimed in an action of forcible entry and detainer, see 8 STANDARD PROC. 1125.

[e] Need Not Follow Exact Language of Prayer.—It is not necessary that a decree should follow the exact language of the prayer for relief. It is sufficient if it substantially grants the relief prayed for. Johnson-Maakestad v. Johnson, 44 Ill. App. 593; Little v. White, 3 Ind. 544.

[f] Where a petition justifies it, relief according to the equities of the case will be granted although somewhat different than the specific relief sought. Rutherford v. Sample, 186 Mo. App. 469, 171 S. W. 578.

Application of Rule to Defendants. — This rule applies to judgments for defendants as well as plaintiffs.<sup>31</sup> An affirmative judgment cannot be rendered for a defendant who does not pray for it, as this would be in clear conflict with the general rule requiring judgments to be secundum allegata et probata.<sup>32</sup>

(B.) CONFORMITY AS TO AMOUNT.<sup>33</sup> — The amount for which a judgment is rendered must be supported by the pleadings.<sup>34</sup> It is a general rule, irrespective of the form of the action, that a plaintiff can

[b] A judgment in accordance with the prayer of a petition may be rendered although the amount thereof exceeds the ad damnum. Sanders v. City Nat. Bank (Tex.), 12 S. W. 110.

[c] Ad Damnum Held Surplusage. Under a statute providing that the complaint should conclude with a demand for relief, it was held, in French v. Davis, 38 Miss. 218, that the statement of damage in the conclusion of the complaint, viz., "that the said defendant has not paid the said sums of money, etc., 'to the damage of the plaintiff two hundred dollars, and therefore,' " etc., is surplusage and the rendition of judgment for more than the amount stated in the conclusion is not error.

[d] Judgment by Confession for Excessive Amount.—A declaration in a certain amount cannot be the basis of a judgment for a greater amount although the defendant confessed judgment for the greater amount. Lester v. Cloud, 67 Ga. 770.

[e] Erroneous Division of the Sums Claimed.—Where the aggregate amount of the judgment is for less than the aggregate claimed in the declaration, the judgment will not be reversed for any technical error in the division of the sum, as where judgment was entered for less than the amount of the debt proper, and for more than the damages claimed, the aggregate being less than the amount claimed in the declaration. *Boardman v. [a] Similar to Rule in Equity.—The code in this section adheres very closely to the rules in equity; that is to say, in cases of default the relief is confined to the relief demanded in the complaint, as was the rule under a prayer for special relief in equity, while in the other case it is extended to granting relief similar to that granted under a prayer for general relief in the chancery courts. Johnson v. Polhemus, 99 Cal. 240, 33 Pac. 908. To same effect Knight v. Houghtalling, 85 N. C. 17, 34.

[b] Under such provisions, the prayer for relief is never conclusive. A party is entitled to such relief as the evidence under the pleadings represents. Gray v. Heinze, 82 Misc. 618, 144 N. Y. Supp. 1045.

[c] This section does not warrant the court in disappointing the expectation and claims of both parties so far as the case is equitable in nature, by denying the plaintiff's claim, and then selecting of facts found some of which may warrant an action for damages, which the plaintiff has neither alleged nor proved, and then order an assessment by a referee, and judgment for the damages assessed. Bradley v. Aldrich, 40 N. Y. 504, 100 Am. Dec. 528.

[d] "The first and principal complaint is that the court exceeded its authority in reforming the lease, when the only relief sought was its cancellation. It is insisted that the prayer of the petition measured the power of the court in rendering judgment. While the code requires that the plaintiff shall demand the relief to which he supposes himself to be entitled, the relief which the court may grant him depends upon the facts alleged in the petition rather than upon the arbitrary demand which he may make in his prayer. . . . The prayer of a pleading is sometimes used to explain the averments that precede it, and a party who is given no more than he demands may not be in a position to complain, but, so far as the court is concerned, it is the case made by the pleadings and the facts

proved, and not the prayer of the party, which determines the measure of relief which the court may award." Hardy v. La Dow, 72 Kan. 174, 83 Pac. 401 (the complaint in this case concluded with a prayer for general relief, however). But see Atchison, etc. R. Co. v. Combs, 25 Kan. 729.

[a] The judgment rendered where no answer is filed must be of the character prayed for in the complaint. Where a several judgment is asked, the rendition of a joint judgment is erroneous, as such a judgment is not of the character of that demanded. Russell v. Shurtleff, 28 Colo. 414, 65 Pac. 27. As to joint and several or separate judgments generally, see infra, XI, K, 3.

[b] General Prayer as a Demand. "The relief which the statute contemplates shall be granted in the absence of an answer is the relief demanded.

A general prayer is not such a demand." Russell v. Shurtleff, 28 Colo. 414, 65 Pac. 27.

[c] Where One of Several Defendants Answers.—Where there are two defendants, one of whom answered and one did not, and the complaint did not demand a judgment including interest on the debt alleged to be due, a judgment allowing interest is, to that extent erroneous. Pickett v. Handy, 9 Colo. App. 357, 48 Pac. 820.

[d] Where there is no prayer for damages, and the damages are not stated in the complaint, a default judgment for damages is erroneous. Pittsburgh Coal Min. Co. v. Greenwood, 39 Cal. 71.

[e] Judgment on Petition Amended After Constructive Service.—Where a non-resident defendant is brought into court by an order of publication and does not appear, the plaintiff cannot have any other or different relief than that prayed for. If, after publication, he amend his petition and take a different judgment from that prayed for originally, the judgment is void. After service by publication the defendant cannot be held to have any notice of amendments to the petition. Janney v. Spedden, 38 Mo. 395.

[f] If the demand in the complaint is for unliquidated damages, a judgment by default for a sum certain is irregular and will be set aside in a proper proceeding. White v. Snow, 71 N. C. 232.

[g] A judgment by default (1) that the amount be collected in gold coin, exceeds the relief prayed for where the complaint prays for so much money without specifying the kind of money and is erroneous under a statute limiting judgments on default to the relief prayed for. Lamping & Co. v. Hyatt, 27 Cal. 99; Belford v. Woodward, 158 Ill. 122, 133, 41 N. E. 1097. See also Watson v. San Francisco, etc. R. Co., 50 Cal. 523, followed in Chamberlin v. Vance, 51 Cal. 75, 85. (2) In a collateral proceeding the judgment will be held valid as to the matter within the jurisdiction of the court, and void as to the direction that the payment be made in gold coin. Belford v. Woodward, 158 Ill. 122, 134, 41 N. E. 1097.

[h] In Kentucky, (1) the statute reads "If no defense be made, the

the facts alleged show that he is entitled to other relief,<sup>49</sup> and therefore, the amount of the plaintiff's recovery is limited to the amount prayed for.<sup>50</sup>

Where there is an answer the relief granted under this provision must be consistent with the case made by the complaint or petition,<sup>51</sup> but the demand for relief is generally wholly immaterial in a contested case,<sup>52</sup> although it may sometimes determine the relief that may be accorded;<sup>53</sup> and it has been held that an entirely different relief defendant cannot have judgment for any relief not specifically demanded; but if defense be made, he may have judgment for other relief under a prayer therefor." Code, §90; Kentucky Liquor Co. v. Greenbaum, 150 Ky. 569, 150 S. W. 805; Board of Sinking Fund Comrs. v. Mason & Foard Co., 19 Ky. L. Rep. 771, 41 S. W. 548. (2) Under this statute, a personal judgment cannot be granted under a prayer for all proper relief where the defendant asserted a claim to the homestead, as such is not a defense to the action. Hansford v. Holden, 13 Bush (Ky.) 210. (3) Nor is a demurrer a defense within the meaning of this statute. Board of Sinking Fund Comrs. v. Mason & Foard Co., 19 Ky. L. Rep. 771, 41 S. W. 548.

[a] The reason of the rule limiting the recovery in default cases to the amount of the prayer of relief is obvious. "The defendant by his default admits the justice of the claim, and thus consents that judgment be taken against him for what is prayed for in the first instance; whereas, if a greater or a different relief were demanded, he may appear and contest the claim as unjust and unreasonable." Burling v. Goodman, 1 Nev. 314, quoted and followed in Lowe v. Turner, 1 Idaho 107.

[b] When Interest Should Begin To Run.—A default judgment upon a complaint praying judgment in a specific sum and that the judgment should bear interest is erroneous in awarding interest as from the date of the filing of the complaint. The interest should run from the date of the entry of judgment. Gage v. Rogers, 20 Cal. 91.

[a] Relief Upon Reply.—A plaintiff cannot obtain relief upon the allegations made in the reply wholly different from that demanded in the complaint, as it is not the office of a reply to state a cause of action. Marder, Luse & Co. v. Wright, 70 Iowa 42, 29 N. W. 799.

[a] The fact that the particular relief granted is not specifically prayed for is immaterial in a contested case. Triggs v. Jones, 46 Minn. 277, 48 N. W. 1113.

53. Rush v. Brown, 101 Mo. 586, 14 S. W. 735.

[a] Speaking of the holding that the prayer may sometimes determine the relief that may be accorded, the court in Bick v. Dixon, 148 Mo. App. 703, 129 S. W. 254, said that it understood that this is so, when the petition states facts consistent with the prayer for relief, which is specific and when to grant relief not prayed for and plainly not contemplated by the plaintiff in stating his case, would surprise the defendant and deprive him of some right of procedure he is entitled to; as, where the entire theory of the case was for relief in equity and that relief was prayed, though relief at law might be consistent with the facts alleged, it will not be given.

[b] The word "conformity" as used herein means agreement—congruity with something else—and its use is intended to convey the idea that the judgment should carry out the intent of the verdict. Eason v. Miller & Kelly, 15 S. C. 194.

[d] Where the jury assessed the damages at a certain amount in gold coin or a certain amount in legal tender notes and the judgment was entered for the latter sum, it was held that the judgment did not follow the verdict. Knox v. Gerhauser, 3 Mont. 267.

[e] In an action on a bond in which the complaint asks actual and exemplary damages from the principal and sureties, and the verdict follows the complaint and is general, the rendition of a judgment for exemplary damages against the principal alone is proper as under the facts the sureties were not liable for exemplary damages. "We cannot say the judgment should have been rendered for exemplary damages against the sureties upon the ground that the verdict was general and then reverse the judgment because the sureties could not be made so liable." Emerson, Talcott & Co. v. Skidmore, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 641, 25 S. W. 671; Willard v. Archer, 63 Cal. 33.

[g] But under a statute, providing that where the verdict is special, the court shall render a proper judgment, if data is given in a special verdict or special finding of facts, from which it clearly appears that the amount assessed by the jury is the result of error in computation or grows out of some omission, the proper judgment to be rendered by the court would be the amount which a correct computation made from the data furnished would indicate. Dawson v. Shirk, 102 Ind. 181, 1 N. E. 292.

[h] Where the finding by the court is erroneous due to miscalculation of the amount due, a judgment for the proper amount is not erroneous. Houston v. Newsome, 82 Tex. 75, 17 S. W. 603.

Amendment of judgment as to design-

The designation of parties in a judgment as the "heirs" of a certain person is sufficient, if it can be made certain by reference to the record of the case.<sup>1</sup> In a suit in the name of one for the use of another, a judgment which is entered in favor of the beneficiary alone is erroneous;<sup>2</sup> but a mere nominal or unnecessary party to an action should not be included in the judgment.<sup>3</sup> And in such a case a judgment against "the defendants" generally will not be reversed.<sup>4</sup>

Designation in the Alternative.—A judgment against two or more parties in the alternative is a nullity.<sup>5</sup>

2. Fictitious or Wrong Name.—A defendant may be sued by a fictitious name and if the pleadings are amended by inserting his true name a judgment rendered thereon is valid.<sup>6</sup> If a party is sued by a wrong name and service is made on the party intended to be sued and he fails to appear and plead the misnomer in abatement, and suffers judgment to be obtained by default against him in the erroneous name, he is concluded by such judgment.<sup>7</sup>

3. Designation as Plaintiff or Defendant.—The parties may be designated generally as "plaintiffs" or "defendants," and reference may be had to the pleadings to properly identify them; such a judgment will be held to comprise all those who are made parties as such nation of parties, see infra, XIII, A, 3, b, (III).

[c] Defect Cured by Reference to Pleadings.—While it is best that a judgment should be so complete within itself that the officer issuing the process to enforce it can see at a glance the parties for and against whom such process is to be issued yet, if the parties for and against whom it is rendered are so referred to therein as that reference to its caption or the pleadings or process and proceedings in the action will make certain the names of the parties thus referred to it is sufficient. Every judgment may be construed and aided by the entire record. Taylor v. Branham & Co., 35 Fla. 297, 17 So. 552, 48 Am. St. Rep. 249, 39 L. R. A. 362.

Lenfesty*, 14 Ind. 4.

[e] Where the verdict is in favor of a part of the defendants and against the others, a judgment rendered against "the defendants" generally will not be erroneous. It will be construed with reference to the verdict upon which it is rendered and it will be held to be against only those defendants against whom verdict was given. Lamar v. Williams, 39 Miss. 342.

[f] The Name of One Defendant Omitted.—Where judgment is rendered against "the defendants," naming two of them, but omitting the name of the third, the judgment is still good against the unnamed defendant, if the record shows that the court had jurisdiction of him. *Coolbaugh v. [b] Business Name.—Where a party is in the habit of signing checks and doing business at other places by the initials of his name, these initials will be treated as his business name and a judgment recovered against him by that name is not void. Oakley v. Pegler, 30 Neb. 628, 46 N. W. 920.

[a] Where one is personally liable in an action brought against him, the description of him in the judgment "as tax-collector" will not vitiate the judgment, the words quoted being merely descriptive of the person, and having no legal effect otherwise. Stewart v. Atlanta Beef Co., 93 Ga. 12, 18 S. E. 981.

[b] The word "curator" annexed to the name of a defendant against whom a decree is rendered is descriptive merely, and the decree is a personal one, although there be superadded a direction to the defendant "as curator" to collect and apply certain funds to its payment. *Fulkerson v. some states it is unnecessary to state the costs separately, but they are included in the judgment;<sup>37</sup> but where costs follow as an incident to the judgment they should not be included therein and it is error so to do.<sup>38</sup>

Where an allowance is made for an attorney's fee under statute, the amount of such fee should be stated separately, and kept distinct from the amount of the judgment proper.<sup>39</sup>

c. Interest.—(I.) On the Obligation.—The exact amount of interest should be computed and included in the judgment;<sup>40</sup> it is bad practice to leave undetermined the amount of interest, to be afterwards computed by the clerk.<sup>41</sup> Indeed, it has been held that where the amount of interest is left blank, the award as to interest in the judgment is mere surplusage and ineffectual;<sup>42</sup> but it has also been held that where the pleadings are so clear that the clerk can by simple calculation determine the amount of interest, a judgment will not be held void because it leaves such calculation to the clerk.<sup>43</sup> Where a verdict does not include interest and does not afford sufficient data for its computation, the court in rendering judgment cannot compute the amount of the interest and render judgment therefor.<sup>44</sup> But it is otherwise if the jury return a verdict for damages with interest, without specifying the amount of the interest.<sup>45</sup>

There is no word, mark or character, which, in any manner, indicates for what the judgment is rendered. It is true that there are figures '383.18,' but whether they are intended to represent that number of American, English or German coins, we are left entirely to conjecture. Nor is anything found in the record from which it can be certainly inferred. It may be said, that indebtedness is usually for dollars and decimal fractions of a dollar, but we know it is not of unfrequent occurrence that agreements are made for sums in other coins, especially when made in other countries. The decisions of this court are uniform, that in a judgment for money, the sum must be specified in words or figures with some mark or character designating the precise sum. . . ."

[a] A Judgment Has Nothing To Do With Its Enforcement.—An order for execution or other process or means of enforcement provided by law is not an integral part of a judgment. Livingston v. People, 48 Ill. App. 109.

[b] "At common law, when an action was brought on a judgment or any contract for the payment of money, the judgment of the court was, that the plaintiff recover his debt or damages, or debt and damages, without any order or direction specifying how the money should be paid by the debtor, or made by the officer. The court adjudged that the plaintiff do have and recover of the defendant the specified sum of money, and from that point the law—not the court—directed what proceedings should be had for the purpose of satisfying the amount adjudged to be due." Reed v. Eldredge, 27 Cal. 346.

It being binding until reversed, no question can be raised as to its legal validity in a collateral proceeding, which this is").

K. JOINT AND SEVERAL PARTIES AND JUDGMENTS. — 1. Joint Plaintiffs. — Where there are several plaintiffs in an action, it is the rule at common law that all must recover, and if part of them fail to establish their right of action the suit must fail as to all.<sup>96</sup> The common-law rule is not operative in all jurisdictions, however, as the statutes of several states allow the rendition of judgment in favor of any plaintiff who establishes his right of recovery, even though part of the plaintiffs fail so to do.<sup>97</sup> And even in the absence of statute, where the claims of the several plaintiffs are distinct and they are simply united through a common interest, a different rule would apply.<sup>98</sup>

As to necessity for judgment against all the parties, see supra, XI, K, 2.

[a] A statute providing that judgment may be given for or against one or more of several defendants joined in an action whenever a several judgment may be proper does not change the rule as to joint or several judgments. "At common law, if any number of persons or joint contractors were sued, it was necessary to prove and establish an entire case against all the defendants in the action, or it would fail. The legislature intended simply by this section to change the rule of practice, which seemed to be erroneously founded, by allowing the plaintiff to recover against so many of the defendants against whom he can prove a joint contract, and a consequent joint liability. This was the only object of this section of the code, and this is the only change it made. It does not permit a separate judgment to be entered against one of two or more defendants, proved to be joint contractors, and therefore jointly liable, even though that defendant should be the only one served, or who appears." Niles v. Battershall, 2 Rob. (N. Y.) 146. See also Fullerton v. Taylor, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 259.

[b] The fact that the judgment de-

the judgment must be joint, and not several.<sup>21</sup> But where the cause of action is founded on a joint and several obligation, or where each of the defendants might be sued severally on the same obligation, several or separate judgments against them are proper.<sup>22</sup> If the obligations or liabilities of the defendants are not coextensive, a joint judgment against them all for the whole amount of the judgment is improper; the judgment should be adapted to their respective liabilities.<sup>23</sup> Where it is improper for the jury to apportion the damages among scribes one of the defendants as principal debtor and the other as surety will not render a judgment several. Farney v. Hamilton Co., 54 Neb. 797, 75 N. W. 44.

[c] Where two defendants were sued on a joint cause of action in the same writ and service was obtained upon one only and another writ was afterwards issued and served on the other defendant and a joint judgment was rendered against both defendants it was held that the judgment was erroneous. Goodfrey v. McColloch, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 178.

[a] "A court of chancery always had power to adapt its judgment in a cause to the different liabilities of the defendants. The same flexibility is now given to the proceedings at law, as formerly existed in those in chancery, and a court of law may now adapt its judgment in a cause to the several defendants, all being jointly liable therefor, the judgment, in case of such an apportionment, may be against all the defendants for the largest amount allowed.<sup>24</sup>

If the interest of the plaintiffs in the recovery is joint the judgment should be in their favor jointly,<sup>25</sup> but where their interests are different the judgment should apportion the recovery amongst them in accordance with their differing interests.<sup>26</sup>

b. Effect of Invalidity of Joint Judgment. — While some courts hold that a judgment is an entirety as to all the parties against whom it is rendered, and cannot be reversed and remanded as to some and affirmed as to others,<sup>27</sup> but that if void as to one defendant, it is void as to all,<sup>28</sup> there are authorities which hold that a judgment may be enforced as to a part of the defendants, though void or voidable as to the others.<sup>29</sup>

ment,<sup>20</sup> and in such a way as to exclude error, if possible.<sup>21</sup> The jurisdiction of the court must be considered in the construction of a judgment.<sup>22</sup> Where the meaning of a judgment is clear and certain, acquiescence in an erroneous construction will not control its effect;<sup>23</sup> but where the parties have adopted or acquiesced in the meaning of a judgment which is uncertain, such construction will not be lightly disregarded, especially where such acquiescence has lasted for a long period of time.<sup>24</sup>

XIII. AMENDMENT. — A. BY COURTS OF ORIGINAL JURISDICTION.

1. Authority. — The power of courts of general jurisdiction to amend their judgments is a natural and inherent one,<sup>53</sup> which has, since an early date, been recognized and confirmed by statute in many states.<sup>54</sup> With regard to the intrinsic character of the tribunal there is no distinction as to the possession of this power, it being exercised alike by courts of law and equity,<sup>55</sup> and the rules controlling the remedy are generally the same in either case.<sup>56</sup>

2. General Qualifications and Restrictions. — In a proper case the granting or withholding of an amendment to a judgment is a matter resting to some extent in the discretion of the court,<sup>57</sup> the power being

See infra, XIII, A, 3, b, (I) and (II).

[a] "Until the entry of the judgment the record was in the breast of the court. Afterward it was in the roll. It was only the 'record' thus made up which imported absolute verity. 'The making up of the judgment-roll is the equivalent under our practice of the entry of record at common law.'" Kaufman v. Shain, 111 Cal. 16, 43 Pac. 393, 52 Am. St. Rep. 139.

[b] "If a judgment . . . is not void for want of jurisdiction, the court rendering it, whether it is a court of superior or inferior, of general or limited jurisdiction, has not power, at a term subsequent to its rendition, to . . . alter it. The correction of clerical misprisions is the extent of the power the court can subsequently exercise." Pettus v. McClannahan, 52 Ala. 55. The reason for this rule is found in the maxim, "Interest republicae ut sit finis litium." Pettus v. McClannahan, 52 Ala. 55.

[c] "No authorities need be cited to the proposition that, in the absence of statute, judgments regularly entered are beyond the court's control after the term has expired. A judgment procured by fraud or by irregular or improper conduct of the successful party, or one entered without jurisdiction of the person against whom it is given, can hardly be said to be regularly entered." Exchange Bank v. Ford, 7 Colo. 314, 3 Pac. 449.

[d] In Arkansas the court has no power, after the expiration of the term, to modify a judgment, except in the mode and for the causes specified in the civil code. Malpas v. Lowenstine, 46 Ark. 552.

[e] It is, of course, (1) very often provided by statute that judgments may be vacated for prescribed reasons, after the term (Carlow v. Aultman, 28 Neb. 672, 44 N. W. 873), but this is not amendment. Carlow v. Aultman, 28 Neb. 672, 44 N. W. 873. See also infra, XIV. (2) This would be in effect to correct a judicial error which, after the term can only be cured by a writ of error from or appeal to some higher tribunal or their statutory equivalent. See supra, XIII, A, 3, b, (1).

[f] "The power (retained by the court over its records after the lapse of the term) does not authorize the entry of an order which ought to have been made, but only those which were actually made." Evans v. Fisher, 26 Mo. App. 541.

[g] Where a judgment was rendered in favor of a stockholder "for the use of the bank," and thereafter on appeal, affirmed, it was error for the trial court to change, by a so-called amendment, the judgment so as to direct the payment of a part of the sum recovered to the stockholder for attorney's fees. Wickersham v. Crittenden, 103 Cal. 582, 37 Pac. 513.

[h] The judgment cannot be changed to include costs, after the term, though costs may be retaxed.

Jackson v. St. Louis & San Francisco R. Co., 89 Mo. 104. See Gove v. Lyford, 44 N. H. 525; and infra, XIII, A, 3, b, (VI), (B).

[i] "That which enters into the consideration of the court, and constitutes a part of the judgment, cannot be changed after the term. . . . Much less has a court power under the form of an amendment to render a (different) judgment." Whitwell v. Emory, 3 Mich. 84, 89, 59 Am. Dec. 220. And see Reynolds v. Reynolds, 115 Mich. 378, 73 N. W. 425.

[j] "A court may, at a subsequent term, amend so as to effectuate, but not so as to materially alter or defeat a judgment which it actually gave at a preceding term." Norton v. Sanders, 7 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 12.

[k] "' . . . no amendment is permitted at any subsequent term.' 3 Blk. Com. 407. This is good law at this day and prevails in this state, and in most, if not in all the states of the Union, except that after the term at which judgment is given is past the court may correct it so as to make it conform to what it was intended by the court to be." Moore v. Hinnant, 90 N. C. 163.

[l] "But the power of amendment after term does not extend to the correction of judicial errors, . . ." Elder v. Richmond Gold, etc. Min. Co., 58 Fed. 536, 7 C. C. A. 354.

[m] By Consent.—This restriction does not apply when the modification is expressly consented to by all the parties interested (Sheridan v. City of Chicago, 175 Ill. 421, 51 N. E. 898), and statutes occasionally provide for this exception. Alabama Code, 1907, §3334; Stevenson v. Black, 168 Mo. 549, 68 S. W. 909.

[n] In a final judgment "no change or modification can be made, after the term in which it has been rendered, which may substantially vary or affect it in any material thing." City of Des Moines v. Des Moines Water Co., 218 Fed. 939.

[o] "The principal question in the case before us, . . ., is whether the mistake sought to be corrected was a judicial error, . . . which the court had no power to correct at a subsequent term, or was a clerical mistake . . . which the court might correct even at a later term." Brown v. Clark, 81 Conn. 562, 71 Atl. 727.

court may, at a subsequent term,<sup>75</sup> or, indeed, at any time, correct,

[p] It has also been said that where the error or mistake was one committed in the exercise of a "judicial function" it "cannot be corrected by it at a subsequent term." Lewis v. State, 10 Ala. App. 31, 64 So. 537.

[q] "After the close of the term, the case ceases to be in fieri, and the court has no further jurisdiction to take any action whatever in it. It may, of course, in a proper case, in a proper proceeding, correct clerical mistakes in the entry of the record of the judgment . . ." Cauthorn v. Bierhaus, 44 Ind. App. 362, 88 N. E. 314.

[r] In eminent domain proceedings, where the court is required to fix the time for payment, the court may, after the term, change that time since to do so would be to alter a substantial part of the judgment. La Salle County, etc. R. Co. v. Hill, 260 Ill. 621, 103 N. E. 624.

[a] "The court had the inherent power, when the matter of the mistake was brought before it, to correct the (clerical) error, in the interest of common honesty and justice." Ex parte Marks, 136 Fed. 168, 69 C. C. A. 80.

[b] "The principle has been long regarded as settled, that a court is without power to alter, vary or annul final judgments or decrees, after the close of the term at which they are rendered, unless it be for the mere correction of clerical errors or omissions." Hastings v. Alabama Land Co., 124 Ala. 608, 26 So. 881.

[c] In justices' courts this rule is also true, except that it obtains immediately upon the entry of judgment. State ex rel. Johnson v. Case, 14 Mont. 520, 37 Pac. 95.

[d] In Nebraska the powers of and practice in the county courts in this regard are the same as in the district courts. Grimes v. Grosjean, 24 Neb. 700, 40 N. W. 137.

[e] Where the power of a court in this regard is dependent upon a statute which authorizes an amendment only as a "defect or want of form," the court is limited in the exercise of this power to such cases as present such errors or "defects," and a mistake of fact as to the Christian name of one of the parties is not a defect of form within the meaning of such a statute. Albers v. Whitney, 1 Story 310, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 137, involving §32, in this manner,<sup>76</sup> clerical errors in its judgment to the end that its records may speak the truth and its entered judgment conform to the judgment actually rendered. It has been said that no lapse of time will divest the court of its power, or absolve it from its duty, to supply deny the relief sought.<sup>83</sup> So, under the peculiar circumstances of other cases delays ranging variously<sup>84</sup> from twenty years<sup>85</sup> to six months,<sup>86</sup> have been considered fatal. Moreover, the limitations imposed by this rule are suspended so long as the cause in which the judgment was rendered remains in fieri,<sup>87</sup> and for this reason, any motion or proceeding in the cause, which is made and continued at the current term will have the effect of extending, to the term to which the matter is thus continued, the court's plenary control over its judgment.<sup>88</sup>

(III.) In the Absence of Terms. — Where terms of court have been abolished provision is sometimes made that after the lapse of a specified time the court retains jurisdiction over its judgments solely for the purpose of correcting clerical errors therein.<sup>89</sup> Under such statutes the

89. Story Merc. Co. v. McClellan, 145 Ala. 629, 40 So. 123, involving Acts of 1894-95, p. 1227.

[a] In New Mexico, under the provisions of §2875, C. L. 1897, that the lapse of this specified period is considered as having the same effect upon the court's power to amend its judgments as did the passing of the current term under the common-law rule.<sup>90</sup> Thus, after the expiration of this period, the court may not correct a judicial error in its own judgment,<sup>91</sup> unless a motion to that effect is properly brought to the attention of the court and continued, before the statutory time has run.<sup>92</sup> The court may, however, properly entertain a motion to amend and correct a clerical error at any time.<sup>93</sup> Where there is no statute regulating the matter, it seems that the entry of judgment is given the same effect as the end of the term at common law.<sup>94</sup>

(IV.) After and Pending an Appeal. — The power of the trial court to so amend their judgments as to make them speak the truth is not lost simply because a writ of error has been sued out or an appeal taken, and may be exercised at any time until,<sup>95</sup> but not after, an affirmance district courts "shall be at all times in session," it is considered that, except for purposes connected with jury trials there are no terms of court, the lapse of which would affect the court's control over its judgment. *Crichton v. [a] On an appeal by a garnishee from a judgment against him which does not recite the rendition of a judgment or the amount thereof against the defendant, the judgment against the garnishee may be amended by the

of the judgment by the appellate court,<sup>96</sup> although there is authority to the contrary on the latter proposition.<sup>97</sup> Accordingly, if the judgment was not affirmed, it may be amended after having been remanded, unless the amendment pertains to a question expressly adjudicated by the appellate court,<sup>98</sup> or, where the appeal is dismissed, after such dismissal.<sup>99</sup> Some courts, however, recognize as an exception to this rule, a case in which the appeal did not involve any question as to the form of the judgment,<sup>1</sup> or where there was no controversy as to the error which it was proposed to cure by amendment, holding that in such cases the trial court might properly grant a motion to amend the judgment even after an affirmance.<sup>2</sup>

[a] The Reason.—A judgment which is affirmed on appeal is merged in the judgment of the appellate court, hence the rule that it cannot be thereafter amended by the trial court. Randolph v. Little, 62 Ala. 396.

[b] "All courts have the inherent power to correct their records, so as to make them speak the truth, even after final decree, and after appeal.

. . . And that power exists until the judgment or decree of the lower court becomes merged in the judgment of this court by affirmance." Ex parte Henderson, 84 Ala. 36, 4 So. 284.

97. Conway v. Day, 79 Ind. 318.

[a] In Michigan, where property was replevied from defendant and the verdict, which fixed the value of the property, was for the defendant but the judgment as entered did not adjudge recovery of the property or its value, and the judgment thereon was afterward affirmed by the Supreme Court, it was held that the defendant might, on a motion made by leave of the Supreme Court, have the judgment corrected. Salter v. Sutherland, 125 Mich. 662, 85 N. W. 112.

[b] In California it has been held that this (to amend the judgment) "may be done even after an appeal and an affirmance of the judgment." Roussett v. Boyle, 45 Cal. 64.

99. Whittaker v. Gee, 63 Tex. 435.

1. Salter v. Sutherland, 125 Mich. 662, 85 N. W. 112.

[a] "It is undoubtedly true that the circuit court has no power to modify in any material respect a judgment in any manner inconsistent with the decision of this court; but in the present case it appears that the error was not discovered until after the decision of this court, and that no point decided in the case by this court turned on the form of the verdict or judgment." Salter v. Sutherland, 125 Mich. 662, 85 N. W. 112.

authority the court may not amend its judgments in vacation,<sup>3</sup> or at chambers,<sup>4</sup> without the consent of all the parties.<sup>5</sup> In some states, however, statutes provide for the exercise of this power in vacation.<sup>6</sup>

(VI.) After Execution and Satisfaction.—The fact that an execution has been issued upon a judgment,<sup>7</sup> or it has been held that the judgment has been satisfied will not, standing alone, prohibit the granting of an amendment in a proper case,<sup>8</sup> although circumstances may arise under which the granting of an amendment at this time would be error.<sup>9</sup> Thus, in keeping with the general rule set forth above that where to grant an amendment to a judgment would, in the nature of the circumstances, be inequitable the courts will refuse to act.<sup>10</sup> An amendment of a judgment will not be granted after the satisfaction thereof where to do so would make a party liable to pay money thereunder a second time.<sup>11</sup> The courts of some jurisdictions have laid down the rule unqualifiedly that at such a time an amendment of a judgment is improper.<sup>12</sup>

b. As to the Nature of Errors.—(I.) Judicial Errors.—There is a well defined distinction between the rendition of a judgment and the entry thereof,<sup>13</sup> and in the exercise of the power to amend its judgments the court can do no more than make the entry correspond to

[b] Where, in an action to foreclose a mortgage and a pledge of water stock, no mention of the water stock was made in either the finding or the conclusions of law, but the latter recited that the plaintiff was entitled to a certain sum and that such sum was a valid lien upon the premises described in the complaint and that the plaintiff was entitled to have such premises sold and the proceeds applied, etc., and concluded by directing that "judgment be entered accordingly," this is a judicial, not a clerical, omission and is not the subject of amendment. First Nat. Bank v. Dusy, 110 Cal. 69, 42 Pac. 476.

[c] "There is, . . . no authority to correct judicial errors under the pretense of correcting clerical errors, and to entitle a party to an order amending a judgment or decree, he must establish that the entry as made does not conform to what the court intended it should be when it was ordered. An error of the court, no matter how palpable, cannot be corrected in this way, . . ." Ives v. Hulce, 17 Ill. App. 30. And see Radclyffe v. Barton, 154 Mass. 157, 28 N. E. 148.

[e] Nor has the court power, under the guise of an amendment of a void judgment, to create a judgment. Fairchild v. Dean, 15 Wis. 206.

[f] Reducing Amount of Judgment. "Thus it is error to amend a judgment by reducing the amount where the reason for the alteration is that the court has changed its mind; such action may be taken as the means of correcting a miscalculation or other clerical error, but not to set right a judicial mistake." *State v. the court to render the proper judgment,<sup>17</sup> or arises from a want of judicial action, the judgment cannot be corrected by amendment.<sup>18</sup> Thus it follows that where a judgment as entered is for an amount in excess of the sum for which the judgment was rendered, the entry may properly be corrected by amendment,<sup>19</sup> although where the judgment rendered is for more than the amount actually due, the correction cannot be made in this manner.<sup>20</sup> There are, however, rare instances where a clerical error may be said to have been responsible for the rendition of the judgment, and in such a case the judgment itself may be corrected by amendment,<sup>21</sup> but only where this is apparent from the record.<sup>22</sup> In such a case it is important that the distinction be observed between a mere mistake, miscalculation or misrecital and an error in the opinion or judicial determination of the court,<sup>23</sup> for the latter are judicial errors, and, as such, this rule has [a] "In their prayer for relief, however, they asked both that the foreclosure be set aside and also that the mortgage be adjudged void. . . . It is also apparent to us from the record, and particularly from the language of the order for judgment on the pleadings, that all that the court intended to do was to order judgment declaring the foreclosure void; that the judicial mind never assented to the proposition that the mortgage was void, but that the order was worded as it was through the clerical mistake or inadvertence of the judge by reason of his not knowing or having presently in mind the fact that the prayer of the complaint for relief asked that the mortgage itself be adjudged void. We think the court had the power to correct in this way its mere clerical mistake or misprision so that the judgment might conform to what the court intended it should be." Chase v. Whitten, 62 Minn. 498, 65 N. W. 84.

[b] "But, where the amendment is in the line of the correction of a mistake, or of an omission, obviously due, as in this case, to the trial judge's oversight, the power to make it is a general and incidental one." Bohlen v. Metropolitan El. R. Co., 121 N. Y. 546, 24 N. E. 932.

[c] Also, where a note sued upon provided that a ten days' notice should be given after the maturity thereof to entitle the payee to attorney's fees and the records showed, besides this, that the suit was commenced eight days after maturity, it was held that the judgment might be amended in this regard. Johnson v. Globe, etc. Co., 11 Ga. App. 485, 75 S. E. 822.

[d] In California the courts have said that the "power of the courts to amend their judgments . . . extends also to cases where, as here, the order was inadvertently made and entered. This is not a case like the Estate of Potter, 141 Cal. 424, 75 Pac. 850, where, upon dismissal, the court might have directed different forms of judgment to be entered. Here, the defendant being entitled to a dismissal of the action, as the court correctly held it followed under the circumstances disclosed by the record that the judgment should, as a matter of course, have directed the return to her of the property taken. Its failure to do so, it clearly appears, was merely an inadvertence or mistake, and not a judicial error." Kowalsky v. Nicholson, 23 Cal. App. 160, 137 Pac. 607.

[e] In New Mexico it has been held that where, in a suit to foreclose a mechanic's lien, the judgment allowed "recovery for the costs of filing plaintiff's lien, there can be no doubt but that, if asked for at the time the court would have rendered judgment foreclosing the liens as a matter of course, and the omission to do so arose from mere inadvertence." - [a] "The right of a court to have its judgments entered as they are given, and where, through clerical misprisions the entries are inaccurately made, to have them corrected so as to express the truth, is too well established to require a citation of authorities. The judgment of the court is that which it pronounces. The record entry is not itself the judgment, but rather the evidence of the judgment, or its embodiment in visible and permanent form; and the court, in virtue of the same authority by which it pronounces its judgment, can cause the record to express it as it was given, or change an inaccurate record into a true one." Breene v. Booth, 6 Colo. App. 140, 40 Pac. 193.

deed this is expressly sanctioned by statute in many states.<sup>37</sup> This power of the court to correct by amendment errors arising from clerical inadvertence or mistake is distinct from the statutory power to relieve against excusable mistake of the parties.<sup>38</sup> The "mistakes" contemplated by those last-mentioned statutes are such as deprive a party of his day in court, i. e., prevent him from presenting his cause of action or defense.<sup>39</sup> The term "clerical errors" as here used, includes any mistake into which judicial reasoning or determination did not enter and but for which the judgment would not have been rendered in the precise manner in which it is found.<sup>40</sup> Thus where a judg-

[c] Where one judgment against the defendant had already been entered the act of the clerk in entering another judgment against him amounted to a mere clerical error which might have been properly corrected by amendment. Green v. Commonwealth, 152 Ky. 239, 153 S. W. 242.

[d] Judgment Against Sureties.—In Arkansas, under the statute, when a decree for money, stayed by an appeal bond, is affirmed, since a decree goes against the sureties the appeal bond as a matter of course, if the clerk omits to enter the decree against the sureties at the time of entering the decree of affirmance against the appellant, it may afterwards be entered nunc pro tunc (Rogers v. Brooks, 31 Ark. 194), and the same doctrine has been held to apply to sureties in criminal cases. Shaul v. Duprey, 48 Ark. 331, 3 S. W. 366.

[a] Names of parties (1) which are not fully (Smith v. Redus, 9 Ala. 99, 44 Am. Dec. 429), (2) or properly stated are amendable by reference to the papers in the cause (Patterson v. Walton, 119 N. C. 500, 26 S. E. 43), (3) and also, where a judgment has been rendered against A. and B. while the declaration was against A. alone, such judgment is amendable at a subsequent term, by striking out the name of the defendant who was not before the court. Hammer v. McConnel, 2 Ohio 31.

[b] A judgment erroneously entered against one only of several defendants may be regarded as the result of a clerical error and amended. Russell v. Erwin's Admr., 41 Ala. 292, 301.

[c] But a name cannot be struck out to correct a judicial error. Green v. Worth Bros. Co., 223 Pa. 604, 72 Atl. 1064.

[e] The theory that a judgment is an entirety is no longer looked upon as a bar to amending or correcting a judgment as to one of several parties, unless substantial rights of the others would be injuriously affected thereby. Hood v. Bank of Mobile, 9 Ala. 335; Neenan v. City of St. Joseph, 126 Mo. 89, 28 S. W. 963. And Powell v. Banks, 146 Mo. 620, 644, 48 S. W. 664.

[a] In Alabama clerical mistakes in the names of the parties are corrected by the court by reference to other parts of the record, without a motion states.<sup>47</sup> At the same time, a judgment, to be amendable, must not be void,<sup>48</sup> and so a judgment against a party who was sued by a wrong name and who was neither served with process nor made any appearance in the action, being entirely void, cannot be corrected in any respect by an amendment,<sup>49</sup> and it would be an obvious abuse of this power to so amend a judgment as to include, as parties defendant, strangers to the action.<sup>50</sup>

(B.) PERSONAL AND REPRESENTATIVE CAPACITY. — Whenever, through clerical inadvertence, a judgment has been entered against a party in his individual capacity when it should have been against him in a representative capacity, or vice versa,<sup>51</sup> the judgment may be corrected in this respect by an amendment.

(IV.) Omission. — Under the power to correct clerical errors in the judgment the court may supply omissions therein,<sup>52</sup> but the omission, to amend. Floyd v. Lamar (Ala. App.), 69 So. 227.

to interlocutory and final judgments alike.<sup>68</sup> Dormant judgments, too, are subject to correction in this manner.<sup>69</sup>

(II.) Judgments by Consent. — It is a general rule that the court has no power to amend a judgment by consent unless all the parties concerned acquiesce therein,<sup>70</sup> and so, it was held to be beyond the power of the court to correct by amendment a recital of the amount of liability in such a judgment.<sup>71</sup> On the same principle, where a judgment was entered upon a stipulation, in strict accordance therewith, it is improper to change it in any respect upon a motion to amend.<sup>72</sup> But this rule does not preclude the correcting of simple clerical misprisions in the entry of such a judgment,<sup>73</sup> and, if, through a clerical mistake or omission, such a judgment was not entered at all, it may be entered nunc pro tunc.<sup>74</sup>

(III.) Judgments by Confession. — Judgments by confession are not peculiar in this regard and the court has power to amend them upon the same terms and to the same extent as other judgments.<sup>75</sup>

[a] Of course the rule that a court may not, by amendment, alter a substantial or material portion thereof (supra, XIII, A, 3, b, (I) and (II)), applies to judgments of this kind.

(IV.) Judgments by Default. — Judgments by default, too, may be corrected by an amendment.<sup>76</sup>

(V.) Void Judgments. — A judgment which is void is a nullity and cannot be made a valid judgment by an amendment.<sup>77</sup> And yet, even here the court may exercise its inherent power to make its records speak the truth and may amend even an invalid judgment to that end.<sup>78</sup>

4. Amendment Nunc Pro Tunc.<sup>79</sup> — An amendment nunc pro tunc should be granted or refused, as justice may require, in view of the circumstances of each particular case.<sup>80</sup> Where no injustice will result, and an amendment is proper in the premises, it may be made nunc pro tunc.<sup>81</sup> On the other hand, to permit an amendment to have a retroactive effect when to do so would mean an infringement upon the intervening rights of innocent third parties would manifestly be inequitable and should be refused.<sup>82</sup> Thus, it is not competent

5. Courts of Inferior Jurisdiction.—Courts of limited or special jurisdiction may amend their judgments to the end that they may speak the truth,<sup>86</sup> although they do not possess, in the absence of a statutory grant thereof, the power to modify or revise, in any matter of substance, a judgment rendered therein.<sup>87</sup>

[a] The municipal court of New York has this power by express statutory provision. Municipal Court Act, Laws 1902, p. 1563, c. 580, §254; Ruegamer v. Cieslinski, 104 App. Div. 135, 93 N. Y. Supp. 599; Frankland v. Schoenfeld, 106 N. Y. Supp. 1101.

[b] The surrogate's court of New York, while exercising only such powers as are granted to it by statute and being thus a court of "limited jurisdiction" (In re Henderson, 157 N. Y. 423, 52 N. E. 183), "certainly must possess . . . some inherent power, and the correction of their own records, when effected by some mistake or clerical error," is a power which is "recognized and perhaps regulated by various statutes, but it does not proceed from or rest upon statutes, since it would exist without them." In re Henderson, 157 N. Y. 423, 52 N. E. 183, quoted with approval in Matter of Robertson, 151 App. Div. 589, 136 N. Y. Supp. 548, involving §2481, Code Civ. Proc. of New York.

[c] Probate courts possess such power. Aull v. St. Louis T. Co., 149 Mo. 1, 50 S. W. 289; Kennedy v. Wachsmith, 12 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 171, 14 Am. Dec. 676. See generally the title "Probate Courts."

it.<sup>89</sup> And it would seem that even in the first instance the filing of such a transcript does not destroy the power of the inferior court thereafter to correct clerical errors in the judgment.<sup>90</sup>

B. COURTS OF APPELLATE JURISDICTION. — 1. Generally. — There is nothing in the nature of appellate jurisdiction which inhibits the granting of amendments,<sup>91</sup> and this power is sometimes expressly conferred upon appellate tribunals by statutory enactment.<sup>92</sup> An appellate court has power to amend its own judgments in conformity with the truth of the case.<sup>93</sup> Thus, where the clerk of the appellate court inadvertently entered up a judgment of affirmance in a cause wherein the judgment appealed from was, in reality, reversed,<sup>94</sup> or, where the judgment entered was in an incorrect sum,<sup>95</sup> or improperly entitled,<sup>96</sup> or otherwise incomplete,<sup>97</sup> the appellate court may so amend such judgment as to make it show the true and entire action of the court. The rule that a court may not, at a subsequent term, review or revise its judgments upon any matter of substance,<sup>98</sup> applies with equal force to appellate tribunals and their judgments.<sup>99</sup>

2. Power Over Judgments of Trial Court. — As a general rule, whenever the judgment of the trial court is correct save for a clerical error therein the appellate court may remand the cause with directions was thus filed might “modify” the judgment of the inferior court to conform to law.

[a] "The writ of coram nobis was employed only to supply or rectify a mistake of fact in a decree or judgment . . . The writ was abolished by Sec. 67, chap. 110, R. S., which provides that such mistake of fact may be corrected by motion in the court wherein the judgment or decree was entered." McPherson v. Wood, 52 Ill. App. 170. See also Luckey v. Yeoman of Am., 141 Ill. App. 332.

[b] In Connecticut the error, if discovered at the time in which the judgment was rendered, may be corrected without any formal application. "But if the mistake is not discovered until after the term is ended, . . . the correction ought not to be made, unless upon a formal petition setting and summons, as in ordinary actions, is irregular,<sup>10</sup> although not necessarily ineffectual, for even though the initial step in the remedy be designated a "petition,"<sup>11</sup> or a "complaint,"<sup>12</sup> the court may regard the pleading as a motion,<sup>13</sup> and grant the desired relief accordingly.<sup>14</sup>

b. Contents and Formal Requisites of Application.—This motion is governed by those rules which control the form and contents of motions generally.<sup>15</sup> It should be entitled in the court which rendered the judgment,<sup>16</sup> and should state with certainty the grounds upon which the relief is sought.<sup>17</sup> This last requirement is sometimes prescribed by statute.<sup>18</sup> Thus, if the motion be made upon the ground of fraud it should set forth with particularity the facts and circumstances.<sup>19</sup> The motion must be addressed, not to the validity or correctness of the judgment, but to the form or substance of the same,<sup>20</sup> and, if it should appear from such a motion that the error, if any, is not such as is properly cured by amendment, the motion is defective.<sup>21</sup>

c. Parties.—The rule generally obtains that either party to the action in which the judgment under consideration was rendered may apply to the court to have the same amended,<sup>22</sup> and is equally well settled that a stranger to the action may not do so,<sup>23</sup> though this rule has been relaxed to the extent of permitting one, not a party to the action, but directly interested in the outcome thereof and possessed of rights liable to be injuriously effected thereby, to become a party to a proceeding of this nature.<sup>24</sup> All parties to the action in which the judgment was rendered should, ordinarily, be made parties to an application to amend such judgment.<sup>25</sup>

d. Time for Making Application.—Of course whenever such a length of time has elapsed since the rendition of a judgment that the court has lost its power to make the amendment desired, an application for this relief would be fruitless.<sup>26</sup> And in any event the applicant should proceed with due diligence: an unreasonable delay may operate as a bar to the desired relief,<sup>27</sup> and where statutes require the application to be made within a designated time the failure to proceed within that time is usually fatal.<sup>28</sup> It should be noticed, however, that ordinarily statutes limiting the time within which an application for the modification of a judgment may be made do not apply to the amendment of clerical errors, as distinguished from the revision or correction of judicial mistakes;<sup>29</sup> and the consequences of the "mistake or excusable neglect" of the party,<sup>30</sup> and statutes which apparently refer to such mistakes have received so liberal a construction as to be practically nullified in this regard.<sup>31</sup> On the other hand, the provisions of some statutes on this subject are such, and have received [a] This is not "a motion to relieve a party from a judgment taken against him through his mistake or excusable neglect; for then it would have come within the scope of section 133 of the code, and must, as suggested by the judge, have been made within one year after notice; but it was a motion to amend, not the action of the court, its judgment or its process, but simply its record as inadvertently made by its officer and there is no length of time which will bar this power of the court or relieve it of the duty of exercising it." [a] The power to amend is distinct from the power to relieve against such mistakes. Strickland v. Strickland, 95 N. C. 471. The distinction between such cases is recognized in Corry v. Campbell, 34 Ohio St. 204.

[b] In Indiana, in considering §405, Burns' Ann. St. 1908, which provides that "the court may also . . . relieve a party from a judgment taken against him through his mistake, inadvertance, surprise, or excusable neglect, . . .," the court says (Cauthorn v. Bierhaus [Ind. App.], 88 N. E. 314). "The defect sought to be cured here clearly does not come within the meaning of any of the terms used." "If a mistake, (it) was a mistake of . . . the court."

31. Shelley v. Smith, 50 Iowa 543; Goldsmith v. Clausen, 14 Iowa 278.

[a] In Tennessee the rule adopted is that the right of a party to demand such a correction as of right ceases at the expiration of the time prescribed by the statute (Code, §2877) but that after that time it is discretionary with the court whether it will make the correction or not (Code, §2878). f. Notice.—(I.) When Necessary.—(A.) GENERAL STATEMENT.—The rules governing the necessity of giving notice of such an application are dependent, to some extent, upon the view taken by the courts in that particular jurisdiction as to the class or kind of evidence which will support an amendment.<sup>34</sup> Thus, whenever the amendment is considered as properly made only upon record evidence notice has been held to be necessary<sup>35</sup> since in such a case any amendment which may be obtained is always founded upon matter of record and cannot

[a] In Crim v. Kessing, 89 Cal. 478, 26 Pac. 1074, it was said that "ordinarily, a court would require notice of the motion to be given to all parties interested, but it has the power to make the correction without such notice."

[b] "Where it is manifest from a bare inspection of the record (that) the clerk entered a judgment other than the one the court rendered, opinions have held an amendment to make the record express the true judgment given by the court may be ordered without notice . . . But if the propriety of the amendment cannot be thus determined, notice must be given. . . . The essence of the rule is that notice must be given to the adverse party, unless it is obvious he cannot be aggrieved by the proposed amendment."

be affected by extraneous facts.<sup>36</sup> But whenever the amendment can, in the nature of things, only be predicated upon extrinsic facts, it is held that a notice is required.<sup>37</sup> However, the fact that extraneous evidence is permissible does not necessitate notice of the application except when the records do not disclose sufficient grounds to justify an amendment.<sup>38</sup> Some courts unqualifiedly require that a proper notice of such an application be given,<sup>39</sup> while others say that notice is never necessary in case of the correction of clerical errors.<sup>40</sup> In other jurisdictions the necessity of notice is made to depend upon whether or not the amendment is proposed at the same term in which the judgment was rendered, it being considered essential when the motion to amend is made at a subsequent term,<sup>41</sup> but unnecessary if made during the current

[a] In Georgia, however, one of this group of states (see infra, XIII, D, 2, i), and amendment of a former order by the ordinary is proper only after notice to the adverse parties. Fischesser v. Thompson, 45 Ga. 459.

[b] "In the former case (an amendment based upon record evidence) notice to the parties is not necessary. . . . The court, for the clearer and more accurate expression of its final action, molds into form that which is fairly and reasonably deducible from the whole record, taken together. There is nothing to litigate. No right is substantially affected." Odell v. Reynolds, 70 Fed. 656, 17 C. C. A. 317.

[c] When this motion is made in answer to another motion notice thereof has been held unnecessary. Whitaker v. Gee, 63 Tex. 435.

37. Where a default judgment is obtained against A. D. when, in reality, the defendant's name is C. D., it is improper to entertain a motion to amend unless it be shown that C. D. has been given sufficient notice of the making of the motion. This is because the record, in such a case, could contain no evidence on which to predicate an amendment. McNally v. Mott, 3 Cal. 235. [a] In the Federal Court.—In this connection the supreme court has said, "It is urged that when the necessary facts appear in the record such correction can be made without notice, because, it is said, there is nothing to litigate. But aside from the fact that this proposition ignores the fact jurisdiction once lost can only be regained by some proper notice, the case at bar is an illustration that such action may impair the substantial right of a party to be heard against the rendition of a new judgment against him." (B.) To STRANGERS. — Wherever subsequently acquired rights of third persons may have become involved, it is the better practice to give such persons notice of the motion to amend,<sup>44</sup> although it would seem to be not absolutely necessary;<sup>45</sup> nor is it necessary to notify a defendant who, although properly served, has never appeared in the action.<sup>46</sup> adverse party into court at the time of the hearing,<sup>49</sup> and if it serve this purpose it would seem unnecessary that it be in any particular form.<sup>50</sup> Indeed, it has been held that the notice need not even be in writing,<sup>51</sup> and that constructive, as well as actual, notice is sufficient to support such a motion.<sup>52</sup>

(IV.) Service.—(A.) TIME OF SERVICE.—Where the length of notice is not prescribed by statute the notice must be given or served at such a time as will give the adverse party a “reasonable notice.”<sup>53</sup> What will constitute a reasonable notice in a given case is a matter entirely dependent upon attending circumstances.<sup>54</sup>

(B.) BY AND UPON WHOM MADE.—If the cause is still in fieri the notice may be served upon the attorney of the adverse party,<sup>55</sup> but after the lapse of any considerable time this is not enough: the notice must then be served upon such party personally.<sup>56</sup> Whenever personal service is necessary, service on a co-party is insufficient.<sup>57</sup> Service may be made by any sheriff,<sup>58</sup> constable,<sup>59</sup> or disinterested person<sup>60</sup> who would be a competent witness.<sup>61</sup> should be returned, or noticed on the record, before the day named therein as the one upon which the motion would be made,<sup>64</sup> otherwise the applicant must be regarded as having abandoned his notice and the court should refuse to entertain the motion.<sup>65</sup>

g. Mode of Defense.—In the event that the grounds upon which the amendment is asked do not appear to be sufficient, the question is properly raised by a motion to quash or dismiss the proceedings,<sup>66</sup> but not by demurrer,<sup>67</sup> nor, it has been held, by motion to strike.<sup>68</sup> Prohibition will not lie to enjoin a court from entertaining an application to amend its judgment,<sup>69</sup> unless the court has lost jurisdiction over the cause.<sup>70</sup>

h. The Hearing.—The general rule is that only such questions as are necessary to determine the propriety of granting the amendment will be considered, on the hearing.<sup>71</sup> Such facts, however, as are pertinent and properly considered are to be determined by the court and not by the jury.<sup>72</sup>

i. What May Be Shown.—The rule followed in some states as to what may properly be shown in support of a motion to amend a judgment is that the amendment cannot be made except upon record evidence,<sup>73</sup> or some entry or memorandum of the trial made at the

however, by holding that there is a distinction in regard to the reception of oral testimony in such a proceeding between a case wherein it is sought to correct an affirmative error and one in which the object is to supply an omission, declaring such evidence to be competent only in the former instance.<sup>6</sup>

j. The Order Determining the Application.—Ordinarily formal requisites of the order granting the amendment will be controlled by the requirements of orders of a similar nature.<sup>7</sup> But, it seems, that where any considerable lapse of time has intervened between the entry of the judgment and the amendment, the order directing such amendment should contain a clause expressly saving the rights of third parties, not parties or privies to the judgment,<sup>8</sup> and it has also been held that the order should contain recitals showing the amendment to have been made upon proper evidence<sup>9</sup> after due notice to the opposite party,<sup>10</sup> and that the court had jurisdiction.<sup>11</sup>

k. Making the Amendment.—The best practice in this regard is to make a new entry, referring to the imperfect or defective judgment and to the order of the court directing such amendment,<sup>12</sup> but, it would seem, that no mode of amending which is sanctioned by and under the view of the court will vitiate the judgment.<sup>13</sup> Thus amendments may be made by interlineation,<sup>14</sup> especially where the order of court granting them specifies the particular amendment allowed to be made in this manner.<sup>15</sup>

1. Appeal and Review.—(I.) General Statement.—Not only is an order granting or denying a motion to amend generally considered appealable,<sup>16</sup> but this, or some other method of direct attack, is the only proper remedy in such a case,<sup>17</sup> it being always improper to proceed by a collateral or incidental assault upon the judgment.<sup>18</sup> As already noticed, the amendment of a judgment is, necessarily, largely within the discretion of the court,<sup>19</sup> and its decision thereon will not be disturbed on appeal unless it appears that this discretion has been abused.<sup>20</sup> In fact, it has been said that the correct use of this discretion cannot be questioned by another court, even on a writ of error.<sup>21</sup>

(II.) What Questions May Be Raised.—Only such objections may be urged on the appeal as were raised at the hearing of the motion, provided the party making the same was given notice of the motion if entitled thereto.<sup>22</sup> Thus, a party will not be heard to say for the first time on appeal that the application,<sup>23</sup> or the notice thereof,<sup>24</sup> was in-

(III.) Bill of Exceptions.<sup>27</sup> — In order that the action of the court in granting or denying a motion to amend a judgment may be reviewed on appeal it is necessary that it be made a part of the record,<sup>28</sup> by a bill of exceptions or in some other appropriate manner as the rules of practice may provide,<sup>29</sup> and in the absence of this the appellate court will presume that sufficient legal evidence was introduced to justify the granting of the amendment.<sup>30</sup> express reference and not by implication.<sup>39</sup> Statutes in most jurisdictions, however, to a greater or less extent, confer this power upon them,<sup>40</sup> and it can be exercised only to the extent and in the manner specified in the statute.<sup>41</sup>

3. Courts of Appellate Jurisdiction.—Courts of appellate jurisdiction have power to set aside their judgments<sup>42</sup> upon a sufficient

N. C. 342, 13 S. E. 937, where the court says: "The remedy for irregularity (in the judgment) is by motion in the action before the justice of the peace . . . It is orderly, convenient, necessary and appropriate to make pertinent motions of all kinds in an action in such court just as like motion may be made in the superior courts." (2) And see Neville v. Pope, 95 N. C. 346, where the court, in speaking of a judgment of a justice of the peace, says: "It may have been erroneous. If so, the party against whom it was given ought to have appealed to the superior court. It may have been, and may be, irregular in material respects. If so, then the remedy would be by motion in the action to set aside the judgment because of such irregularity." (3) And to the same effect, McKee v. Angel, 90 N. C. 60; Morton v. Rippey, 84 N. C. 611; Broyles v. Young, 81 N. C. 315; Birdsey v. Harris, 68 N. C. 92.

Proc., which confers upon this court the power to grant this relief in the same manner as courts of general jurisdiction, with the same limitations. In re Onderdonk, 4 Misc. 37, 23 N. Y. Supp. 846. See also In re Flynn, 136 N. Y. 287, 32 N. E. 767; Sipperly v. Baucus, 24 N. Y. 46. (2) The power of the municipal courts, however, does not extend to judgments on the merits, but only to judgments on default. Zimmerman v. Bloch, 12 Misc. 158, 32 N. Y. Supp. 1073.

41. Cochran v. Reich, 20 Misc. 593, 46 N. Y. Supp. 441; Gold v. Hutchinson, 55 N. Y. Supp. 575. See Stivers v. Ritt, 29 Misc. 341, 60 N. Y. Supp. 507; Ludwin v. Siano, 73 N. Y. Supp. 940.

[a] For this reason statutes conferring upon inferior courts the power to grant this relief in "any action tried before them" has been held not to give authority to open a judgment in a "special proceeding." Thus a default judgment in unlawful detainer, a special proceeding, may not be relieved against in such a court under authority conferred by a statute like the one mentioned above. Cochran v. Reich, 20 Misc. 593, 46 N. Y. Supp. 441.

[a] The judgments or decisions of a commission created to aid the appellate court in disposing of the cases on a congested calendar, may be set showing, and statutes sometimes so provide.<sup>43</sup> If the ground upon which this relief is asked was,<sup>44</sup> or could have been raised on the argument of the cause, the application will be rejected.<sup>45</sup>

4. Courts of Concurrent or Coordinate Jurisdiction.—As regards courts of concurrent or coordinate jurisdiction, it is a generally accepted rule that one may not open or vacate a judgment of another.<sup>46</sup>

5. Other Available Remedies.—It is the general rule that the existence of another adequate remedy will not, in itself, deprive the party of his right to pursue this remedy.<sup>47</sup> An application to open or vacate a judgment will not be granted, however, when the proper aside by the court. Murphy & Bros. v. Swadner, 34 Ohio St. 672.

[b] At a subsequent term a judgment which is a nullity may be set aside. Burr v. Lewis, 6 Tex. 76.

[c] Where a judgment of the trial court is reversed and remanded with directions to enter a particular judgment an application to open or set aside the judgment rendered pursuant to such directions must be addressed to the trial court. Carey v. Kemper, 45 Ohio St. 93, 11 N. E. 130.

[a] "We do not deny but that power exists in one court to vacate an order made by a coordinate branch of the same court. . . . The exercise, however, by one judge, of authority in review of the discretion exercised by another, to the extent of vacating the orders and determination of the latter, is of such doubtful propriety as to have been uniformly denied whenever the question has arisen. It is fraught with consequences that may be serious, imperils the stability of an orderly course of procedure in the administration of justice, and is destructive of the dignity and decorum which should attend upon judicial determination." Corbin v. Casina Land Co., 26 App. Div. 408, 49 N. Y. Supp. 929. Compare, Cruikshank v. Cruikshank, 30 App. Div. 381, 51 N. Y. Supp. 926; Ramsdell v. National Rivet & Novelty Co., 20 App. Div. 388, 46 N. [b] Should a judge of the court to which application for relief was made, order the matter transferred to a court of concurrent jurisdiction, he having the power so to do, the court to which the proceeding is thus removed may properly entertain the same. Cruikshank v. Cruikshank, 30 App. Div. 381, 51 N. Y. Supp. 926.

47. Kimball v. Kelton, 54 Vt. 177.

[a] Where the officer who served the writ made the return day wrong in the copy delivered to the then defendant, as a result of which a default judgment was had the defendant was entitled to his remedy notwithstanding he might have a remedy against the officer for a false return. *Kimball v. B. GROUNDS OF RELIEF.<sup>52</sup> — 1. Void Judgments Generally. — It is everywhere considered that absolute invalidity of a judgment constitutes a sufficient ground for its vacation by the court wherein it was rendered.<sup>53</sup>

2. Matters of Defense. — a. Generally. — Not every matter of defense is available as a ground for opening or setting aside a judgment.<sup>54</sup> The general rule is that matters of defense of which the applicant had knowledge at the time of trial,<sup>55</sup> as well as those mat-

As to the time in which this may be done, see infra, XIV, C, 2, b, (VI).

54. Set-off.—The mere fact that the defendant has an account against the plaintiff equal to the amount of the judgment will not entitle him to have the judgment opened. "In some manner, either at law or in equity, subject-matter of defense must have attached to the judgment or the consideration on which it rests." *Beaty v. ters as to which he might, with reasonable diligence, have informed himself,<sup>56</sup> may not be urged on an application of this nature. On this principle a defendant who has elected to stand upon a demurrer may not, simply because he apparently has a good defense on the merits, have the judgment opened.<sup>57</sup>

b. Illegality of Consideration.—It is a general rule that mere illegality in the consideration for the obligation upon which a judgment is founded will not constitute sufficient grounds for vacating or setting aside of the judgment if this defense, although known to the applicant was not interposed at the time of trial,<sup>58</sup> although under the statutes in some jurisdictions an exception to this general rule is made in case of judgments founded upon gambling contracts,<sup>59</sup> or those which

[b] In an appellate tribunal this principle will operate to defeat a motion of this sort. Thus, where it appeared on a motion in such a court to set aside its prior judgment refusing a writ of certiorari, that the facts upon which the motion was based could with reasonable diligence have been presented to the court on the hearing on the petition for the writ, the motion will be denied. *Williamson v. 59. See the statutes.

[a] In Illinois it is provided by statute that judgments founded upon a

are usurious,<sup>60</sup> upon a showing by the applicant that he had no way of presenting this defense at the time of trial.<sup>61</sup>

c. Failure and Inadequacy of Consideration.—It is not a ground for vacating a judgment that the consideration for the obligation upon which the judgment rests has failed or was, in the first instance, inadequate.<sup>62</sup>

3. Defects as to Parties.—a. General Statement.—Failure to join a necessary party defendant is not ground for setting aside the judgment;<sup>63</sup> nor is a technical objection to a party's capacity to sue, which must be shown de hors the record,<sup>64</sup> or a mere misnomer of a party, ground therefor.<sup>65</sup> In an action on a joint obligation a judgment rendered against defaulted defendants before the disposition of the issues as to other defendants, may be set aside on motion.<sup>66</sup>

b. Death of Party.—That a judgment was rendered after the death of a party and without a substitution of his personal representative, is sufficient cause for its subsequent vacation,<sup>67</sup> though the court gambling contract may be set aside, and the courts of that state have declared that as a matter of policy this should not be made to depend upon whether or not this defense was raised at the time of trial. Mallett v. Butcher, 41 Ill. 382, overruling in this regard, Abrams v. Camp, 4 Ill. 290. And, to the same effect, Boddie v. Brewer, etc. Brewing Co., 204 Ill. 352, 68 N. E. 394; *Lucas v. trust on the ground of coercion, it was held that a judgment by default should be set aside on motion, because the beneficiary was not made a party. "The court should not render a judgment, there being the want of a necessary party to a suit. The defendant in such case has a right to presume that the court will not render an erroneous judgment against him, and hence should not be held in default until the necessary party is brought before the court."

may refuse this relief to one who has failed to call its attention to the death of a party.<sup>68</sup>

c. Infant Defendants.—A judgment rendered against an infant defendant, who was not represented by a guardian ad litem, will, as a general rule, be set aside.<sup>69</sup> Should it appear, however, that the infant has suffered no substantial injustice and that rights of innocent third parties have intervened, the court may properly deny such an application.<sup>70</sup>

d. Coverture is a ground for opening and vacating a judgment rendered against a married woman personally in jurisdictions where the common law disability still obtains.<sup>71</sup>

e. Insanity of Party.<sup>72</sup>—The insanity of a party is ground for opening and vacating a judgment, rendered against him without proper representation,<sup>73</sup> or where it prevents him entirely from appearing or defending the action in which the judgment was obtained.<sup>74</sup>

Utah.—Park v. Higbee, 6 Utah 414, 24 Pac. 524.

[a] Where a confirmation judgment had been entered by default after the death of the owner of the property who had, prior to his death, made an appearance, it was proper to set aside such judgment and permit this owner's heirs, who had no knowledge of this proceeding in time to effect a substitution before judgment, to defend. Brueggstradt v. Ludwig, 184 Ill. 24, 43, 56 N. E. 419.

[b] An unreasonable use of this ground of relief may not be made, however. Thus, the personal representatives of a deceased defendant will not be permitted to urge as a ground for vacating the judgment that their decedent died the same day that the judgment was rendered, but an hour before. Mitchell v. Schoonover, 16 Ore. 211, 17 Pac. 867, 8 Am. St. Rep. 282.

[a] Lack of Jurisdiction of Party. It may be that the insanity of a party will operate to prevent the court from obtaining jurisdiction over his person. Thus upon ascertaining that jurisdictional process was served upon a party destitute of legal capacity, the judgment predicated thereon will be set aside. Ash v. Conyers, 2 Miles (Pa.) 94.

4. Jurisdictional Defects.<sup>75</sup> — a. Generally. — Where a court never acquired jurisdiction in an action, a judgment therein rendered may be set aside.<sup>76</sup> But, a party over whom jurisdiction has once been acquired, is bound to thereafter inform himself as to the various steps taken in the cause; a lack of notice of such intermediate proceedings will not warrant the vacation of a judgment subsequently rendered against him.<sup>77</sup>

b. Defects in Service of Process.<sup>78</sup> — It is a generally recognized ground for vacating a judgment that the court, through an omission of, or defect in the service of jurisdictional process, never acquired jurisdiction of the applicant.<sup>79</sup> Irregularities not affecting the juris-

[a] In South Dakota.—Where the summons in an action contains a notice that, if the defendant fail to appear and answer, the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded, and a copy of the complaint is not served with the summons, but which is afterwards filed and states a cause of action in which the summons should have given notice that in the event of the defendant's failing to answer a judgment would be taken against him for a definite sum, it will be conclusively presumed that the defendant was injured by this variance and the judgment against him will be set aside.

St. Paul Harvester Co. v. Forberg, 2 S. D. 357, 50 N. W. 628.

[b] Where personal property was left with A as the agent of B and A thereafter instituted a suit against B and ordered an attachment therein and took judgment by default against B, it seems that B might have such judgment set aside on the ground of breach of trust on the part of A in not notifying him of the attachment on the personalty in his possession as well as upon the ground that he was not served with process. Spooner v. Leland, 5 R. I. 348.

[c] Service of Process on Wrong Person.—Where process was issued against A and served upon B, a judgment on default against A will be set aside on his application therefor, notwithstanding the fact that admittedly the process came to his hands through the hands of B. O'Connell v. Gallagher, 104 App. Div. 492, 93 N. Y. Supp. 643.

[d] Conflict of Evidence as to Jurisdiction.—Where the petition and depositions taken to support the same, show that no service of the writ was made on the defendants, and the defendants swear they had no notice of suit until after judgment was rendered against them for their default, but the sheriff's return shows a legal service, the court will open the judgment to permit the defendants to plead to the jurisdiction of the court. Keyes v. Moorhead, 11 Pa. Co. Ct. 43.

[e] A decree of divorce will be set aside on an application made within the statutory period where it appears that the defendant in such suit had no notice of the pendancy thereof, and this notwithstanding the officer's return to the contrary on the initial process. Locke v. Locke, 18 R. I. 716, 30 Atl. 422.

appears that although the service was defective, the defendant had actual notice of the pendency of the suit.<sup>81</sup>

c. Unauthorized Appearance.—Where the court obtains jurisdiction only by virtue of the unauthorized appearance of an attorney, a judgment subsequently obtained against the party for whom the attorney appeared, will be set aside on motion.<sup>82</sup> In some jurisdictions, however, it must appear that the attorney who entered the appearance is insolvent,<sup>83</sup> while in others this principle is repudiated.<sup>84</sup> A party

[a] The fraud practiced is not that in commencing the action, but in obtaining the judgment. Wheeler v. White, 2 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 584.

[b] Where by agreement of counsel a cause was to be tried at a certain hour in the absence of notice to the contrary, and the plaintiff proceeded at a different time to try the case and obtained a judgment therein, this is fraudulent and sufficient to justify the court in subsequently setting aside such judgment. Harbers v. Tribby, 5 Ill. App. 411. And even though this stipulation or agreement be an oral one, it will, if not disputed, be sufficient for this purpose. Burnham v. Smith, 11 Wis. 258.

any fault of the applicant or his agent,<sup>88</sup> and must arise from some act of the prevailing party.<sup>89</sup>

Deception of an adverse party preventing the applicant from presenting his defense is a common form of fraud within the scope of this rule.<sup>90</sup> Some authorities, too, restrict the operation of this rule to cases where the alleged fraud was one which entered into the actual procurement of the judgment,<sup>91</sup> while others extend it to include cases where the fraud arose in connection with the cause of action.<sup>92</sup> A clear and unqualified<sup>93</sup> promise or agreement whereby the applicant is lulled into a sense of security and induced not to present his cause to the court will, if violated, operate as a fraud upon the party so deceived and entitle him to have the judgment thus obtained set

[a] A petition for this relief is, on this principle, insufficient which recites that a suit was brought against applicant's decedent as surety on a bond; that bond was in German but counted upon in English; that relying upon the averment in the court that decedent was a surety on the bond, applicant pleaded to that state of the case; that in fact decedent was but a witness on the bond. It should have been made to appear further that she had either called for the original bond before pleading, or at least during the trial, or attempted in some way to inform herself. *Fackler v. b. Perjury.—Statutes sometimes provide for the vacation of judgments obtained through perjury.<sup>96</sup> The general rule, however, in the absence of statutes, is that false testimony given by or for the successful party will not justify the vacation of the judgment where it appears that there is sufficient competent evidence, without the testimony thus given, to support the judgment,<sup>97</sup> or where the party aggrieved,

[c] "That the court misconstrued the law" is not such an irregularity as will justify the vacation of the judgment. "Irregularities generally invoked for the purpose of vacating a judgment after term time are where a judgment was entered in favor of the plaintiff before the time for answering had expired, or where the judgment was entered while there was an answer or demurrer on file and not yet disposed of, and other irregularities of this character." [j] Where defendant's last day to plead fell on Sunday, a default entered on the following Monday was, in Rothchild v. Link, 29 App. Div. 580, 51 N. Y. Supp. 253, held irregular.

technicalities or trivial irregularities are not sufficient.<sup>15</sup> The irregularity must, in any event affect the judgment directly, and an error in the taxation of costs will not warrant the vacation of the judgment to which they will attach.<sup>16</sup> Should the irregularity complained of be waived or cured, it is no longer available in support of an application of this nature.<sup>17</sup> In some jurisdictions it is held that the irregularity upon which the motion is predicated must be apparent from an inspection of the record,<sup>18</sup> but this rule has its exceptions as, for instance, where a judgment, otherwise apparently regular, was admittedly rendered against a deceased defendant.<sup>19</sup>

Errors of law, involving the exercise of judicial discretion, cannot be reached by proceedings to open or vacate the judgment.<sup>19a</sup> Error

[a] "The judgment could not have been struck off on the application of the defendant, as there was no irregularity on the face of the record. 'A motion to set aside or strike off a judgment must be on the ground of irregularity appearing on the face of the record; a motion to open it is an appeal to the equitable power of the court to let the defendant into a defense.' . . . The distinction between these rules is very frequently overlooked in practice, and at times, owing to the admission of facts not in the record, it has not been observed in the language of the decisions." Hall v. West Chester Publishing Co., 180 Pa. 561, 37 Atl. 106.

See generally the statutes.

The mistake of the applicant is generally offered as an excuse for his neglect. See infra, XIV, B, 9.

[a] Mistake of Court and Counsel. A complaint was dismissed as being defective, an amendment being refused, though requested, the court stating that instead the plaintiff might bring a new action. Subsequently it was discovered that the statute of limitations would not permit this to be done. The judgment was accordingly vacated on the ground of mistake. Patterson v. Hochster, 21 App. Div. 432, 47 N. Y. Supp. 553.

[b] A mistake in the docket may excuse the default of a party as where the cause was entered under a wrong name. Clifford v. Gruelle, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 842, 32 S. W. 937.

[c] A mistake of date of service of summons is such a one as these statutes purpose to remedy. Miller v. Carr, 116 which prevents a party from prosecuting or defending, is the language found in some statutes.<sup>21</sup> Under these statutes the only mistake for which this relief will be granted, however, is a mistake of fact; a mistake of law being beyond the purview of their provisions.<sup>22</sup>

Cal. 378, 48 Pac. 324, 58 Am. St. Rep. 180, involving §473, Cal. Code Civ. Proc., 1916.

[d] A mistake in a regularly issued publication, relied upon in such matters by the business community, whereby the defendant was misled, will justify the opening of the judgment therein rendered. Watson v. San Francisco R. Co., 41 Cal. 17.

[e] Mistake as to the court in which the party's suit was pending is not such a mistake as will entitle him to have the judgment opened. Robertson v. Bergen, 10 Ind. 402.

[f] Mistake of Counsel.—"The mistake or ignorance of a party's counsel will not relieve him from a judgment against him." Wilson v. Smith, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 188, 43 S. W. 1086.

[g] Mistake as to Time of Trial. It is no excuse that a party misunderstood his attorney's statement as to the time of trial. Ross v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 92 Ky. 583, 18 S. W. 456.

[a] "Casualty or misfortune is something more than mere ignorance of the service of process by leaving a copy at the residence of the defendant, arising from his absence on business. There may be casualty or misfortune where all the facts are known, as well as when they are not. I cannot, but think that this provision was intended to apply, in a case where, some accidental injury or sickness, etc., has intervened to prevent a defense, rather than a want of knowledge of the service of summons arising from the cause stated." Howard v. Abbey, 2 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 64.

[b] The act of an attorney in dishonestly permitting a judgment to be taken by default is an "unavoidable casualty" within the statute. Anthony v. Karbach, 64 Neb. 509, 90 N. W. 243, 97 Am. St. Rep. 662.

[a] A "mistake," within the meaning of these statutes occurs where something right or wrong, is done which was not intended to be done; not when something, even admittedly wrong is done, if done advisedly. Sargent v. Kindred, 5 N. D. 8, 63 N. W. 151.

[b] On this principle judgments by consent are without the purview of these statutes. Boyden v. Williams, 80 N. C. 95.

[c] Mistake of Law.—The opinion entertained by a defendant that no one but an officer could serve a summons upon him in a civil action, being a mistake of law, will not excuse his failure to appear and defend a suit where the summons was served by an individual not a party. Sing Yow v. Wong Free Lee, 16 S. D. 383, 92 N. W. 1073.

[a] Where defendant's counsel withdrew from the case and opposing counsel promised defendant that they would take no further steps in the matter without first giving him notice and thereafter gave him so short a notice that he was not able to get to the court house in time to prevent the entering up of the judgment attacked, "he should not be made to suffer for the default of the party upon whose promise he relied, by reason of which he was led into a seeming neglect of his cause," and he should be relieved against a judgment thus obtained. Field & Co. v. Fowler, 62 Tex. 65.

[b] An affidavit filed the day after the entry of a default judgment, reciting that the affiant believed a compromise had been effected and therefore permitted the case to go by default, was considered as showing a case of excusable neglect. Sedberry v. Jones, 42 Tex. 10.

[c] A judgment entered upon a stipulation but in violation of its terms, is a judgment taken through "surprise" and the defendant's neglect is consequently excusable. Durham v. Com. Nat. Bank, 45 Ore. 385, 77 Pac. 902.

[d] A judgment obtained contrary to the agreement of the parties to extend defendant's time to answer is one obtained through his "surprise and excusable neglect." Thompson v. Connell, 31 Ore. 231, 48 Pac. 467, 65 Am. St. Rep. 818, but this will not always relieve the defendant. See Kerchner v. Baker, 82 N. C. 169.

[e] Where a compromise was made of a litigated claim, whether or not the agent of the adverse party who effected such compromise was authorized is immaterial, so long as it is shown that the applicant was in this manner deceived and led to make no defense. Mitchell & Co. v. Knight, 3 Ohio Cir. Dec. 729, and for a similar case see Minnesota Thresher Co. v. Holz, 10 N. D. 16, 84 N. W. 581.

[f] Promise of Infant To Dismiss Suit.—Where the plaintiff, although an infant, had promised defendant to dismiss the suit, and in reliance upon such promise defendant had suffered a default, the judgment thereupon rendered ciency of a notice;<sup>28</sup> or was caused by the delay of the adverse party in prosecuting the suit in which the judgment was had;<sup>29</sup> or by the serious illness of the party;<sup>30</sup> or by the party's ignorance, either of the existence of a defense or the proper manner of its presentation;<sup>31</sup> or by a mistake of the clerk of the court;<sup>32</sup> or by the stress of official will be set aside. Cadwallader v. McClay, 37 Neb. 359, 55 N. W. 1054, 40 Am. St. Rep. 496.

28. Rosenberg v. Hassett, 86 N. Y. Supp. 865; Flanders v. Sherman, 18 Wis. 575.

[a] Where service was made upon a director of a defendant corporation, and it was made to appear that the director was unfriendly to the corporation to whom he gave no notice of the service upon him of process, the defendant, upon showing a meritorious defense to the action, was entitled to have set aside a judgment rendered against it by default. Farrar v. Consolidated, etc. Co., 12 S. D. 237, 80 N. W. 1079. And see to the same effect Condon Hdw. Co. v. Consolidated Apex Min. Co., 11 S. D. 376, 77 N. W. 1022.

[b] Plaintiff noticed the cause for trial and obtained a place on the general calendar. Afterwards he ascertained that the case should have been placed upon the equity calendar. He obtained an ex parte order transferring it thereto where it received a different number. No notice was given defendant of this transfer and when case was reached, defendant not appearing, a judgment as on default was given. It was held that the default of the defendant was clearly due to the wrong or fault of plaintiff and the default should be opened. Rosenberg v. Hassett, 86 N. Y. Supp. 865.

[a] Where a judgment by default was rendered upon a promissory note given for a patent right and it appeared that the right was of much less value than was represented by the patentee at the time of the execution of the note, but the inutility of the machine patented was not sufficiently known to the defendant at the time of the rendition of the judgment to afford him any opportunity to interpose a defense thereto on that ground, the court will vacate the judgment and permit the defendant to present his defense. Burnham v. Brewster, 1 Vt. 87.

[b] Where the neglect of the applicant was due to the fact that he mistook his remedy and spent considerable time in pursuing a wrong one, his failure to make proper application will be excused. Adams's Appeal, 101 Pa. 471.

[c] Where defendant showed upon his application to have the judgment opened that he could read only very imperfectly and that he misunderstood a notification from his attorney to appear for trial on Tuesday and was not present until the following Tuesday which was, as he thought, the time for trial, whereupon he immediately moved to open the judgment it was held that his failure to appear at the proper time was an "excusable mistake." Hanthorn v. Oliver, 32 Ore. 57, 51 Pac. 440. 32. Silverman v. Childs, 107 Ill. App. 522.

[a] Where the defendant failed to appear at the trial because of the negligence of the court's clerk in failing to make a proper transfer from one calendar to another the court may, at duties;<sup>33</sup> and generally, wherever, although attentive and diligent, the party was unable to present his cause for the consideration of the court.<sup>34</sup> On the other hand, it has been held to be no excuse for a party's neglect that it was caused by the stress of ordinary business;<sup>35</sup> or by his failure to inform his attorney as to matters concerning his defense;<sup>36</sup> or by the party's mistake as to a matter of fact, where, by due diligence, he would have discovered such mistake;<sup>37</sup> or by the a subsequent term, set aside or vacate a judgment thus obtained. Silverman v. Childs, 107 Ill. App. 522.

[b] Where a party was misled by a clerical error in the process and suffered, unwittingly, a default to be had against him, his neglect was excused in Browning v. Gosnell, 91 Iowa 448, 59 N. W. 340, but where his application shows that he was not thereby misled, the error in the process will avail him nothing. Irions v. Keystone Mfg. Co., 61 Iowa 406, 16 N. W. 349.

33. Francks v. Sutton, 86 N. C. 78.

34. Where a pleading was lost in the mails, although mailed to the clerk of the court in ample time, a judgment thereupon taken by default will be opened, on a showing of merits. Boyd v. Williams, 70 N. J. L. 185, 56 Atl. 135.

[a] Defendant filed a counterclaim and before plaintiff had replied thereto, without notice to plaintiff's counsel, who was a resident of another county, and who wrote several letters to the clerk of the county in which the cause was being tried asking as to the date of trial thereof, defendant set the case for trial on motion. Plaintiff's failure to appear at the time of trial was considered excusable and the judgment was set aside. Western Loan, etc. Co. v. Berg, 24 Utah 278, 67 Pac. 669.

[b] Where it appeared that the defendant against whom a judgment was rendered by default was absent from the state on business during the proceedings leading up to the entry of the judgment from which relief was sought; that he had engaged counsel to represent him and to defend the action; that through accident he did not receive a letter addressed to him by his counsel, who about this time withdrew from the case without notice to defendant; that defendant, upon learning of this withdrawal at once engaged other counsel, it was considered that he was not guilty of negligence. Utah Commercial Bank v. Trumbo, 17 Utah 198, 53 Pac. 1033.

[a] Counsel's inability to attend because of other important business will not excuse his absence. Wilson v. Scott, 50 Mo. App. 329.

36. Sluder v. Rollins, 76 N. C. 271.

37. The application showed that applicant had employed counsel and had mailed to him whatever papers were served upon her; that applicant is an old lady, living alone, with nobody to advise her; that there was another action pending between the same parties in reference to the same subject-matter; that she supposed the papers related to that action. A general demurrer to the application was sustained. Williams v. Heisley, 4 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 273.

[a] Where a party misunderstood his attorney's statement as to the time of trial and was consequently absent, his mistake is not such as will render his neglect excusable. Ross v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 92 Ky. 583, 18 S. W. 456.

[b] Where defendant, (1) being served with summons, paid no attention thereto, supposing it to be some notice or other paper in another suit then pending between the same parties, his neglect was held inexcusable. White v. Snow, 71 N. C. 232. (2) And in a similar case the defendant, supposing the summons to be a subpoena, did not read it. This was held not to excuse his default. State v. O'Neill, 4 Mo. App. 221.

[c] Where a defendant was sued in his individual and representative capacity but, on account of gross indifference to the proceedings did not dis-negligence,<sup>38</sup> or sickness of an agent;<sup>39</sup> or by financial difficulties,<sup>40</sup> and, mere forgetfulness;<sup>41</sup> or passive inattention, will not excuse the party's neglect.<sup>42</sup>

The inability of counsel to attend the trial will be sufficient to excuse the failure of the party to present his cause at the proper time if this inability of counsel was sudden and of such a nature as to cover that he was being sued in his individual capacity, this mistake will not entitle him to relief from the judgment subsequently rendered on the ground of excusable neglect. Williamson v. Cocke, 124 N. C. 585, 32 S. E. 963.

[d] An affidavit reciting that the defendant was absent at the time set for the trial of the cause for the reason that he mistook the distance he would have to travel on a journey he had undertaken and was therefore detained longer than he had anticipated, is not sufficient to excuse his neglect. Almy v. Hess, 2 Utah 223.

39. Where the agent of the plaintiff, who alone was familiar with the facts of the case at bar, was sick and unable to give this information to his principal, but where it further appeared that this agent had, at the time of their occurrence, reported the facts to his principal, and there was no showing of diligence, the principal's neglect was held inexcusable. *Fliedner v. [a] In Depriest v. Patterson, 85 N. C. 376, the defendant was sick when process was served upon him, he told the officer making the service that he, the defendant, thought service was being made upon the wrong man, and understood that the officer was to find out about this and let him know before making a return of the summons. The officer did not do this and judgment was taken against him. His neglect was held inexcusable.

[b] Where defendant, upon being served with notice of motion for leave to issue execution, stated to the sheriff that he, the defendant, had a discharge in bankruptcy, and requested the sheriff to write to the plaintiff about it (they both thinking this sufficient to defeat the motion) and then paid no further attention to the case, his neglect was inexcusable and an order granting the motion for execution will not be set aside. Hiatt v. Waggoner, 82 N. C. 173.

[c] A judgment is not taken against a party through his "mistake and surprise" simply because he "did not know of it, unless the law requires him to be notified, when the means of knowledge were accessible, and he simply failed or neglected to avail himself thereof." Brand v. Baker, 42 Ore. 426, 71 Pac. 320.

preclude the idea that other arrangements might have been made.<sup>43</sup> But the mere fact that counsel retained by a party was unable to appear for him is not sufficient; he must show further that he had no opportunity to employ other counsel and proceed with the cause.<sup>44</sup> The ignorance of a party as to a matter of law will not, as a general rule, excuse his failure to present his cause of action or defense.<sup>45</sup>

[a] A railroad accident by which counsel was prevented from attending at the time of trial was held to excuse the resultant neglect in Stoppelfeldt v. Milwaukee, etc. R. Co., 29 Wis. 688.

[b] In People v. Brett, 79 App. Div. 631, 79 N. Y. Supp. 709, it was said, the applicant's counsel "was absent from the county on his wedding trip when the original motion was returnable, and the brief time (two days) allowed by the learned special term in appellant's absence proved entirely unavailing for a proper exhibition of his side of the controversy on the merits. We think he should be allowed his day in court."

[c] Where counsel were subpoenaed and were in attendance as witnesses in another department, a continuance should have been granted and a judgment on default rendered under such circumstances should be set aside. Hopkins v. Meyer, 76 App. Div. 365, 78 N. Y. Supp. 459.

[d] Sickness of Counsel.—Counsel's inability to attend to the cause on account of sickness will excuse party's neglect where the sickness was sudden and precludes the idea that other arrangements might have been made. Snell v. Iowa Homestead Co., 67 Iowa 405, 25 N. W. 678.

[b] Several continuances had already been granted to defendant who, when the case was again reached, stated that his counsel was not present and that he desired a further continuance that he might engage other counsel, but he neither stated why his counsel was absent nor when he first discovered that he would not be present. His default was entered and a refusal to open was affirmed in Greenberg v. Angerman, 84 N. Y. Supp. 244.

[c] An affidavit which recited that "through the neglect of said counsel, or absence from C— . . ., said counsel having been delayed, hindered and detained at M— . . ., defendant was prevented from appearing and answering," was held insufficient to excuse the negligence of the applicant. Sanborn v. Centralia Furniture Co., 5 Wash. 150, 31 Pac. 466.

[a] Where a suit was against the makers of a joint and several note, although there is authority to the contrary.<sup>46</sup> In any event, it must appear, on an application for relief on the ground of excusable neglect that the applicant has been as diligent as might, under the attending circumstances, be expected of a prudent man.<sup>47</sup>

b. Neglect or Misconduct of Attorney.—Although occasionally altered by statute,<sup>48</sup> it is a generally accepted rule that the negligence of an attorney will be visited upon his client, and that relief on that ground may not ordinarily be had.<sup>49</sup> This rule is not inflexible, however, and where, in the light of the attendant circumstances, to deny relief sought on this ground would be manifestly unjust, the force of all of whom were served with process except one, and a judgment by default was rendered against the defendants served, the fact that they supposed no judgment could be had against them until the remaining defendant had been served will not entitle them to have the judgment set aside; their ignorance of the law cannot be considered as excusing their neglect. Pierce v. Cole, 17 Tex. 259.

[b] A party may not have a judgment and the case reopened "upon the ground that his counsel was ignorant of the law or the facts of the case," or that "the client had neglected to inform his counsel of evidence material to his defense." Wilson v. Smith, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 188, 43 S. W. 1086.

[c] The defendant, a corporation, was served with summons, but, supposing that it would be necessary to also be served with the complaint before judgment could be taken against it, took no steps, either to inform itself upon this point, or to make a defense. This neglect was held inexcusable in Churchill v. Brooklyn Life Ins. Co., 88 N. C. 205.

[d] A distinction has been observed between "ignorance of the law" and unfamiliarity with rules of practice and so where a defendant attempted, in good faith to appear and defend an action against him but was prevented from so doing by his ignorance of the practice of the court, this will excuse his seeming neglect. Marx v. Epstein, 1 White & W. Civ. Cas. (Tex.), §1317.

46. Where a defendant was sued in his capacity as executor, the validity of the will concerned being in dispute, he erroneously supposed he would not be required to answer until after the will under which he was acting had been admitted to probate, consequently suffered a default to be taken against

[b] A judgment by default will not be set aside where it appears that general counsel for the defendant, a corporation, was served with process twelve days before appearance day; that he forwarded the same to the attorneys charged with the defense of the case three days before appearance day, who because of unforeseen difficulties did not file an answer. Missouri, K. & T. Ry. Co. v. Davidson, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 134, 60 S. W. 278.

[c] A party cannot claim that a judgment was taken against him because of mistake, etc., where the immediate cause was the negligence of his counsel in not examining public records. Martin v. Fowler, 51 S. C. 164, 28 S. E. 312.

[d] Where a defendant handed the process which had been served upon him to his attorney, directing him as he did so to make a defense to the action, a judgment by default will not be set aside at his request, the negligence of his attorney being deemed his own. Schroder v. Eason, 2 Nott & McC. (S. C.) 291. Compare, Sargent v. Wilson, 2 McCord (S. C.) 512.

[e] Where a judgment was opened on condition that the applicant pay into court certain costs of the adverse party, and the applicant gave to his attorney a sufficient sum of money to comply with the terms imposed but the attorney neglected to pay the money into court and the judgment became final, the negligence of the attorney will be visited upon his client upon a subsequent application to open the judgment thus made final. [a] "In this case the party retained an attorney to enter a plea for him. That an attorney should fail to perform an engagement to do such an act as that, we think, may fairly be considered a surprise on the client, and that the omission of the client to examine the records in order to ascertain that it had been done was an excusable neglect." Griel v. Vernon, 65 N. C. 76.

[b] Where it appeared that the applicant was not represented in the cause on account of a mistake between his attorney and himself as to whether or not the attorney was employed in the case and where, upon discovering such mistake, applicant moved promptly for relief therefrom, the court should have set aside a judgment thus obtained. Panesi v. Boswell, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 323.

[c] The test, as laid down in Brand v. Baker, 42 Ore. 426, 71 Pac. 320, is whether or not the conduct of the attorney is such as would be excusable if attributable to the party himself.

[d] Where an attorney, unknown to his client, has absconded and left the cause undefended, the party will be relieved. Ennis v. Fourth St. Bldg. Assn., 102 Iowa 520, 71 N. W. 426, under the Iowa statute giving relief from "unavoidable casualty or misfortune."

Mebane*, 80 N. C. 34; Bradford v. Coit, 77 N. C. 72. See also Brown v. Hale, 93 N. C. 188.

[a] In Taylor v. Pope, 106 N. C. 267, 11 S. E. 257, 19 Am. St. Rep. 530, the defendant employed counsel to represent him at the return term and himself remained at court four days, reminding his counsel, who was there, that he had been served with a summons returnable there and then. His counsel assured him that "he would attend to the case." Defendant thereupon left the court. Counsel was negligent and defendant's default was entered. His "neglect" was held excusable.

[b] In Griel v. Vernon, 65 N. C.

76, this was placed upon the ground that the failure of an attorney to enter a plea for a defendant who had engaged him to do this might well operate as a surprise upon the defendant and that his neglect to examine the records to see if his plea had been entered was excusable. And see also Bradford v. Coit, 77 N. C. 72, wherein the relief was based on the ground of excusable neglect, however, the court saying, "... that where a party employs counsel to enter his plea and the counsel neglects it, in consequence of which judgment is given against the party, it is excusable neglect in the party and the judgment may be vacated."

[c] Where a party defendant who resided in a part of the state far distant from the place where the action was brought, retained counsel in this last mentioned place to put in a defense for him and informed him as to the merits thereof, the act of the attorney in putting in an unverified answer to meet a verified complaint, will not be attributed to any lack of diligence on the part of the defendant and a default judgment taken against him for want of an answer will be set aside on his timely application. Gwathney v. Savage, 101 N. C. 103, 7 S. E. 661.

[a] Defendant's counsel was informed by the court's clerk that no business would be transacted by the court until after a certain date. Relying thereupon the attorney did not appear to urge a demurrer interposed by him which was heard before that time. His demurrer was overruled and default entered. Held that his negligence was, under the circumstances, excusable. Anaconda Min. Co. v. Saile, 16 Mont. 8, 39 Pac. 909, 50 Am. St. Rep. 472.

able to the adverse party.<sup>53</sup> In any event, it must be made to appear that the plight of the applicant is not due, in any measure, to his own negligence or misconduct.<sup>54</sup> The employment of counsel does not relieve a party from all attention to the case. He must yet give the matter such consideration and attention as a man of ordinary prudence usually gives to his important business.<sup>55</sup>

c. Erroneous Advice of Counsel.—It has been held that erroneous advice given a party by his attorney as to the necessity of a defense will excuse the party's neglect,<sup>56</sup> although the weight of authority seems to be to the contrary.<sup>57</sup>

[a] Where counsel for defendant did not appear because opposing counsel failed to notify him according to agreement. Beatty v. O'Connor, 106 Ind. 81, 5 N. E. 880.

[b] In a motion to set aside a default judgment it appeared that an answer to the petition in the cause had not been drawn because the plaintiff's attorney had taken the petition from the files and defendant's counsel was thus prevented from framing an answer thereto. This was held sufficient to excuse the seeming neglect of defendant's counsel in Selberg v. Davidson, 4 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 270.

[a] A party "will be protected against the mistake or neglect of his attorney if it is shown that he has given reasonable attention to his interest. But he may not stand by for years without inquiry as to the situation of an action brought against him, and then ask that the court repair his own neglect on the ground that counsel had forgotten, when first employed, to enter an appearance." Boyer v. Jones, 1 Woodw. (Pa.) 498.

[b] But the party will not be compelled to exhaust every means available. Thus where the petition to which it was desired to draw an answer had been taken from the files, as it appeared, to prevent defendant from answering, he will not be compelled to have sought an order of court for their return in order that he may subsequently have a judgment, rendered for want of his answer, set aside; to require this would be to permit the plaintiff to take advantage of his own wrong. Selberg v. Davidson, 4 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 270.

12. Waiver of Grounds.—It frequently happens that grounds for this relief which are both adequate and available are, by some act or omission of the parties, waived and forever lost.<sup>77</sup> For instance, the rule is well settled that, in moving to set aside a judgment for want of jurisdiction, the applicant must appear specially for that purpose and keep out of court for all others,<sup>78</sup> an appearance for any other purpose than to question the jurisdiction of the court being considered

77. Grant v. Birdsall, 16 Jones & S. (N. Y.) 427; Hays v. Com., 14 Pa. 39. See also Nat. Mut. B. & L. Assn. v. Kondrak, 9 Kulp (Pa.) 14.

[a] The ground of fraud may be lost in this manner. Nat. Mut. B. & L. Assn. v. Kondrak, 9 Kulp (Pa.) 14.

[b] The payment of the amount of a judgment may amount to a waiver of grounds for opening the judgment. Thus where the defendant obtained a rule to open a judgment, conditioned upon securing the sheriff in the amount of his levy, and, instead of giving such security, the defendant paid the amount of the execution, it was held that payment under such circumstances was voluntary and the defendant was not entitled to have the judgment opened. Murphy v. Cawley, 7 Kulp (Pa.) 128.

[c] An agreement between the parties for a stay of execution and the subsequent payment by the defendant of a part of the judgment may amount to a waiver of the ground of irregularity as, by his acts, the defendant has impliedly recognized its regularity. Drummond v. Lang, 10 Sad. 627, 12 Atl. 658.

As to the nature and effect of appearance see the title "Appearances."

[a] "A party cannot come into court, challenging its proceedings on account of irregularities, and after being overruled be heard to say that he never was a party in court, or bound by those proceedings. If he was not in fact a party, and had not been properly served, he can have the proceedings set aside on the ground of want of jurisdiction, but he must challenge the proceedings on that single ground. This is familiar doctrine." Burdette v. Corgan, 26 Kan. 102.

[b] It is not enough that the appearance be made solely for the purpose of having the judgment set aside; if the motion involves the merits of the case and is not made upon the single ground that the court is without jurisdiction it is essentially a general appearance and the fact that it is denominated a special appearance will not alter the nature thereof. Scott v. Mutual Reserve Life Association, 137 N. C. 515, 50 S. E. 221.

[c] But see Stewart v. Parsons, 5 N. D. 273, 65 N. W. 672, where the court held that where the applicant appeared to contest the jurisdiction of the court, and recited in his notice of motion that he would also ask for "such other and further relief as the court may deem just" that although this was in the nature of a general appearance it would not strip the applicant of his right to relief.

[d] The reason for this rule as expressed in Scott v. Mutual Reserve Life Assn., 137 N. C. 515, 518, 50 S. E. 221, is, "a party cannot be permitted to occupy so ambiguous a position. He cannot deny the authority of the court to take cognizance of an action or proceeding, and, at the same time, seek a judgment in his favor on the ground that his adversary's allegations are false, or that his proofs are insufficient."

[e] On this principle a defendant who has appeared in court on supplementary proceedings may not thereafter have the judgment therein set a general one, and amounting to a waiver of this objection.<sup>79</sup> Thus, a motion made on a ground which is inconsistent with the claim that the judgment is void for want of jurisdiction, constitutes a submission on the part of the movant to the jurisdiction of the court,<sup>80</sup> as where the motion is made on the ground that the costs were excessive or unwarranted,<sup>81</sup> or that the judgment was irregularly entered,<sup>82</sup> or that the action was prosecuted under a champertous agreement.<sup>83</sup> This objection is not lost, however, by an appearance for the purpose of obtaining relief on the ground of want of jurisdiction.<sup>84</sup> The right to rely upon irregularities such as would otherwise provide ample grounds for the granting of this relief may also be lost by waiver,<sup>85</sup> as, also, may the objection that an appearance of an attorney was, as to the applicant, unauthorized.<sup>86</sup> But a general appearance will not purge aside on the ground that the service of summons was irregular. Grant v. Birdsall, 16 Jones & S. (N. Y.) 427.

[a] This ground, lack of jurisdiction, may be lost or waived even by a faulty or ineffectual appearance as where, in resisting an application for this relief made on petition, where service of the summons thereupon issued was made constructively, a demurrer on the ground of the insufficiency of the petition, although unauthorized and unavailing, amounts to a submission to the jurisdiction of the court. *Whitehead v. [a] Taking a premature default is an irregularity which will suffice to open the judgment if moved against at once; but where no steps are taken to have the judgment vacated this irregularity will be deemed to have been waived. Bell v. Morrow, 38 Wash. Law Rep. (D. C.) 655.

[b] Irregularities in Service of Notice.—The objection that the adverse party was not properly served with notice of this application may be lost in this manner. Whitehead v. Post, 2 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 468, 3 W. L. Bul. 195.

[a] Where an attorney confesses judgment against several partners, under authority derived from only one, the omission of the other partners, after notice, to make immediate application to the court to open the judgment as to them, and permitting their lands to be levied upon and sold, will conclude them from thereafter seeking this relief against the sheriff's vendee. *Cyphert v. As to equitable relief against judgments see infra, XV.

[a] "A court has inherent power to vacate its judgments . . . at any time during the term, but after that time it can only do so in pursuance of the provisions of the statute." Brand v. Baker, 42 Ore. 426, 71 Pac. 320.

[b] The fact that after a final judgment against the defendant in an attachment proceeding is rendered some matters relating to the garnishee are to be determined at the next term will not extend the court's jurisdiction so as to include the power to vacate the judgment at such subsequent term. Baldwin v. McClelland, 152 Ill. 42, 38 N. E. 143.

[c] The reason for such a rule is aptly expressed by a quotation from Lord Coke in Lee v. State, 32 Ohio St. 113: "During the term wherein any judicial act is done, the record remaineth in the breast of the judges of the court and in their remembrance, and therefore the roll is alterable during that term, as the judges shall direct; but when that term is past, then the record is in the roll, and admitteth of no alteration, averment, or proof to the contrary."

[d] Statutes dispensing with writs of error coram nobis do not affect this rule, their only object being to dispense with this old writ and give to a motion the same efficacy. Coursen v. Hixon, 78 Ill. 339; Baragwanath v. Wilson, 4 Ill. App. 80. See Fix v. Quinn, 75 Ill. 232.

[e] In Illinois, county courts may, in the administration of insolvent estates under the act relating to assignments for the benefit of creditors, so long as the estate remains undistributed, even though it be at a subsequent term, take any action which advertence, surprise or excusable neglect,<sup>91</sup> or provide that courts may vacate their judgments after the term, on specified grounds.<sup>92</sup>

b. Exceptions. — (I.) Generally. — Judgments which are interlocutory, and not final,<sup>93</sup> and judgments by confession, are not affected by this limitation and may, in a proper case, be set aside at any time.<sup>93½</sup>

(II.) Motion Continued to Subsequent Term. — An application for this relief, made during the judgment term, and thereupon continued to a subsequent term, may be heard and disposed of at the term to which the matter is thus continued.<sup>94</sup> would have been proper at the current term (Weil v. Hart, 73 Ill. App. 364; Mowatt v. Cole, 59 Ill. App. 345), but when the matter is once finally disposed of the court's power to act in this manner may not be exercised at a subsequent term. Stettauer v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 62 Ill. App. 31.

[f] If the judgment was entered in vacation the application to vacate or set aside may be made at any time during the term next succeeding that at which the judgment was rendered. Egan v. Sengpiel, 46 Wis. 703, 1 N. W. 467.

92. Ia.—§4091, Code, 1897. Ky. §518, Civ. Code Pr., 1906. Ohio. §5354, Bates' Ann. St., 5th ed.

[a] Statutes which thus provide for relief after the judgment term do not apply to or control applications made during the term. Streeter v. Gleason, 120 Iowa 703, 95 N. W. 242; McConnell v. Avery, 117 Iowa 282, 90 N. W. 604. See the section following.

93. D. C.—See Fletcher v. Lipscomb, 36 App. Cas. 47. Mo.—In the Matter of Marquis, 85 Mo. 615. N. M.—Bent v. Miranda, 8 N. M. 78, 42 Pac. 91. Ohio. Potter, etc. Co. v. Jennman, 4 Ohio Dec. 444, 4 Ohio N. P. 78. W. Va. Barbour County Court v. O'Neal, 42 W. Va. 295, 26 S. E. 182; Rheims v. Standard Fire Ins. Co., 39 W. Va. 672, 20 S. E. 670; Clarke v. Ohio River R. Co., 39 W. Va. 732, 20 S. E. 696.

[a] In Lunacy Proceedings.—This general rule limiting the power of the court to the judgment term does not apply to judgments declaring one insane. Thus it was said in the Matter of Marquis, 85 Mo. 615, "The correctness of the principle . . . may be conceded, but we think the application of it in Dutcher v. Hill, 29 Mo. 271, 77 Am. Dec. 572, is denied to cases of inquest of lunacy where irregularities appear upon the face of the proceedings. It was ruled in that case that: 'The proceedings under the law concerning insane persons are not like a final judgment, which is unalterable after the end of the term at which it was rendered. They are in fieri, like a cause pending, and irregularities in them or defects of record may be obviated at any time so long as the lunatic is under the control of the guardian appointed for him.'"

(III.) Consent. — A court may open or vacate a judgment rendered by it at a prior term when the interested parties consent thereto,<sup>95</sup> though there are authorities to the contrary.<sup>96</sup>

(IV.) Fraud. — A judgment which has been obtained through fraud or collusion may be opened or set aside at a subsequent term.<sup>97</sup>

(V.) Irregularities. — In some jurisdictions a judgment may be set aside after the term, for substantial irregularities in the proceedings

[a] "A motion to set aside a judgment strikes at its validity, and when filed at the term at which the judgment was rendered and continued to the next term has the effect to suspend the judgment so that the court can act upon the motion the same as at the prior term. The proceedings remain in the breast of the court until the motion is disposed of . . ." Childs v. Kansas City, St. J., etc. Ry. Co., 117 Mo. 414, 23 S. W. 373.

[b] A continuance by consent operates in the same manner. James Sons & Co. v. Gott, 55 Wis. 223, 47 S. E. 649; Baker v. Baker, 51 Wis. 538, 8 N. W. 289.

[c] Continuance by General Order. For this purpose an oral motion, entered upon the records of the court is sufficient (Hartman v. Viera, 113 Ill. App. 216) and it is not necessary that an order be made continuing that particular motion but a general order, made during the term, continuing all causes pending not otherwise disposed of is sufficient (Hartman v. Viera, supra), and in jurisdictions where it is provided by statute that all "causes and proceedings pending and undisposed of . . . shall stand continued till the next term." (Ill. R. S. 1901, 552) such continuance would occur by reason of the statute (Hartman v. Viera, supra).

ment . . . That agreement may either be submitted in writing, or orally stated in the presence of the court; and we think it may in some cases be fairly implied from the solemn acts of the parties in their dealings with the court." Philadelphia v. Coulston, 118 Pa. 541, 12 Atl. 604.

[b] But a court is not compelled by such an agreement of the parties to set a judgment aside. Kidd v. McMillan, 21 Ala. 325.

96. Little Rock v. Bullock, 6 Ark. 282; Anderson v. Thompson, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 259.

[a] In Little Rock v. Bullock, 6 Ark. 282, the court says: "The court not having the power to reopen the cause, it could not be done by consent of the parties, for consent cannot confer jurisdiction."

[b] Where, however, the court is, by statute empowered to grant this relief at a subsequent term, the consent does not confer jurisdiction or authority; it simply amounts to a stipulation that grounds for this relief exist. Nat. Home, etc. v. Overholser, 64 Ohio St. 517, 60 N. E. 628.

[d] There is a well marked distinction to be observed in this connection between a judgment which is irregular and one which is erroneous. The former may be summarily set aside at a subsequent term but the latter cannot. Thus, it is said in Orvis v. Elliott, 65 Mo. App. 96, "While courts have the power to set aside, because of irregularities, their judgments on motions filed after the term at which the same are rendered, it is well settled that where the judgment is merely erroneous, such relief must be sought by a motion filed during the judgment term."

if its invalidity must be shown by matter dehors the record, relief cannot be obtained by motion after the term.<sup>3</sup>

(VII.) Subsequently Occurring Facts. — The court may, at a subsequent term, vacate a judgment where facts have occurred after judgment,<sup>4</sup> or before judgment but at such a time as to render them unavailing to the party,<sup>5</sup> from which it appears that the judgment should not be enforced against the applicant.

3. In the Absence of Terms. — In those jurisdictions where terms of court have been abolished it is considered that the power of the court to vacate or set aside its judgment exists up to,<sup>6</sup> but not after, the entry of such judgment on the record.<sup>7</sup> Thereafter the court has only such power in this regard as is conferred by statute.<sup>8</sup>

4. After and Pending an Appeal. — The power of a court of original jurisdiction to open or vacate its judgment is not lost simply because an appeal therefrom has been perfected;<sup>9</sup> it may, nevertheless,

As to the statutes governing the time within which proceedings must be taken to set aside a judgment, see infra, XIV, E, 2, d.

[a] Under statutes which provide that after the expiration of a certain period from the rendition of a judgment, where no appeal is perfected within that time, the power of the court over such judgment is lost, the passing of this statutory period operates upon the authority of the court to grant this relief in the same manner as the passing of the judgment term at common law. Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Johnson, 16 Lea (Tenn.) 387.

[b] In New Mexico in Weaver v. Weaver, 16 N. M. 98, 113 Pac. 599, the court says: "For ordinary cases, at least, the time within which a judgment can be vacated, is limited. If the court rendering the judgment has terms, its control of the judgment is usually limited to the term at which it was rendered. . . . But in this jurisdiction in view of the provisions of sec. 2875, C. L. 1897, that the district courts in several counties 'shall be at all times in session,' for the numerous purposes named in the statute, it can hardly be said that there are terms of court except for purposes connected with jury trials (citing Territory ex rel. Hubbell v. Armijo, 14 N. M. 202, 89 Pac. 275). That condition may possibly have the effect of limiting the literal meaning of Chap. 26, Laws of 1905, fixing a limit of sixty days for setting aside a judgment rendered on default 'out of term time.' But, C. L. 1897, sec. 2685, subsec. 137 (now §423, 1915, N. M. Sts.) plainly applies to all judgments and provides that they may be set aside for irregularity at any time within one year after rendition."

be exercised until, but not after, an affirmance thereof in the appellate tribunal.<sup>10</sup> The courts of some jurisdictions, however, differentiate in the application of this rule between those cases which involve errors of such a nature as to be available on an appeal and those which do not, holding that it is only judgments of the former class which may not be opened or vacated after an affirmance,<sup>11</sup> and that if the error on which the application is based is of such a nature that it could not be noticed on appeal, this relief may be granted, even after an affirmance.<sup>12</sup>

5. After Execution and Satisfaction.—A court may, if the dictates of justice require, open a judgment notwithstanding an execution may have been issued thereon.<sup>13</sup> Indeed, it has been held proper to do this even after the judgment has been satisfied,<sup>14</sup> although in such a case a very clear and strong showing will be required.<sup>15</sup>

6. In Vacation and at Chambers.<sup>16</sup>—A judgment may not be opened or vacated at chambers,<sup>17</sup> nor, it has been held, may this be done in vacation,<sup>18</sup> though as to the latter proposition, there is authority to the contrary,<sup>19</sup> and in some states statutes provide for the granting of this relief in vacation, subject to various restrictions.<sup>20</sup>

7. Statutory Limitations as to Time.—The time within which the court may exercise this power is in many states largely controlled by statutes, which prescribe the time within which relief may be obtained.<sup>21</sup> Where, however, the case, though an appropriate one for relief, does not fall within the statute, the common-law limitations as to time are applied.<sup>22</sup>

D. KIND OR CHARACTER OF JUDGMENT AFFECTED.—1. 3. Judgments by Confession. — The opening and vacating of judgments by confession is fully treated elsewhere in this work.<sup>30</sup>

4. Judgments of Inferior Courts. — Although sometimes altered by statutes,<sup>31</sup> the general rule is that a court of general jurisdiction may not open or set aside a judgment of a court of inferior jurisdiction.<sup>32</sup> This is true for the reason that jurisdiction of such a proceeding lies only in the court which rendered the judgment from which relief is sought.<sup>33</sup> Hence, the judgment of an inferior court if assailed at all must be attacked in that court.<sup>34</sup> Where the transcript of a judgment

[a] The Reason.—"If the judgment was vacated the verdict would stand. . . . The statute, in conferring the power, confines its exercise to judgments rendered under the specified conditions and does not embrace such as necessarily follow the verdict, and the setting aside of which, without at the same [time] disturbing the verdict, would be of no advantage to the party, for it must again be entered in response to the jury findings. To vacate both, is necessary to afford the desired relief, and this would be to grant a new trial, which can only be done at the term when it took place." Flowers v. Alford, 111 N. C. 248, 16 S. [a] "Undoubtedly the court below would be justified in striking off the judgment if it appears on its face to be void, notwithstanding the fact that it was entered upon a transcript; for a void judgment is no judgment. It would be a mere blur upon the record of the Common Pleas, a something which has no business there, and that court, having control of its own records, could doubtless strike therefrom anything which had been unlawfully placed there." McKinney v. Brown, 130 Pa. 365, 18 Atl. 642.

[b] "For all purposes except liens the judgment still remains before the justice, and if it be assailed for the reasons suggested, there is the place to attack it." Boyd v. Miller, 52 Pa. 431. See also to the same effect, Lacock v. White, 19 Pa. 495; Weldy v. Young, 21 Pa. Co. Ct. 15.

[c] When the judgment of the inferior court has itself been set aside, the transcript is properly stricken off. Banning v. Taylor, 24 Pa. 297.

[d] If, despite this rule, a court of general jurisdiction in the office of whose clerk a judgment of an inferior court has thus been docketed should set such judgment aside, the proper procedure is to apply to the first named court to set aside its order thus made. *Whitehurst v. E. PROCEEDINGS FOR RELIEF. — 1. On Court's Own Motion. — The rule generally followed is that during the term at which a judgment is rendered it may, good cause appearing, be opened or vacated by the court which rendered it upon its own motion.<sup>40</sup> At a subsequent term, however, this power of the court is limited to such of its judgments as are void upon their face.<sup>41</sup>

2. On Application of Parties. — a. Nature of Application. — Formerly relief in such cases was obtained by audita querela,<sup>42</sup> or by writ of error coram nobis,<sup>43</sup> or by a bill in equity.<sup>44</sup> However, the trend of legislative and judicial effort has been towards the end that relief might be had in a summary proceeding in the cause,<sup>45</sup> with the result

[b] In Indiana the remedy is by "complaint or motion." Burns' Ann. St., 1914, §405. And see Smith v. Noe, 30 Ind. 117.

[e] In North Carolina if (1) the ground upon which it is sought to have a judgment set aside is that of fraud the attack must be by an independent action and not by motion in the cause. Scott v. Mutual, etc. Life Assn., 137 N. C. 515, 50 S. E. 221; McLeod v. Graham, 132 N. C. 473, 43 S. [a] "A motion to set aside a judgment . . . is, in effect, the same as a bill to set a judgment aside . . ." Blyth & Fargo Co. v. Swenson, 15 Utah 345, 49 Pac. 1027.

[b] "A motion to vacate a judgment is in the nature of a bill in equity and the judgment defendant can only have such relief as he or she is equitably entitled to." Fields v. Brown, 89 Ill. App. 287.

[c] The control exercised by a court over its own judgment, during

b. Where Commenced.—It is a generally recognized rule that a judgment may only be opened or vacated by the court which rendered it.<sup>59</sup> Thus, an application to set aside the judgment of an appellate the term at which it was rendered, is a common-law right. "But at the expiration of the term . . . the further control over it for that purpose (to set it aside) is equitable, and was asserted originally in a bill in chancery." Fisher v. Hestonville, etc. Ry. Co., 185 Pa. 602, 40 Atl. 97.

[d] "The remedy on motion to open judgment and let defendant in to defend is a substitute, not an exact equivalent for the more formal and cumbersome writs of audita querela and error coram nobis. defendant,<sup>68</sup> or an unnecessary party,<sup>69</sup> is ordinarily sufficient, even though he seeks to have set aside a judgment rendered in his own favor.<sup>70</sup>

(B.) LIMITATIONS AND EXCEPTIONS. — In some instances the general rule has been relaxed to the extent of permitting one in privity with a record party<sup>71</sup> or who is possessed of rights or equities which are directly and injuriously affected, to seek relief in this manner;<sup>72</sup> and

[a] Interpleader.—An apparent exception to the general rule just stated is presented by a case in which a third party is ordered, at a defendant's instance, to interplead with the plaintiff; in such a case the original defendant is thereafter, at least so far as an application for this relief is concerned, a stranger to the action within the meaning of the general rule above. Lippman v. Warren, 94 Mo. App. 486, 68 S. W. 225.

69. It is not essential that a defendant seeking to have a judgment set aside should have been a necessary party to the action in which such judgment was rendered. It is enough that he was made so. Sikes v. Weatherly, 110 N. C. 131, 14 S. E. 511.

[a] In Ladd v. Stevenson, 112 N. Y. 325, 19 N. E. 842, 8 Am. St. Rep. 748, it was said that the court "may open them (its judgments) upon the application of anyone, in the furtherance of justice."

it has been held that a person who has a substantial interest in the matter may become a party by intervention.<sup>73</sup> So also where the record party is only the nominal and not the real party in interest, the latter will be treated as having a standing in court on an application of this sort.<sup>74</sup> It is sometimes provided by statute that not only a record party, but any one affected by a void judgment, may apply to the court to have such judgment set aside.<sup>75</sup> Although a creditor of a party against whom a judgment has been rendered may, under some circumstances, apply to the court for this relief, the mere fact that the applicant stands in that relation to the defendant and that the judgment, if undisturbed, will diminish his fund, will not give him standing in court on a proceeding to obtain this relief.<sup>76</sup> Should the attacking creditors, however, proceed upon the ground of fraud or collusion, he will be entitled to be heard and, after a sufficient showing, the judgment may be opened at his instance.<sup>77</sup>

[b] Creditor of Deceased.—Where an administrator appealed from a decree of the probate court disallowing certain items in his account, and other creditors joined with the appellees in resisting the appeal, a creditor who, with full knowledge of these proceedings, stood passively by and took no part therein, will not be permitted to have set aside a decree entered by agreement of the litigants in said appeal on the ground that it was entered through collusion and in fraud of his

(C.) SUCCESSOR TO INTEREST OF RECORD PARTY. — Ordinarily the successor in interest of a party entitled to this relief will be given a standing in court on such an application.<sup>76</sup> Thus, when the interest of a defendant is transferred, pendente lite, but, no substitution being made on the record, judgment is rendered against the original defendant, the real defendant who has succeeded to the interest of the record defendant may apply to the court to set aside the judgment.<sup>79</sup> The legal representatives of a deceased party may properly apply for relief of this nature from a judgment rendered in an action to which their decedent was a party,<sup>80</sup> and this is expressly provided for by statutes in some states.<sup>81</sup>

act in the matter. The statute may be in such form as to require an application in such time as to give notice thereof or bring the case to a hearing within the prescribed limit.<sup>93</sup> And under statutes which limit the time for granting the relief, the hearing must actually be had and the matter decided within the prescribed time,<sup>94</sup> though to prevent injury to a suitor who has brought the matter to a hearing within the prescribed time, the court may enter its order nunc pro tunc as of the time when the motion was submitted.<sup>95</sup> Under such of these statutes as provide that the court may, in a proper case, grant relief at any time within a certain period after "notice" of entry of judgment, the application may be a timely one even though more than the prescribed time has elapsed since the date of the rendition of the judgment, where no notice was given or received.<sup>96</sup> The notice of entry of judgment referred to need not be in any particular form, actual knowledge thereof, in whatever manner obtained, being sufficient.<sup>97</sup> In some states the application must be made "within a reason-

[a] "A statute conferring power to modify a judgment or decree after the term at which it was rendered, being in derogation of the common law, is to be strictly construed; and hence a party, . . ., must apply therefor and obtain a decision thereon within the time prescribed by the statute, or his laches will preclude the court from thereafter amending the record." Nicklin v. Robertson, 28 Ore. 278, 42 Pac. 993, 52 Am. St. Rep. 790.

[b] "The period within which the discretion is to be exercised is expressly limited to a year after notice of the judgment; and this time cannot be enlarged or extended by merely giving notice of the motion to vacate the judgment. The party is required to act, and must bring his motion to a hearing within the year, or the power to relieve under the statute is gone." Knox v. Clifford, 41 Wis. 459.

[c] It is not enough to satisfy the language of the statute that the application for relief is made within the year, or that it is submitted within the year. But the court must take action upon the application within that time. Sargent v. Kindred, 5 N. D. 472, 67 N. W. 826.

[d] A party who has been personally served with process in an action must be deemed to have legal notice of any judgment thereafter entered at a regular term of the court in such action; only such parties as are not affected by such service of process may avail themselves of a want of notice to enable them to make this application after the lapse of a year from the date of the judgment. *Sluder v. [b] "The law does not absolutely fix any period of time within which a defendant must move to open a judgment, but delay long persisted in after knowledge of all the facts always casts greater or less doubt on the bona fides of the defense set up, and gives weight and probability to the evidence adduced to rebut it." It is for this manifest reason of public policy, as well as in the interest of substantial justice, which is not always subserved by re-opening and prolonging litigation, that the courts have gone very far in upholding the validity of loose and informal . . . judgments . . . in . . . similar cases." where, in reliance upon the judgment attacked, the parties have changed their position irrevocably or rights of innocent third persons have intervened.<sup>16</sup> The converse of this last proposition is equally true, i. e., where no rights of third parties have intervened the court will lend a more willing ear to the applicant's prayer for relief,<sup>17</sup> and where the application is made so immediately after judgment as that no considerable delay to the adverse party is to be occasioned by permitting a defense on the merits, a court ought to incline to relieve.<sup>18</sup> The foregoing rules are only applicable to such judgments as are voidable and not void, for lapse of time will not, ordinarily, affect the right of a party to have a judgment set aside which is absolutely void.<sup>19</sup>

e. Contents and Formal Requisites of the Application.—(I.) Preliminary Statement.—If, under the rules of practice, a motion is the proper form of remedy, it should be in writing,<sup>20</sup> yet it need not follow any particular form unless required by statute.<sup>21</sup> It is the substance more than the form of the application with which the courts are concerned, and trivial imperfections will not be noticed.<sup>22</sup> Thus, an application which should, by the rules of practice, have been in the form of a motion will not be held defective simply because it is made in the more formal manner of a petition,<sup>23</sup> and vice versa.<sup>24</sup>

(II.) Particular Requirements.—The application, after showing the applicant to have such an interest in the judgment attacked as constitutes him a proper party thereto,<sup>25</sup> should state the ground upon which the relief is sought, not in general terms, but with definiteness and particularity.<sup>26</sup> The averment of conclusions should, of course,

[a] A defense which the party might not have interposed at the trial will not suffice to support an application to open the judgment. Dooley v. Gladiator, etc. Co., 134 Iowa 468, 109 N. W. 864.

As to the necessity and sufficiency of the statement of facts constituting the defense, see 1 STANDARD PROC. 686, 690.

[b] Construction of Affidavits.—These supporting affidavits will be construed most strongly against the applicant and will not be sufficient for this purpose unless the facts set forth show a valid defense; it is not enough that, from the contents of the affidavit, such a defense may be inferred. [a] The court will not open a judgment to permit a party to plead the statute of limitations where it appeared, without contradiction, at the hearing of the application that a subsequent payment had taken the case out of the operation of the statute. Rehm v. Frank, 16 Pa. Super. 175.

[b] In some states this was not formerly true. See Chandler v. Ben- nett, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 155, where this withstanding, as is also a discharge in bankruptcy,<sup>47</sup> or a former adjudication,<sup>48</sup> or usury<sup>49</sup> and payment, is, of course, a proper defense.<sup>50</sup> In a case, however, where the facts as to a defense upon the merits are in dispute the existence of an unquestioned legal defense will justify the granting of this relief.<sup>51</sup> The defense shown need not be an entire one, but it is sufficient if the applicant shows a partial defense.<sup>52</sup> situation is reviewed. Compare, Sheets v. Baldwin's Admr., 12 Ohio 120; McCulloch v. Tapp, 2 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 675, 4 W. L. Bul. 575.

[c] In Wheeler v. Castor, 11 N. D. 347, 92 N. W. 381, this situation was briefly and completely reviewed, the court saying: "It is undeniable, in the light of authority, that the earlier rule, established by the adjudications of the courts of England, as well as those of this country, was that the statute of limitations is not a meritorious plea. . . . But such rule, in our opinion, is not the modern rule. The more recent, and, we think, the better, cases, have abrogated the rule. The modern judicial view is that the statute of limitations is one of repose, and that as a defense the statute is now classed as meritorious, and as much so as other valid defenses."

petition in some cases, in which a summons is required to be issued and served as in an original action.<sup>64</sup>

Withdrawal of Motion. — A motion of this character may be withdrawn without notice.<sup>65</sup>

(II.) Form and Contents. — The form of the notice may be prescribed by statute or rules of court.<sup>66</sup> It is usually required to be in writing,<sup>67</sup> and in such form as will inform the adverse party as to the nature of the proceeding and the time of the hearing.<sup>68</sup> The notice should specify all the relief for which the applicant will ask since, if the adverse party defaults at the hearing, the applicant will be limited thereby;<sup>69</sup> but should the parties appear and a hearing be had upon the merits, the court may make such an order as is required from the facts disclosed, at least to the extent of including provisions incidental to the relief demanded.<sup>70</sup> The notice should also inform the adverse party as to the grounds upon which the motion will be made.<sup>71</sup>

(III.) To Whom Given. — The statutes generally provide for notice

time, but may be exercised whenever the matter is brought to the attention of the court. While a motion for such action is entirely appropriate, neither motion nor notice to an adverse party is essential." People v. Davis, 143 Cal. 673, 77 Pac. 651.

68. Form of Notice of Motion. [Title of court and cause.] To the above named plaintiff (or defendant) and (if adverse party is represented by counsel) to A. B., his attorney: Please take notice that the undersigned, as attorney for the defendant (or plaintiff), will on the _____ day of _____, 19—, at _____ o'clock —. m. of said day, or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, move the above named court to vacate the judgment rendered in said cause on the Supp. 1017, defaulting defendant served notice that he would ask that "the judgment herein be vacated, and the findings on which it was entered set aside, and that the attorney for the defendant be allowed to serve his notice of retainer." The order of the court further provided for leave to file an answer. The parties being before the court and a hearing having been had this was held to be proper.

[a] What Is Reasonable Notice. Under such a statute where the notice was served on the day set for hearing but the hearing was continued for nearly a month, thus affording the adverse party ample time to prepare for contesting the application, the error, if any, in the shortness of the notice was cured. "A reasonable notice of the hearing of a motion is such notice as is meet and fair, in view of the cir-frequently required that the party shall be brought into court on the same notice as to time as in an original action.<sup>79</sup>

(V.) Waiver. — By appearing and contesting the application for this relief the adverse party waives his right to a notice.<sup>80</sup>

g. Demurrer, Answer or Counter-Affidavits. — While neither a demurrer<sup>81</sup> nor answer may be filed by the opposing party upon a motion to open or vacate a judgment,<sup>82</sup> in those jurisdictions where the application is by petition the opposing party must answer,<sup>83</sup> otherwise the petition may be granted pro confesso,<sup>84</sup> unless, as in some states the statute provides that the allegations of the petition are deemed denied without answer.<sup>85</sup> The adverse party has a right to offer counter-affidavits as to the grounds upon which it is sought to open or vacate the judgment,<sup>86</sup> thus he may controvert the facts offered as an excuse for the failure to make defense at the proper time.<sup>87</sup> Generally, however, the affidavit of the applicant as to the merits of his defense may not be controverted in this manner.<sup>88</sup> action.<sup>91</sup> The court, however, will not inquire into the merits further than to discover whether or not the applicant has, prima facie, a good defense or cause of action.<sup>92</sup> It is for the court to determine, upon

[a] In Ohio, (1) after the court has decided that there is good ground to vacate, the judgment to vacate should be suspended until after the cause is tried; and if, on such trial, the defense is established, then judgment of vacation should be entered; or, if the defense fails, the judgment is to be affirmed. Braden v. Hoffman, 46 Ohio St. 639, 22 N. E. 930; Frazier v. Williams, 24 Ohio St. 625. (2) It seems that the provisions of the statute are intended for the protection of the party resisting the application and may be waived by his subsequent appearance without objection. Where the judgment is set aside without first determining that there is a valid defense to the action, the order thus made is not void but voidable only, and hence immune from collateral attack. Newman v. Desnoyers, 64 Ohio St. 447, 60 N. E. 572.

[b] If the proceeding was by motion the defendant should file his proposed answer and a trial be had in the regular manner; if by petition where the defense is set out in issuable form it would be sufficient to take issue thereon by reply or demurrer. When the issue is thus made up, it should be tried as in any other case. Watson v. Paine, 25 Ohio St. 340.

[a] "As the truth of the defenses are not finally tried in the proceedings to vacate the judgment, enough evidence to make a prima facie showing of the truth or existence of the defenses would be sufficient to authorize the court to vacate the judgment." Knights of Maccabees v. Gordon, 83 Ark. 17, 21, 102 S. W. 711.

[b] "It is not necessary to show that the defense is valid, and the court will not go into the evidence except so far as to satisfy themselves that the petitioner has prima facie good grounds for a trial." Alverson v. Alverson, 2 R. I. 27.

[c] "The hearing of evidence is confined to the question whether the judgment has been taken through the inadvertence, mistake, surprise, or excusable neglect of the defendant. The applicant is not required to make more than such a prima facie showing of merits as arises from his own affidavits." Gideon v. Dwyer, 17 Misc. 233, 40 N. Y. Supp. 1053, 1054, quoting from Freeman on Judgments, §109.

[d] In Pennsylvania the court has said that where an affidavit of defense is not filed in time "and comes before the court only on a rule to open a judgment regularly entered, the court is entitled to examine the averments critically and to require further evi-

the facts, whether the judgment should be opened or vacated.<sup>92</sup> And a motion to open or vacate a judgment may be disposed of in a summary manner.<sup>93</sup> It is not necessary, simply because there is a conflict in the evidence, to submit the matter to a jury,<sup>94</sup> though the court may, if the nature of the controversy be such as to make it advisable, direct an issue to be tried by a jury, and grant the relief sought in accordance with the verdict of the jury.<sup>95</sup> If the court is not satisfied from the affidavits and papers presented as to what the real facts are, it may refer the matter for the purpose of taking further evidence,<sup>96</sup> and may require the parties to submit to an oral examination and cross-examination.<sup>97</sup> The laches of the applicant may be considered in determining whether to grant him relief.<sup>98</sup> Relief may also be denied where it appears that it would result in no substantial benefit to the applicant.<sup>1</sup> In some jurisdictions it is the duty of the court to make findings on the facts, which should be specific and not done as to the facts, as in other cases of application to open judgments." Hunter v. Perreth, 105 Pa. 400, 45 Atl. 26.

[a] "It is the duty of the judge: first, to find the facts, as they would be set out in a special verdict." This requirement is not met by simply stating the evidence. That is often conflicting and the appellate court is not a competent tribunal to try the facts. Clegg v. New York White Soap Stone Co., 66 N. C. 391.

[a] A general finding "that the defendants did not fail to employ counsel in their action in consequence of any fraud practiced on them by the plaintiff," was, in Smith v. Hahn, 80 N. C. 240, held defective, the court there assigning as the reason that "it does not ascertain and separately set forth the facts which, as a matter of law, amount to fraud on the part of the plaintiff."

declare that the granting of relief sought on the ground of surprise, excusable neglect, etc., shall be discretionary with the court.<sup>11</sup> On the other hand, there are cases where relief is demandable as a matter of right. For example, it is the imperative duty of a court to set aside such of its judgments as are void;<sup>12</sup> and, under some statutes, judgments procured upon constructive service of process must be vacated where application is made within the time provided for by the statute.<sup>12</sup> Also, under statutes providing that, in designated cases, the court "shall" open or set aside its judgment, this relief has been held to be a matter of right.<sup>13</sup> The discretion of the court, however, is undoubtedly a legal one, to be exercised on sound legal principles, and not an absolute discretion which may be employed according to the whim or caprice of the court.<sup>14</sup> The rule is well settled, however, a different matter from vacating it or setting it aside altogether.<sup>26</sup> Upon the judgment being opened without condition the judgment itself is not thereby destroyed; it remains as security for whatever relief may ultimately be awarded to the adverse party.<sup>27</sup> And it is proper for the court to direct that the judgment relieved against shall stand as security for the plaintiff's demands.<sup>28</sup> But where a judgment is vacated the lien of the judgment is thereafter without support,<sup>29</sup> unless otherwise provided by statute.<sup>30</sup> The relief awarded may include a provision setting aside an execution previously issued on the judgment from which relief is granted.<sup>31</sup>

2. Judgment Opened or Vacated in Whole or in Part.—The rule generally obtains that a judgment may properly be opened or set aside in whole or in part.<sup>32</sup> As regards the parties thereto, however, the rule generally followed is that a joint judgment may not be set aside

[a] "To open a judgment, however, is not to set it aside; for when it is closed again by the finding of a sum due, an execution issues on it as if it had not been disturbed." Gallup v. Reynolds, 8 Watts (Pa.) 424, quoted with approval in McAnulty v. Nat. Life Assn., 6 Lack. Leg. N. (Pa.) 128.

[g] Execution May Issue.—On granting this relief the court may, as a condition thereto, order that execution of the judgment proceed. But this term or condition can only be imposed by special order or provision. Savage v. Kelley, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 525.

[h] In the exercise of this power the court may require the applicant, in a proper case, to pay the accrued costs of the adverse party. Cooper v. Borough of Kingston, 6 Kulp (Pa.) 344.

[i] Failure To Comply With Terms. In Texas it has been held that where the court set aside a judgment on condition that the applicant pay the costs, his failure to pay such costs did not entitle the adverse party to a new judgment for the court might yet modify its order in this respect and do away with this condition entirely. Marx v. Epstein, 1 Tex. Civ. Cas., §1317.

In imposing terms the adverse party must be considered, and the terms must afford him such protection as, in view of all the surround-

[a] Where defendant had interposed a motion to strike out the plaintiff's complaint and, before the determination of that motion, a judgment on default was entered against him, the action of the court in opening such judgment only on condition that the defendant should not plead the statute of limitations was reversible error; the relief in such a case should be unconditional. Mitchell v. Campbell, 14 Ore. 454, 13 Pac. 190.

[b] The verification of plaintiff's complaint was defective. The defendant served an unverified answer. This the plaintiff returned and entered a default. The default was opened upon terms. This was held to be error, inasmuch as it was the defendant's right to file an unverified answer under the circumstances. Phonoharp Co. v. Stobbe, 20 Misc. 698, 46 N. Y. Supp. 678.

[b] Venue.—That the court has no jurisdiction over the particular case, but has jurisdiction over the subject-matter in general may be required to ing circumstances, he is equitably entitled to.<sup>42</sup> Occasionally this power has been spoken of as an "unlimited" one,<sup>43</sup> but, extensive though it undoubtedly is, it is not without limitations and restrictions.<sup>44</sup> And where, in a given case, the court has exercised this discretion in a manner not warranted by the equities, its action therein will be modified on appeal.<sup>45</sup> Furthermore, statutes frequently impose certain limitations on the exercise of this discretion.<sup>46</sup> Where the order of the court is one granting to the applicant the relief desired it is erroneous to impose terms upon the adverse party.<sup>47</sup>

h. Payment of Costs and Expenses.—Where it is discretionary with the court to open or vacate a judgment, the court will, ordinarily, in the exercise of a like discretion, require, as a condition thereto, that the applicant pay the accrued costs of the adverse party.<sup>48</sup> Sometimes

It is a power to be used in furtherance of justice, and not for the purpose of gagging and binding one of the parties to a suit, and then turning him over, in this helpless and defenseless condition, to the tender mercies of his adversary." Mitchell v. Campbell, 14 Ore. 454, 13 Pac. 190.

[b] Where a judgment as on default was taken dismissing plaintiff's complaint, it was error for the court, on a subsequent application of plaintiff to vacate the same to require of the defendant that she file and serve an answer to the complaint. [a] Upon Opening a Judgment Void for Want of Jurisdiction.—Waller v. Weston, 125 Cal. 201, 57 Pac. 892.

[b] In Wisconsin, costs may be imposed in relieving against a void judgment. "Although void the court would not be bound to set the judgment aside unless it appeared to be inequitable. Hence an application to set it aside in a measure always appeals to the equitable power and discretion of the court." When this discretion exists terms may or may not be imposed. *Reeves & Co. v. c. Security.<sup>58</sup>—An undertaking to secure the payment of whatever judgment may be recovered upon a claim for unliquidated damages may not, as a general rule, be required as a condition to the granting of this relief,<sup>59</sup> though exceptional circumstances may justify such a requirement,<sup>60</sup> and where the demand is on a liquidated sum an undertaking of this nature may be required.<sup>61</sup> Such a condition, however, on account of its severity, should only be imposed where the facts furnish a clear justification therefor.<sup>62</sup> The court may also require of able and necessary, otherwise they should not be imposed as costs, even though actually incurred. For example, the successful party should not be required to pay his adversary's attorney's fees unless reasonable, although actually paid by the adverse party. Behl v. Schuette, 95 Wis. 441, 70 N. W. 559.

[b] The Expense Must Have Been Actually Incurred.—Expenses for entering up a judgment which has never in fact been entered up will not be imposed. Morrell v. Gibson, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 208.

[a] Where a judgment has been opened, and, upon a subsequent trial on the merits, the defendant gets a verdict, there ought, in strict practice, to be another order formally vacating the judgment previously opened. McAnulty, Admr. v. Nat. Life Assn., 6 Lack. Leg. N. (Pa.) 128.

As to this distinction between opening and vacating see supra, XIV, F, 1.

[a] Permission To File Answer.—In Merchants Ad-Sign Co. v. Los Angeles Bill Posting Co., 128 Cal. 619, 61 Pac. 277, it was held that it was not necessary for an order setting aside a judgment on default to expressly extend to the defendant the right to file an answer, especially where the notice of motion stated that the motion would be made “upon the affidavits and verified answer” and the order setting aside the judgment directed, inter alia that the cause be reopened “and the parties thereto permitted to take such further proceedings in said cause as they may see fit and proper.”

payments to the plaintiff not shown in the account sued on, it is ordered by the court that the case be opened for the purpose of hearing such matters of the defense as go to the merits of the defendant's answer, and that the cause be tried upon its merits upon the _____ day of _____, 19—. 2. Vacating the Order.—An order vacating or setting aside a judgment may be vacated by the court which made it where such order was irregularly made,<sup>77</sup> or is invalid,<sup>78</sup> or erroneous,<sup>79</sup> or procured by fraud,<sup>80</sup> or where the applicant has not complied with the condition imposed upon the granting of such order,<sup>81</sup> or, generally, in any case where to permit such order to stand would be inequitable.<sup>82</sup> In vacating such an order, however, the court should make adequate provision for such rights of third parties as may have intervened.<sup>83</sup> When such an order is vacated the original judgment is at once reinstated.<sup>84</sup>

II. APPEAL AND REVIEW.—An order granting or refusing this relief is usually considered final and appealable,<sup>85</sup> although in some states an appeal will only lie from orders refusing such relief.<sup>86</sup> Under a statute restricting the right of appeal to such final orders as affect a substantial right, it has been held that an appeal will not lie from an order determining an application for this relief,<sup>87</sup> though there is authority to the contrary.<sup>88</sup>

[a] In Colorado the contrary has been held (Owen v. Going, 7 Colo. 85, 1 Pac. 229), the court saying, that "however erroneous the action of the district court may have been in setting aside the judgment, the order effectively accomplished its purpose. When the court subsequently set aside this order, its action in so doing did not have the effect to revive or reinstate the judgment."

[a] This, it has been said is true because, a motion to vacate or set aside a judgment is in effect the same as a bill for the same purpose; the judgment on the bill is final and appealable and the order denying the motion, having the same effect upon the rights of the parties as the judgment on the bill, is also final in its nature. Blyth & Fargo Co. v. Swenson, 15 Utah 345, 49 Pac. 1027.

Since the court may not, on a motion to vacate its judgment, consider or correct errors in law, in judicial reasoning,<sup>89</sup> the appellate court, on an appeal from an order denying such a motion, may not inquire into the correctness of the judgment below, but only into the propriety of the order determining the application to vacate such judgment.<sup>90</sup> The findings of the court below, upon conflicting evidence,

[b] In Pennsylvania (1) prior to the passage of the Act of May 20, 1891, P. L. 101, no appeal would lie to the order of the court opening a judgment. Kelber v. Pittsburgh N. Plow Co., 146 Pa. 485, 32 Atl. 335. (2) It was only from an order refusing to open a judgment that an appeal might theretofore be had. Richards' Appeal, 127 Pa. 63, 17 Atl. 756; Lamb's Appeal, 89 Pa. 407. (3) No appeal might then be had from an order determining an application to strike off or set aside a judgment. Sweesey v. Ketchum, 80 Pa. 160. (4) "The first section of that act provides" for an appeal from a "decision of the court opening, vacating or striking off, or the refusal to" do so. "The act in question, with the prior Act of April 4, 1877, P. L. 53, have made a radical change, so far as the right of appeal is concerned. What was formerly an absolute discretion in the court below is now reviewable here." Kelber v. Pittsburgh N. Plow Co., 146 Pa. 485, 23 Atl. 335.

[c] An appeal from an inferior court to a court of general jurisdiction will lie where the former court has improperly granted or denied an application for this relief. *Whitehurst v. tion is "absolute and beyond a review by this court, unless it appears that there was an abuse of discretion."

[a] Appeals From Municipal Courts. (1) Under N. Y. Code Civ. Proc., §1342, providing for an appeal from municipal to superior courts on orders "affecting a substantial right" an order determining an application of this sort was held appealable in Kubie v. Miller Bros. & Co., 31 Misc. 460, 64 N. Y. Supp. 448. Compare, Keller v. Feldmann, 2 Misc. 179, 21 N. Y. Supp. 581. [a] On an appeal of this character the appellate court will only determine whether or not this discretion has been properly exercised. Kelber v. Pittsburgh Nat. Plow Co., 146 Pa. 485, 32 Atl. 335.

[b] The discretion vested in the New York supreme court may be exercised not only at special term but by all the justices in the appellate division. Lawson v. Adams, 89 App. Div. 303, 85 N. Y. Supp. 863.

[c] What Will Warrant Reversal. It is not sufficient for the appellate court to find as a matter of fact that the showing made below was sufficient to have justified the setting aside of the judgment. It must further find that the showing was such that there was no room for the exercise of discretion by the lower court before it can rightfully interfere. Livesley v. O'Brien, 6 Wash. 553, 34 Pac. 134.

[d] Where the allegations in the application for this relief are, if true, sufficient, and there is no denial of them the appellate court will properly refuse to disturb the action of the trial court in opening the judgment. Hunter v. Mahoney, 148 Pa. 232, 23 Atl. 1004.

[e] "Where the moving papers, including the proposed answer, show that the party has a good defense, and that judgment has been suffered through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, it is an abuse of dis-

this true where a successful defense was made after the judgment was opened.<sup>96</sup> But where such discretion has been arbitrarily or unfairly exercised the action of the trial court may be reviewed and reversed.<sup>97</sup> And, it has been held, that it is not necessary that this abuse be actual cretion to refuse the relief authorized by this section." Bloor v. Smith, 112 Wis. 340, 87 N. W. 870; Boutin v. Catlin, 101 Wis. 545, 77 N. W. 910; Cleveland v. Hopkins, 55 Wis. 387, 390, 13 N. W. 225.

[f] The mere fact that the appellate court does not entirely agree with the court of original jurisdiction in its rulings does not suffice to show a case of abuse of this discretion within the meaning of the authorities. City of Fargo v. Keeney, 11 N. D. 484, 92 N. W. 836.

[g] Where the evidence upon which the court acted is not set out in the record, an appellate court will presume that the evidence adduced below was legally sufficient to warrant the setting aside of the judgment. Breckinridge v. Breckinridge, 78 Ark. 598, 94 S. W. 715.

[h] Technical questions of practice will not justify a reversal of the action of the trial court, especially where they are without any "substantial merit." Clein v. Wandschneider, 14 Wash. 257, 44 Pac. 272.

As to the nature and extent of this discretion, see supra, XIV, E, 2, h, (II).

96. Coos Bay Nav. Co. v. Endicott, 34 Ore. 573, 57 Pac. 61.

[a] The courts are not disposed to deny a litigant the right to be heard where he has not lost or forfeited this right by his own negligence; for this reason a clearer abuse of discretion is required to reverse an order setting aside a default than where such order is refused. Mally v. Roberts, 167 Iowa 523, 149 N. W. 630. And see, to the same effect, Norman v. Iowa Cent. R. Co., 149 Iowa 246, 128 N. W. 349; Alferitz v. Cahen, 145 Cal. 397, 78 Pac. 878; *Ingrim v. [a] The action of the court in refusing this relief was reversed where it appeared that the defendant, who was the applicant on the motion to vacate, was absent from the state during all the proceedings leading up to the entry of the judgment complained of; that at the earliest moment he engaged competent counsel to care for his interest in the pending litigation; that because of his temporary absence from the address to which his mail was delivered he did not receive a communication forwarded to him by said counsel; that counsel withdrew from the case without notice to defendant who, upon discovering such withdrawal, immediately telegraphed to another attorney, retaining him to proceed to obtain the opening of the judgment by default which had been entered against him and to obtain leave to file an answer and defend the action, the refusal of the trial court to vacate the judgment under such circumstances being considered an abuse of the court's or intentional, in the ordinary acceptance of the term; a failure to exercise such legal discretion from a mistake of law or any other cause, is equally reviewable.<sup>98</sup>

When an application should have been granted, not as an equitable favor, but as a strict legal right,<sup>99</sup> the refusal so to do is reversible on appeal.<sup>1</sup> Where the action of the court was wholly without authority, it will be reversed.<sup>2</sup> On the other hand, where the ruling of the trial court was correct, although predicated upon wrong principles or reasons, its ruling will, nevertheless, be sustained on appeal.<sup>3</sup> In the event of a reversal, the appellate court will remand the case so that the court below may dispose of it in accordance with the law as determined on the appeal.<sup>4</sup> The appellate court may provide that its judgment shall be without prejudice to a timely renewal of the application upon proper and sufficient papers.<sup>5</sup>

discretion. Utah Commercial & Sav. Bank v. Trumbo, 17 Utah 198, 53 Pac. 1033.

[b] "The discretion of courts to open judgments is very extensive, but it must rest on a foundation of competent evidence." So, where some of the allegations of the petition to open the judgment were denied and proof demanded by the answer thereto, and it appeared that no evidence was introduced on the points denied, the action of the court in opening the judgment was erroneous and was reversed. Woods v. Irwin, 141 Pa. 278, 293, 21 Atl. 603.

98. Marsh v. Griffin, 123 N. C. 660, 31 S. E. 840.

[a] A distinction in this regard exists between a case in which the court below exercises its discretionary power on such an application and one in which it decides that it may not legally do so. Thus it was said in Johnson v. Shumway, 65 Vt. 389, 26 Atl. 590, "Had the county court exercised its discretionary power, and granted the relief prayed for, or dismissed the petition, its decision would not be reversible here. . . . But, as we construe the exceptions, that court held, as matter of law, upon the facts alleged, that the petitioner was not entitled to have the case brought forward. In this there was error. The court might legally have granted the relief." See also Fairfield v. King, 41 Vt. 611.

Imposition of Terms.—The question of the imposition of terms, being generally a matter discretionary with the trial court,<sup>7</sup> it will require an exceptionally strong showing to induce the appellate court to interfere on that score.<sup>8</sup> But should the terms imposed be, under the attendant circumstances, inadequate,<sup>9</sup> or unnecessarily severe,<sup>10</sup> or, for any reason, improper,<sup>11</sup> the appellate court will modify the order of the trial court in that respect.

I. Costs.—The allowance of costs in proceedings to open or vacate a judgment,<sup>12</sup> as in proceedings at law generally,<sup>13</sup> is a matter of statutory regulation. Generally the costs in such proceedings should be taxed against the unsuccessful party,<sup>14</sup> though they may be imposed upon the successful party under some circumstances as a condition precedent to opening or vacating a default judgment against him.<sup>15</sup>

[d] The objection that the attorneys presenting the motion for relief are not the same as those who represented the party in the original cause and that there is no substitution of record must be made in the trial court and may not be urged for the first time on appeal, especially where it appears that they were recognized as properly appearing for the applicant by both the court and opposing counsel. *Searles v. [a] In a Divorce Action.—A default judgment was entered against a wife. The cause of action was adultery. She moved to open the judgment on the ground that she was never served with process. Motion granted on condition that she pay all costs incurred by plaintiff to date of motion. This was held to be an improper use of the court's discretion, requiring of her, as it did, that before she might defend her honor, she must make a payment which she, being lawfully dependent on the plaintiff, was unable to make. Fox v. Fox, 143 App. Div. 483, 127 N. Y. Supp. 989.

Co. v. Springer, etc. Co.*, 15 Misc. 443, 37 N. Y. Supp. 24.

12. In Alabama (§4144, Civ. Code, 1907), the costs are borne, in an uncontested motion, by the applicant; in a contested motion, by the unsuccessful party.

14. Irwin's Appeal, 9 Sad. (Pa.) 479, 12 Atl. 840, where relief was denied the applicant except that the judgment was modified to eliminate an allowance of usurious interest. It was held that the applicant being successful to that extent, the costs should go against the other party.

15. See supra, XIV, F, 3, b, and Hyman v. London Assur. Corp., 43 App. Div. 622, 60 N. Y. Supp. 355, taxing the costs of the motion as well as the costs of the previous proceedings, in which the judgment was rendered, as a condition to opening the default. Conte

J. SECOND APPLICATION.—PURSUIT OF CONCURRENT REMEDIES. Ordinarily the denial of an application to open or vacate a judgment will operate as a bar to a future application for the same relief,<sup>16</sup> at least when sought upon the same grounds as those upon which the first motion was made,<sup>17</sup> unless the order denying the first application recites that it is made without prejudice to a new motion,<sup>18</sup> or, in the absence of such a recital, leave of court is subsequently obtained to present a second application.<sup>19</sup> This rule does not apply in case of a verdict for plaintiff. Before the rendition of judgment another application was made to open the judgment but on a different ground than the first. The court said: "This application was to open a judgment which was open, and as to which an issue had been framed and a verdict rendered. A motion for a reargument or to rescind the order discharging the rule for a new trial and to enlarge the issue would have opened the way for an application for the relief sought." *Smith v. [a] Inasmuch as the rule requiring leave to be obtained before an applicavoluntary dismissal of the application,<sup>20</sup> or where it was disposed of on grounds not going to the merits of the application.<sup>21</sup> And it is held that an application made on entirely new grounds which were previously unknown to the applicant will not be barred by the denial of a prior application.<sup>22</sup> Thus, a motion made on grounds which, if found to be true, constitute an absolute right to this relief, as where the motion is made on the ground that the defendant was never served with process,<sup>23</sup> is no impediment to a second application by the party made upon grounds which go only to the discretion of the court, as upon the ground of excusable neglect.<sup>24</sup> In jurisdictions where the party may, at his option, pursue one of a number of remedies, he may not, after failing in one, resort to another.<sup>25</sup> Nor may the party, while pursuing one form of remedy, resort to another looking towards the same relief.<sup>26</sup>

XV. EQUITABLE RELIEF. — A. IN GENERAL. — This subdivision of the article treats of independent proceedings in equity by original bill to obtain equitable relief against judgments and decrees. This relief may be either by perpetual injunction against the enforcement of the judgment, by granting a new trial, or by vacating, annulling and setting aside the judgment, for defects therein or in the proceedings leading up to it.<sup>1</sup> This subdivision does not treat of enjoining a judgment because of some defect in the execution or the proceedings had or to be had upon it.<sup>2</sup> Nor does it treat of relief from the tion for this relief may, after a previous denial thereof, be renewed, is but a rule of practice, intended to avoid confusion and abuses, it does not affect the power of the court to reconsider its decision on a motion, upon the presentation of additional facts. Riggs v. Pursell, 74 N. Y. 370.

[b] Terms Imposed.—As a condition to granting leave to make a second application the court may require the applicant to do or perform some act, as the payment of costs. Failure to comply therewith operates to defeat the second application. Liquari v. Abramson, 91 N. Y. Supp. 768.

judgment by proceedings in or incidental to the original action.<sup>3</sup> These matters are treated elsewhere in this work. And the same is true as to the question of whether such proceedings are a direct or collateral attack upon the judgment or decree.<sup>4</sup>

B. NATURE OF REMEDY AND RELIEF. — 1. Enjoining Enforcement of Judgments. — Courts of equity have undoubted jurisdiction to restrain the enforcement of judgments,<sup>5</sup> in whole or in part,<sup>6</sup> subject to certain well defined rules, which are hereinafter discussed.<sup>7</sup> This power is sometimes recognized by statute.<sup>8</sup> But this procedure, although frequently resorted to, is giving way to that by an action to annul and set aside the judgment.<sup>9</sup>

2. Granting New Trial. — Although a court of equity has power, in a proper case, to grant a new trial in an action tried at law,<sup>10</sup>

[a] "The history of this branch of Equity Jurisdiction is briefly this: The first instance to be met with in any book of legal authority, of a new trial, with reference to the merits of the case on the evidence, is in the year 1665. Temp. Charles (11 Styles' R. 462, 466). It is supposed to be owing to the fact that motions were not reported before that time. For many years afterwards, new trials were grudgingly granted at Common Law; and for that very reason, Courts of this jurisdiction has become practically obsolete since the extension of the power of courts of law.<sup>11</sup> Equity, in granting a new trial, does not act directly upon the judgment or upon the court rendering it, but upon the parties.<sup>12</sup> It does not grant a retrial in the court of law as such;<sup>13</sup> but decrees<sup>14</sup> that unless the opposite party shall submit Equity were liberal in granting relief against Common Law judgments, and the Court of Chancery was inclined to take to itself the decision of legal questions, in many cases, which now appear to have been beyond the legitimate bounds of its jurisdiction. . . . But now, the thing is changed, and it is the every-day practice to grant new trials at law, and upon the most equitable principles, and Courts of Chancery seldom, and always reluctantly, interfere for this purpose." Taylor v. Sutton, 15 Ga. 103. To the same effect, see U. S.—Metzger v. Williams, 104 U. S. 93, 26 L. ed. 665. Ala.—De Soto Coal M. & D. Co. v. Hill, 188 Ala. 667, 65 So. 988. Miss.—*Herring v. [1] In Texas, (1) original bills in chancery for the granting of new trials at law do not exist; for having no court of chancery, the application after the term is addressed to the court which rendered the judgment. Vardeman v. Edwards, 21 Tex. 737. (2) But applications for new trials at a term subsequent to the trial term at which a judgment is obtained are in the nature of an original suit in equity. And therefore the party complaining is not confined by the rules of the statute in reference to new trials, and the principles of equity must prevail. Davis v. Ferry, 33 Tex. 426. Compare, (3) Vardeman v. Edwards, 21 Tex. 737, holding such application to be governed by the same principles governing applications during the term, except that an equitable excuse for failing to apply during the term must be shown.

or in part.<sup>17</sup> This remedy in equity is recognized by statutes in some jurisdictions.<sup>18</sup> Such relief may be granted even after the term at which the judgment was rendered.<sup>19</sup>

Equity is without power, however, to grant this relief directly,<sup>20</sup> although this power seems to be recognized in some cases.<sup>21</sup>

A suit to vacate a judgment in no sense assails the court in which the judgment is rendered,<sup>22</sup> but is simply a proceeding in personam.<sup>23</sup> The decree adjudges the rights of the parties inter sese in relation to that judgment.<sup>24</sup> Equity in granting such relief merely deprives the judgment-creditor of the benefit of the judgment and of any equitable advantage derived thereunder.<sup>25</sup>

[a] Nature of Relief.—(1) "Though this court cannot set aside a judgment of a common law court obtained against conscience, yet will it decree the party to acknowledge satisfaction on that judgment, though he has received nothing; because obtained where nothing was due." Barnesly v. Powell, 1 Ves. Sen. 285, 27 Eng. Reprint 1034. (2) Equity will prevent the party obtaining a judgment by fraud from using it to the injury of his adversary; or

A bill to restrain the collection of a judgment is not a proceeding to set it aside.<sup>26</sup>

4. Revising and Correcting.—A court of equity has no power to sit in judgment on the lawful acts of other tribunals, and no jurisdiction to try their acts, to see whether, in the exercise of their rightful powers, they have committed errors, either of law or fact.<sup>27</sup> Accordingly, equity can in no case revise or reform a judgment of a court of law in any respect whatever.<sup>28</sup>

[b] Treating Bill To Reform as Bill To Impeach.—In McLane v. San Antonio Nat. Bank (Tex. Civ. App.), 68 S. W. 63, a bill filed to correct and reform a decree upon the ground of erroneous description of the property on which the lien was foreclosed was considered as an original bill in equity brought to impeach a judgment on the ground of fraud or mistake.

[c] A mistake in a judgment is not corrected by reviewing the judgment or decree, but by restraining the parties who may take advantage of it, from doing so, or by compelling them to execute proper papers for the purpose of correcting it. Jefferson v. Gregory, 113 Va. 61, 73 S. E. 452.

eral. — Bills to set aside judgments at law and obtain new trials are not favored by courts of equity;<sup>31</sup> and therefore, the courts require a strict compliance with the limitations upon the right to relief.<sup>32</sup> It is only in cases which commend themselves strongly to equitable relief that the chancellor will exercise his power to vacate a judgment of a court at law.<sup>33</sup> If the applicant could not possibly derive any benefit from the relief sought, equity will withhold its relief.<sup>34</sup> The maxim of equity, that a party coming into equity must come with clean hands applies to this proceeding.<sup>35</sup>

2. Judgment Must Work Injustice. — A judgment at law will not be disturbed in equity when it does substantial justice between the parties,<sup>36</sup> no matter how irregular the proceedings may be.<sup>37</sup> To warrant equitable relief against a judgment, it must clearly appear that the enforcement of the judgment would be unjust and against conscience,<sup>38</sup> and this has been held to be true even if the judgment be

Equity will relieve a party who neglected to interpose his defense or to avail himself of his proper legal remedies, if he did not knowingly have his day in court.<sup>52</sup> A defendant who has not been served with process but who knows of the action is not ordinarily guilty of laches and thereby deprived of equitable relief in failing to seek relief in the action itself;<sup>53</sup> but the rule is otherwise if he has been served and the service is for some reason illegal.<sup>54</sup> nary diligence in preventing a fraud from being perpetrated upon him, and fraud vitiates everything it touches. Of course, a defendant failing to defend cannot have the judgment vacated on account of any innocent mistake, or want of recollection on the part of the plaintiff, or other witness, nor even on account of the perjury of the other witnesses, provided the plaintiff himself is wholly guiltless. Nor can he have the judgment vacated on account of any mistake or error on the part of the court or jury, unless the record affirmatively shows such mistake or error. All such mistakes and errors each party is bound to anticipate, and to prepare for by extraordinary diligence. But no party is bound to anticipate or to suppose that the other party will commit willful and corrupt perjury, and no party is bound to exercise extraordinary diligence in preparing to meet such perjury." *Laithe v. [a] In National Metal Co. v. Greene Consol. Cop. Co., 11 Ariz. 108, 89 Pac. 535, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1062, service upon a foreign corporation was had by serving a person who was not the agent of the corporation. The person served notified the corporation of the fact of service and notified the plaintiff that he was not the agent of the defendant corporation. It was held that the corporation could ignore the matter and assume that a proper service would be made. A distinction is to be observed between knowledge of the pendency of a suit and notice thereof. Jurisdiction can be acquired, if one does not submit himself to it, in no other way than by actual notice or by constructive notice. Actual notice is given only by personal service of process, constructive service or by some form of substituted service. Actual service may sometimes be given although there is a formal defect in the manner of service. The failure to attack such service before judgment may amount to a waiver of the informality, and relief in equity cannot be had after judgment. But where there is no service, there is no notice irrespective of any knowledge which the defendant may acquire informally. Therefore the failure to act upon the information received is not neglect and is not such an inaction which bars relief in equity.

[b] But see State v. Hill, 50 Ark. 458, 8 S. W. 401, holding that "One who is aggrieved by a judgment rendered in his absence must show not only that he was not summoned, but also that he did not know of the proceeding in time to make defense, in order to get relief in equity."

[c] Where process is by mistake served upon defendant's daughter of the same name and the defendant does not appear, a judgment against the defendant is void and properly set aside in equity although defendant knew of the mistaken service and was kept advised by counsel of the progress of the case. *Willeke v. or cause of action,<sup>58</sup> especially where the judgment itself is regular upon its face,<sup>59</sup> or where relief is not asked until the demand of the judgment creditor is barred by the statute of limitations.<sup>60</sup> There may be circumstances under which a showing of merits will not be required.<sup>61</sup> Thus where it appears that the court had no jurisdiction to render the judgment, no meritorious defense need be pleaded, ac-

[a] "The showing of merits should not be required to the extent of compelling a party against whom a judgment has been obtained, without jurisdiction over his person, to come into a court of equity and assume the burden of disproving his liability. On the contrary, a party thus circumstanced is entitled to the maintenance of his right to defend against such supposed liability in an action wherein his adversary must assume the burden of proof. This distinction is important in all cases, and in many may be absolutely controlling. The allegation of merits, though not traversable, may very properly be required as an earnest of good faith from the party seeking relief from a supposed unauthorized judgment; and as a rule, under our system, such pleading may be required to be verified. If a pleading be demurred to for want of such averment, it may be dismissed, unless amended; but in this case the absence of the averment not having been made a ground of demurrer, did not justify the dismissal of the complaint." Wilson v. Hawthorne, 14 Colo. 530, 24 Pac. 548, 20 Am. St. Rep. 290.

[b] When it is shown that the result of the original action would probably have been different, the measure of the law is fulfilled, and the parties are then relegated to their original status of plaintiff and defendant, with the burden of proof resting upon the plaintiff to make his case, leaving the defendant the right, if he sees fit, to rely merely upon the weakness of his adversary's case. Crosby v. Di Palma (Tex. Civ. App.), 141 S. W. 321.

[a] Where a judgment is voidable merely, or where although void, it appears regular on the face of the record, a showing of merits is required before equity will interfere. But equity will sometimes interfere without a showing of merits. Gifford v. Morrison, 37 Ohio St. 502, 41 Am. Rep. 537.

[a] Where Judgment Is Fraudulently Obtained.—That the defense is not barred by the statute of limitations need not be shown where the judgment was obtained by fraud. People v. Perris Irr. Dist., 142 Cal. 601, 76 Pac. 381.

61. See the cases and notes following, and 1 STANDARD PROC. 652, 655.

[a] There may be exceptions to the rule requiring a party to show that the result would have been different if he had an opportunity to present his defense, in a case of a nonresident, or perhaps, in a case where the defendant, had he known of the judgment being taken against him, could have paid, adjusted or satisfied it more advantageously, says the court in Brandt v. Little, 47 Wash. 194, 91 Pac. 765, 14 L. R. A. (N. S.) 213, but "as to these matters, we do not decide at this time."

[b] A distinction is sometimes made

according to some authorities,<sup>62</sup> though the weight of authority requires a showing of a meritorious defense even where the court rendering between cases in which the judgment subjects the petitioner's property and those in which a money judgment is recovered. Under the former, equity, it has been held, should grant relief without inquiring into the merits of the original claim, but under the latter the petitioner might be required to allege that a defense existed to the original action. Great West Min. Co. v. Woodmas, 12 Colo. 46, 20 Pac. 771, 13 Am. St. Rep. 204; Keely v. East Side Imp. Co., 16 Colo. App. 365, 65 Pac. 456.

[c] Where Fiduciary Relation Exists.—Where the fraud is that the plaintiff at law occupies a fiduciary relation to the defendant which makes it inequitable for him to use his position so as to destroy the rights of other creditors, equity will set aside a judgment obtained by him without a showing of a meritorious defense. Title Ins. & Trust Co. v. California Dev. Co., 171 Cal. 173, 152 Pac. 542, 558.

[d] Where defendant tenders into court the full amount of the judgment alleged to have been obtained without service of process, no allegation or showing of a meritorious defense is required. Hauswirth v. Sullivan, 6 Mont. 203, 9 Pac. 798, where the purpose of the action was to clear property of the cloud caused by an execution sale under the judgment.

Wood*, 20 Iowa 236, in which the court says "our attention has not been called to any adjudged case which holds that before a party can obtain relief . . . he must deny and show that he is not indebted to the party obtaining the judgment"). Compare, Gerrish v. Hunt, 66 Iowa 682, 24 N. W. 274; Piggott v. Addicks, 3 G. Gr. 427. Mo.—Bornschein v. Finck, 13 Mo. App. 120. Ohio.—Gifford v. Morrison, 37 Ohio St.

App.), 176 S. W. 644; Fox v. Robbins (Tex. Civ. App.), 62 S. W. 815. But compare, Masterson v. Ashcom, 54 Tex. 324.

[a] The reasons for not requiring a showing of a meritorious defense where the judgment attacked is void are variously stated, namely that "there is no presumption in favor of a judgment creditor," and "neither reason nor sound policy will require a defendant so imposed upon to try the merits of the cause on a petition in chancery to set aside the judgment;" "that the injury of which he justly complains is that a judgment was rendered against him without notice and without defense." Massachusetts Benefit Life Assn. v. Lohmiller, 74 Fed. 23, 20 C. C. A. 274.

[b] The effect of a rule requiring a showing of a meritorious defense would be that a void judgment is prima facie evidence of indebtedness. Arnold v. Hawley, 67 Iowa 313, 25 N. W. 259.

[c] Where Law and Equity Are United.—In Magin v. Lamb, 43 Minn. 80, 44 N. W. 675, 19 Am. St. Rep. 216, the court said: "It was intimated obiter, in the opinion in the latter case [Heffner v. Gunz, 29 Minn. 108, 12 N. W. 342], that in a suit in equity it would be incumbent on the plaintiff to show reasons for equitable intervention beyond the bare fact of want of jurisdiction; and such was the prevailing rule when the interference of courts of equity was sought to restrain the enforcement of judgments of separate courts of law. But the reasons for any distinction in respect to the conditions upon which relief is to be granted in an action to restrain or vacate a judgment, and in a motion for the same purpose, have disappeared with the uniting of equitable and legal jurisdictions in the same court. If now a defendant, upon motion to the court rendering the judgment, may have it set aside merely because no action was ever commenced against him, there is no longer any reason why, if he prosecutes an action in the same court, for the judgment was without jurisdiction, as where there was no legal service of process.<sup>63</sup>

The defense must be such that it is likely to produce a different result on a new trial.<sup>64</sup> If the defense of the petitioner is purely technical,<sup>65</sup> and without merit,<sup>66</sup> or if the defense is unconscionable,<sup>67</sup> equity will not vacate or set aside the judgment.

the same purpose, any different grounds for relief should be required."

[a] Must Be Inequitable.—Equity will not set aside a judgment at law merely because it may be void, for if the judgment is not inequitable as between the parties, no matter how irregular or void it may be, a court of equity will not interfere, but will leave the defendant to such remedies as a court of law can give him, to avoid its effect. Thomas v. West, 59 Wis. 103, 17 N. W. 684.

[a] In a suit to enjoin a judgment, the validity of the judgment cannot be inquired into unless it appears that no debt is owing for which the judgment could equitably be rendered, or that the complainant is not equitably bound to pay any part of the debt, or that the amount which he is equitably bound to pay is tendered, at least, in the bill. Tompkins v. Lang, 74 Ill. App. 500.

[b] Money Should Be Paid Into Court.—When a bill admits an indebtedness past due, promised and incurred in compromise of a larger claim, a simple offer to pay is not enough to authorize a restraining order enjoining an execution in the hands of the sheriff. The sum admitted to be due should be paid into court. Roebbing Sons Co. v. Stevens Elec. Co., 93 Ala. 39, 9 So. 369.

[c] Where Judgment Is Void.—The rule requiring a tender or offer of payment of the amount admitted to be justly due before equity will enjoin the judgment applies as well where the judgment is void for want of jurisdiction as where it is claimed to be irregularly or erroneously rendered. Byers v. Odell, 56 Iowa 618, 10 N. W. 102. But see Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Ware, 74 Tex. 47, 11 S. W. 918, holding that a party seeking to enjoin a void judgment need not bring the money into court if he admits the indebtedness. And compare the preceding section.

[d] No tender is required in an action to set aside a judgment on the ground that the court has no jurisdiction, when there was a lack of service and judgment was rendered on an unauthorized appearance of an attorney. McEachern v. Brackett, 8 Wash. 652, 36 Pac. 690, 40 Am. St. Rep. 922.

[e] The rule that before a party can go into equity to have a judgment made without notice to him set aside, he must pay the debt in judgment, does not apply to the case of a judgment rendered for a penalty against a party so amerced without notice. Chester v. Miller, 13 Cal. 558.

[f] Relief from a judgment on a usurious contract will not be granted a party who does not tender or offer to bring into court the amount of principal and interest actually due on the judgment after deducting the alleged usury. Neurath v. Hecht, 62 Md. 221; Rogers v. Rathbun, 1 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 367. See also Chester v. Apperson, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 639, where the party gave an injunction bond.

[g] Where the complainant was for a fraudulent purpose committed to a lunatic asylum, and then the defendants by fraud procured a judgment for an excessive amount on a claim not yet due, a tender of the amount really due before the filing of the bill need not be made. Lockwood v. Mitchell, 19 Ohio 418, 53 Am. Dec. 438.

is given in lieu of payment.<sup>72</sup> But one who has a good defense against a claim upon which a void judgment has been rendered need not as a condition precedent to bringing a suit to set it aside pay or offer to pay the amount alleged to be due on the claim.<sup>73</sup>

6. Effect of Adequacy or Inadequacy of Remedy at Law.—a. Statement of General Rules.—The maxim of equity that when a party aggrieved has a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy at law, equity will not lend its aid applies to this proceeding.<sup>74</sup> If, therefore, a Equity has no jurisdiction where the party has an adequate remedy at law. See 4 STANDARD PROC. 478.

[a] Remedy Available in Sister State Inadequate.—A remedy which a party is compelled to go into a foreign jurisdiction to avail himself of is not adequate. The remedy must be that which the courts of the state in which the bill is filed can apply. Stanton v. Embry, 46 Conn. 595.

jurisdictions, equity may grant relief against a judgment procured by fraud, although the party might find a remedy at law,<sup>78</sup> and even though a party may have made an abortive attempt to obtain relief at law.<sup>79</sup>

These rules are particularly applicable in those states where legal and equitable relief is administered in different courts.<sup>80</sup> The rule under which a court of equity declines to interfere until after an application for the relief has been made to the court in which the judgment was rendered, has no application when relief has been sought and denied by that court.<sup>81</sup>

Rockwell*, 14 Ill. 375, quoted in Foote v. Despain, 87 Ill. 28.

Fraud in procurement of judgment as a ground of relief generally, see infra, XV, E, 6.

79. "The fact, too, that the party had notice of the judgment in time to have appealed the case by certiorari under the statute, and that he made an abortive attempt to do so, does not deprive him of the right to apply to a court of equity for relief against the fraud which has been perpetrated." Nelson v. Rockwell, 14 Ill. 375.

tained when the same relief can be obtained through a motion or other proceeding in the action in which the judgment was obtained; and in a jurisdiction in which legal and equitable relief is dispensed in different tribunals, a court of equity will not grant relief against a judgment when the same relief can be obtained by the aid of the court that rendered the judgment. But under the system of procedure which obtains in this state, where the various kinds of relief are administered by the same tribunal, and where there is but one form of civil action for the enforcement or protection of civil rights, . . . a party who presents a complaint showing his right to the relief asked is not to be denied that relief because he might have sought it under a different form of action." Merriman v. Morris, 2 Wash. (2 Va.) 255.

[d] A plaintiff who sought a reversal of a judgment on an unfair and incomplete bill of exceptions, the judge having refused to sign a full and fair bill, cannot thereafter obtain equitable relief in equity on the sole ground that the judge refused to give him a fair bill and that if such bill had been allowed the judgment would have been reversed. Bellows v. Tod, 52 Iowa 359, 3 N. W. 102.

[e] Failure of Reporter To Furnish Transcript.—A party is justified in relying upon the court reporter for a transcript of the oral proceedings at the trial, and if, without fault on his part, such transcript cannot be furnished nor a bill of exceptions prepared, equity will grant a new trial in a proper case. Tootle-Weakley Millinery Co. v. Billingsley, 74 Neb. 531, 105 N. W. 85.

[f] Where a party being a stranger is unable to get sureties for an appeal or certiorari from a justice's judgment, he is without an adequate remedy at law through no fault of his own, and equity will relieve him, there being a mistake. Roberts v. Cantrell, 3 Hayw. (Tenn.) 219.

[a] Louisiana.—The remedy by action for nullity of a judgment is not intended as a substitute for the remedy by appeal, and will not interfere with a party's right to appeal from the same judgment. The case taken up by an appeal is the case heard and decided in the court of first instance, while the action of nullity is one which has not been heard and decided, and which is dehors the record lodged in the appellate courts; hence an action of nullity and the appeal may be maintained at the same time. State ex rel. Pelletier v. Sommersville, 112 La. 1091, 36 So. 864; Cockfield v. Tourres, 24 La. Ann. 168.

[b] Whether Case Presented Is Same as That Pending on Appeal Is Discretionary.—The relief by an annulment proceeding is to provide relief against fraud in the obtention of the judgment which does not appear in the record and for which an appeal would afford no remedy. Whether a petition presents a case of this kind, or whether it presents the same case which has already been heard and decided, and which is pending on appeal, is a question left to the sound discretion of the judge of the first instance. State ex rel. Pelletier v. Sommersville, 112 La. 1091, 36 So. 864.

equity is not affected by a statute conferring like or similar jurisdiction upon courts of law, unless the statute so provides.<sup>1</sup> But if the party elects to proceed under either remedy, he is bound by his election and cannot later abandon that remedy and pursue the other.<sup>2</sup>

(III.) Relief by Petition in the Cause.<sup>3</sup> — In some states, there are statutes providing for the setting aside of judgments by petition in the cause in certain enumerated cases.<sup>4</sup> Where this remedy is adequate, equity will not generally grant relief.<sup>5</sup> On the other hand, it has been held that these statutes furnish a concurrent and cumulative remedy,<sup>6</sup> and do not deprive the equity courts of their inherent jurisdiction.<sup>7</sup> These statutes generally limit the time within which the court at law may grant relief, and when the court has no power to act under the statute equity will grant relief upon a proper application.<sup>8</sup> If, however, there are any equitable grounds of relief which fraud, equity will not stop to inquire whether or not the injured party might possibly get relief upon an application to open the judgment. Moore v. Gamble, 9 N. J. Eq. 246.

[b] Where Party Is Without Notice.—Where the notice apprised a defendant of only a part of the demands, he may seek relief in equity against a default judgment. As to the claims to which he had no notice, the statute regulating proceedings to set aside defaults vacate judgments and for a new trial does not afford an exclusive remedy. *Blain v. [a] "It is a well established principle that a judgment rendered without jurisdiction is void, and may be attacked collaterally in any proceeding in which its validity may be called in question. This principle is in no way affected by the fact that the defendant has a right to have such void judgment reversed on appeal or error. It is clearly within the jurisdiction of courts of equity to vacate or enjoin judgments at law, which, by reason or [sic] fraud, want of jurisdiction in the court before which it was rendered, or any other circumstance, it would be

[b] In Reeve v. Kennedy, 43 Cal. 643, 650, which was an action to set aside a judgment because there was in fact no service of the summons, and no appearance by the defendant, and because the judgment was fraudulently obtained, the court said: "The defendant being a purchaser for value, at a judicial sale, without notice of the extrinsic facts, which are relied upon to impeach the judgment, cannot be affected thereby. No principle is better settled than that a purchaser at a judicial sale, without notice, under proceedings regular on their face, and had in a Court of competent jurisdiction, is not affected by any mere error of the Court, for which the judgment might be reversed on appeal, nor for any secret vice in the judgment, not appearing on the face of the record, and which can be made to appear only the fraud of the plaintiff in procuring a colorable jurisdiction of the defendant.<sup>21</sup>

8. Effect of Affirmance on Appeal.—The affirmance of a judgment on appeal does not affect the right of a party to impeach a judgment by a suit in equity.<sup>22</sup>

9. Effect of Death of Plaintiff in Judgment.—The right to seek this relief in equity is not terminated by the death of the party procuring the judgment.<sup>23</sup>

10. Estoppel.—One may become estopped from attacking a judgment in equity,<sup>24</sup> as by accepting the fruits of the judgment.<sup>25</sup> By delaying to proceed in equity to obtain relief, the party may be estopped in favor of third persons, who acquire interests in the judgment.<sup>26</sup>

by the production of extrinsic evidence. He is bound at his peril to inquire whether it sufficiently appears on the face of the record that the Court had jurisdiction to render the judgment, and whether there is a valid execution. But nothing more is required of him. Unless the plaintiff in the action be also the purchaser at the sale, the latter will not be affected by any mere error of the Court, even though the judgment be afterwards reversed for such error; nor can his rights be impaired by any secret vice in the proceedings, resulting from fraud or other similar cause of which he has no notice. . . . But there would be no security in titles acquired at judicial sales if the rights of a bona fide purchaser, without notice, could be overthrown by subsequent proof that the judgment was obtained by fraud, or that the record, which showed a due service on the defendant, was in fact false." Affirmed in *Stokes v. D. JUDGMENT AGAINST WHICH RELIEF MAY BE OBTAINED.<sup>27</sup> — 1. In General. — It may be stated generally that equity has jurisdiction, in a proper case, to relieve against judgments and decrees of any court,<sup>28</sup> whether standing above,<sup>29</sup> or below<sup>30</sup> it, whether of original<sup>31</sup> or appellate<sup>32</sup> jurisdiction. Thus equity can set aside judgments of courts of law,<sup>33</sup> decrees of courts of equity,<sup>34</sup> or of probate,<sup>35</sup> judgments of justices of the peace,<sup>36</sup> and decrees of spiritual courts.<sup>37</sup> But it has no jurisdiction to vacate or set aside the judgment of a criminal court.<sup>38</sup>

[a] But, as was said in Sohler v. Sohler, 135 Cal. 323, 67 Pac. 282, 87 Am. St. Rep. 98, the utmost that a court of equity can do if it finds that the decree was obtained by fraud is to decree that the defendant hold as an involuntary trustee of the plaintiff the property vested in him by the decree, and compel him to convey and transfer to the plaintiff accordingly all that he may have obtained from the estate of the deceased to which plaintiff is entitled, or, if a conveyance of specific property may not be had, then to hold him accountable to the plaintiff for the value thereof. fact, equity may, it has been held, take from a party the benefit of a will established by his fraud.<sup>59</sup>

E. GROUNDS FOR RELIEF. — 1. In General. — Courts of equity will not interfere with a judgment at law unless there exists some well-defined equitable ground justifying it.<sup>60</sup> But as a general rule, any facts which clearly prove it to be against conscience to execute a judgment will justify an application to a court of chancery for relief

See generally the title "Probate Courts."

[a] The reason for the rule is that the proceeding is essentially one in rem, and not inter partes, and that all the world is concluded where the provisions of the law are substantially observed. Stead v. Curtis, 191 Fed. 529, 112 C. C. A. 463.

[b] An exception to this general rule, says the court in Stead v. Curtis, 191 Fed. 529, 112 C. C. A. 463, exists in those states where by statutory authority or by custom the probate of a will may be challenged by independent suit for forgery or fraud attending its execution and probate. The federal courts, in such jurisdictions, will adopt the remedy obtaining by local statute and custom, and entertain a suit to obviate the effect of probate. Pulver v. Leonard, 176 Fed. 586.

[c] Where there has been a breach of duty arising from a fiduciary relation on the part of those securing the probate of a will, and the facts alleged to constitute extrinsic fraud are such as to prevent the heirs from appearing in the probate court and contesting the will, and exhibiting fully their case against its being admitted to probate, equity will grant relief. Nicholson v. Leatham, 28 Cal. App. 597, 153 Pac. 965.

[d] In Federal Courts.—Where a suit to vacate a probate will not lie in equity, it will not lie in the federal courts to disturb the finality of probate. Stead v. Curtis, 191 Fed. 529, 112 C. C. A. 463.

59. Sohler v. Sohler, 135 Cal. 323, 67 Pac. 282, 87 Am. St. Rep. 98, relying upon Barnes v. Powell, 1 Ves. Sr. (Eng.) 284, 27 Eng. Reprint 1034, holds, "It thus became the principle of the English courts of chancery, while permitting the probate to stand, as having no power to set it aside, to decree that the false legatee or wrongful executor was the trustee for the rightful claimant. So here we hold that, under our system, the utmost that the court in equity could do, . . . would be to decree that the defendant P. R. holds title as trustee of the minor plaintiffs, and compel him to make conveyance and transfer to them accordingly of all that he may have obtained from the estate of the deceased to which they were entitled, or, if a conveyance of specific property may not be had, then to hold him accountable to the plaintiffs for the value thereof."

[a] But see Allen v. M'Pherson, 1 H. L. Cas. (Eng.) 191, 9 Eng. Reprint 727, refusing to follow Barnes v. Powell, 1 Ves. Sr. (Eng.) 284, 27 Eng. Reprint 1034, and holding equity has no jurisdiction to declare the party in whose favor the probate is granted to be a trustee, for by this process one would obtain a review of the judgment upon the probate.

[b] Impairing Obligation of Contract.—A judgment will not be vacated in equity on the ground that it violates the federal constitution in im-

against it.<sup>61</sup> Such facts must either be those of which the party could not avail himself at law, or those of which he was prevented from availing himself by fraud, accident, or the act of the opposite party, unmixed with negligence on his part.<sup>62</sup> In general, where it would have been proper for a court of law to have granted a new trial upon timely application therefor, equity will afford its aid and grant it, if the application be made upon grounds arising after the court of law ceased to have power to act.<sup>63</sup>

While the specific grounds for equitable relief against judgments are limited by statute in some jurisdictions,<sup>64</sup> it may be stated generally that where a judgment has been obtained by or is the result pairing the obligation of contracts. This provision of the constitution does not apply to an erroneous decision of a court. Allen v. Allen, 97 Fed. 525, 38 C. C. A. 336.

[a] Under some statutes, it is provided that a judgment obtained by ordinary proceedings cannot be annulled or modified by any order in an action by equitable proceedings, except for a defense which has arisen or been discovered since the rendition of the judgment. Leonard v. Capitol Ins. Co., 101 Iowa 482, 70 N. W. 629; Walker v. Thomas, 88 Ky. 486, 11 S. W. 434; Emmerson's Admr. v. Herriford, 8 Bush (Ky.) 229; McGown v. Macklin, 7 Bush (Ky.) 308; French v. French, 6 Ky. Op. 739; King v. Boles, 4 Ky. Op. 147.

[b] This statute does not apply to void judgments. Leonard v. Capitol Ins. Co., 101 Iowa 482, 70 N. W. 629.

[c] Where the alleged matters of defense were substantially within the knowledge of the defendant at the time the judgment was rendered against him, a petition for a modification of an injunction against the judgment on the ground such defenses were discovered since the rendition of the judgment will be dismissed. McCown v. Macklin's Exr., 7 Bush (Ky.) 308.

[d] In Louisiana (1) as to the vices of form specified in Code of Practice, art. 606, the grounds are limited to those specified; but as to the causes of nullity which appertain to the merits of the question tried, referred to in art. 607, the statute is illustrative and not exclusive. Lazarus v. McGuirk, 42 La. Ann. 194, 8 So. 253; Blanch v. Speckman, 23 La. Ann. 146. (2) A judgment may be annulled for a cause not expressly included in those mentioned in the statutes regulating proceedings for the annulment of judgments, when the party attacking it shows he will sustain real injury unless relieved, and this relief cannot be had on appeal, and the case presents facts on which a court of equity of the other states would interfere. *Perry v. [a] "Surprise" is practically synonymous with "accident." Ludwig v. Walker, 59 Misc. 62, 111 N. Y. Supp. 1102.

[b] Nature of Surprise.—The surprise on which courts of equity act "must be accompanied with fraud and circumvention, or at least by such circumstances as demonstrate that the party had no opportunity to use suitable deliberation, or that there was some influence or management to mislead him." Turley v. Taylor, 65 Tenn. 391.

[c] Unexpected Character of Opponent's Evidence.—The loss of a case by reason of the unexpected character of the adversary's testimony is not sufficient to sustain an independent action in equity for relief against the judgment unless there has been some fraudulent conduct. Moore v. Guley, 144 N. C. 81, 56 S. E. 681, 10 L. R. A. (N. S.) 242. To same effect, see Ala. Powell v. Stewart, 17 Ala. 719. Ill. Bell v. Gardner, 77 Ill. 319. Va.—Oswald-Deniston & Co. v. Tyler, 4 Rand. (25 Va.) 19.

[d] The rule as to granting new trials at law either before the inferior court or on appeal to revising courts on the ground of the unexpected introduction of testimony and the rule as to granting new trials in chancery after a trial at law on the same ground are so different that cases supporting one furnish no guide whatever for action in the other. Turley v. Taylor, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 394.

[e] Surprise at the rejection of testimony is not ground for relief. Post v. Boardman, 1 Clark Ch. (N. Y.) 333.

[f] Failure of Witness To Remember.—That the witnesses relied on to make the defense appear to the jury failed to remember the circumstances which he is called to give in evidence, is no ground for equitable interposition. Drew v. Hayne, 8 Ala. 438.

[g] The fact that the witness failed to state a material fact upon his examination at law, and that the complainant did not know of such omission until after the trial because he could not hear well, is insufficient to give a court of equity jurisdiction. Stone v. Moody, 6 Yerg. (Tenn.) 31.

[a] Collusion to conceal material evidence, which, if offered, might have produced a different result, will suffice to move a court of equity to give relief against a judgment in that action. First Baptist Church v. Syms, 52 N. J. Eq. 545, 31 Atl. 717, reversing 51 N. J. Eq. 363, 28 Atl. 461.

72. Georgia Code, 1910, §5965; Clark v. Ramsey, 143 Ga. 729, 85 S. E. 869; Tumlin v. O'Bryan, 68 Ga. 65.

[a] A judgment against a party kept in ignorance of a suit against him by the willful act of his opponent will be set aside in equity. United States v. Main, 196 Fed. 160.

too, where it is inequitable to enforce a judgment, although regularly obtained, by reason of events subsequent to its rendition, equity will restrain its enforcement.<sup>73</sup>

Effect of Statutes Granting Power to Courts of Law. — The jurisdiction of courts of equity in granting relief against judgments is not limited to the grounds enumerated in the statutes providing for a vacation of a judgment by the court rendering it.<sup>74</sup>

Grounds Affording Relief From Decrees. — The same grounds warranting relief against judgments warrant relief by a chancery court against its own decrees.<sup>75</sup>

2. Matters Presented Must Not Have Been Considered by Law Court. — Equity will not set aside a judgment or decree for any matter actually presented or considered in the judgment or decree assailed.<sup>76</sup> Relief can be granted only upon some new matter of equity

75. A chancery court will stay its own decrees upon precisely the same grounds it will enjoin proceedings in other courts. Montgomery v. Whitworth, 1 Coop. Ch. (Tenn.) 174.

[a] "It is well-settled law that a decree may be set aside when procured by fraud, accident, or mistake without fault on the part of the party aggrieved thereby, . . . as where an appearance was entered by an unauthorized attorney, and a decree procured on such appearance; so where a decree was procured without the concurring steps necessary to give the chancery court jurisdiction, and such omission was kept from view by false recitals; so where the name of a party was signed to an appeal bond without his authority, and judgment taken thereon in the supreme court; so where an ex parte judgment on motion was taken in the supreme court against an officer for non-return of an execution for too large an amount, the motioner concealing the fact of certain payment; so where, in a case carried to the supreme court on a bond for appeal executed after the time for procuring the appeal had expired, the supreme court erroneously took jurisdiction, and rendered judgment; so where the satisfaction of a judgment of the supreme court was erroneously set aside by that court upon an ex parte application; so where the supreme court rendered a decree upon the false statement of an appellee that the appellant had abandoned his appeal." *McTeer v. not arising in the former case.<sup>77</sup> Accordingly, equity will not disturb a judgment at law on account of any defense that has been tried, whether legal<sup>78</sup> or equitable.<sup>79</sup> If, however, a party is prevented from fully exhibiting his case by fraud or mistake, he will not be denied relief because the fact on which his defense depended was technically at issue in the original proceeding.<sup>80</sup>

Where a party moves for a new trial and fails, he cannot obtain relief in equity on the same facts.<sup>81</sup> The same is true where a motion

81. Telford v. Brinkerhoff, 163 Ill. 439, 45 N. E. 156.

[a] An adverse decision upon an application for new trial is final, and to vacate or set aside,<sup>82</sup> or where a motion to strike out a judgment,<sup>83</sup> has been made and denied.

As the truth of the averments in the pleadings is directly involved and determined by the judgment rendered, it is not a ground for relief in equity that the allegations in the pleadings are untrue.<sup>84</sup> The same is true of the evidence in the case. Equity will not set aside a judgment on the ground that the evidence was false in fact and that this was known to the party obtaining the judgment.<sup>85</sup>

3. Where Judgment Is Void.—a. In General.—Where a judgment is void, equity will vacate or enjoin it in a proper case.<sup>86</sup> The equity will not thereafter order a new trial at law upon the same grounds.

[a] Where a motion to set aside a default had been abandoned, equity will grant relief in a proper case. State Ins. Co. v. Waterhouse, 78 Iowa 674, 43 N. W. 611.

[b] In California, an adverse decision on a motion to vacate a judgment is not a bar to a subsequent suit to vacate the judgment for the same cause. "It would seem . . . the correct practice would be to move promptly under section 473 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and if defeated in that proceeding to commence a separate action for relief upon the ground of the plaintiff's fraud." *Estudillo v. (II.) Absence of Legal Service.—(A.) IN GENERAL.<sup>91</sup>—When without service of process, either actual or constructive, no opportunity is given a party to be heard in his defense, equity will set aside a judgment against him.<sup>92</sup> And as an invalid service is the same as no service whatever,<sup>93</sup> if a party has not been legally served with process, and there has been no appearance by him,<sup>94</sup> he may have a judgment against

[a] Facts Showing Want of Jurisdiction Must Be Dehors the Record. When the attack is based upon the alleged want of jurisdiction of a judgment defendant, the facts upon which the attack is made must be extrinsic to the record, for the reason that it is presumed the court deciding it had jurisdiction and that the record is true. This rule has no application to records showing on their face that the court was without jurisdiction. Welsh v. Koch, 4 Cal. App. 571, 88 Pac. 604.

conclusive and cannot be impeached in equity, except where the plaintiff in the judgment advised or procured the false return to be made, or knowing of the false return, nevertheless took judgment upon it, or in other words, except where the plaintiff in judgment has been guilty of fraud in the concoction of the judgment,<sup>99</sup> in most states the return of the officer is not conclusive in a proceeding in equity to set aside or enjoin the judgment, and equity will set aside or enjoin the judgment where it appears to have been based on a false return of the officer as to service of process.<sup>1</sup> In the latter jurisdictions, the remedy at law by action against the officer who served the writ is not deemed a plain, speedy and adequate remedy which prevents relief.<sup>2</sup>

Where a return is fraudulently altered by plaintiff's counsel, so as to show service on parties not served, equity will relieve against the judgment.<sup>3</sup>

[a] In Kansas the sheriff's return is conclusive as to matters that fall within his personal knowledge, unless the falsity of the return is disclosed by other parts of the record. As to facts upon which jurisdiction depends not within the personal knowledge of the officer, his return is not conclusive and may be impeached in equity. *Goddard v. (III.) Unauthorized Appearance. — A judgment against a person upon an unauthorized appearance by an attorney may be set aside by a bill in equity.<sup>4</sup> So also, a judgment in a suit brought by an attorney without authority from the plaintiff will be enjoined in equity where the attorney is unable to respond in damages.<sup>5</sup>

c. Because of Incapacity of Judge. — A judgment may be annulled because of the legal incapacity of the trial judge to preside and try the case.<sup>6</sup>

d. Judgment in Violation of Injunction. — A judgment taken in violation of an existing injunction is, it has been held, void, and may be enjoined in equity.<sup>7</sup>

jurors, discovered too late to move for a new trial, sometimes furnishes ground for the granting of a new trial on bill in equity.<sup>30</sup> But an interference with the deliberation of the jury, though an irregularity in the proceeding, does not justify equitable interference with the judgment.<sup>31</sup> Nor will equity enjoin a judgment because the jury disregarded certain evidence in the case,<sup>32</sup> or for errors in impaneling,<sup>33</sup> and instructing a jury.<sup>34</sup>

[a] Want of finality as to the issues between the parties is not ground for annulling a judgment. Smith v. Barke (Tex. Civ. App.), 187 S. W. 697.

[b] Absence of Direction as to Manner of Partition.—That a judgment orin its rendition and entry,<sup>38</sup> are not grounds for setting aside or enjoining it. So too, neither errors in decisions upon questions of fact,<sup>39</sup> nor points of law,<sup>40</sup> no matter how plain or obvious they may be, furnish ground for review of a judgment in equity. Nor will equity vacate or enjoin a judgment on the ground that it is not warranted by the pleadings.<sup>41</sup> That the court rendering the judgment referred to no law and adduced no reasons for his decision is not ground for annulling the judgment.<sup>42</sup>

The mere fact that a judgment is rendered for an excessive amount will not warrant equitable relief;<sup>43</sup> but where a judgment is rendered dering a partition did not direct the manner in which the partition was to be made, or appoint a notary to make it are irregularities which are the subject of appeal rather than of the action of nullity. Gilmore v. Gilmore, 9 La. Ann. 197.

[c] When Appeal Will Not Lie. The fact that an erroneous judgment is for an amount so small that an appeal does not lie does not alter the rule. Kalmans v. Baumbush (Tex. Civ. App.), 187 S. W. 697.

[a] Where the clerk does not correctly record the judgment, relief cannot be had in equity. Equity cannot examine and determine if the judicial determination is other than that shown by the record. Cutter v. Kline, 35 N. J. Eq. 534.

[b] Rendition of judgment before the expiration of time in which to appear is an irregularity; but the judgment will not be set aside at the instance of a party who did not take advantage of the defect in the manner provided for by statute, and who did not show any defense to the action. *Griffith v. for an amount which is not intended by or which is inconsistent with the pleadings through fraud, accident, mistake, or miscalculation, equity will afford relief, if there is no adequate remedy at law.<sup>44</sup>

5. Failure To Present Cause of Action or Defense at Law. — a. In General.—It is the duty of the parties to an action at law to set up in that action their claims and defenses.<sup>45</sup> A defendant who fails to set up his legal defenses in the action at law cannot ordinarily set up the matters constituting such defenses afterwards in equity as grounds for annulling, setting aside or enjoining the judgment recovered at law.<sup>46</sup> If, however, without fault or negligence on his own

[a] Rendering a judgment for a greater amount than that authorized by the pleadings is an error or irregularity which equity will not relieve against unless, perhaps its enforcement as to the excess may be enjoined when the judgment debtor does equity by paying or tendering the amount actually due. George v. Nowlan, 38 Ore. 537, 64 Pac. 1.

[a] Application of Rule.—The general rule applies only in cases where such a defense would authorize a court of law to render the party full relief, in the case presented by the evidence. Murphy v. Blair, 12 Ind. 184.

[b] Set-Off.—The rule applies only to those defenses which the defendant is required to make and hence is not applicable to set-off. Chicago D. & V. R. Co. v. Field, 86 Ill. 270.

[c] Where service is made on the wrong person, and such person makes no defense at law, but suffers judgment to go against him by default, and then, execution having issued, gives a forthcoming bond and appeals, upon which appeal the judgment is affirmed, he cannized in equity as a ground for assuming jurisdiction, equity will relieve him from the judgment and grant him an opportunity to take advantage of his defense.<sup>47</sup>

b. Defense of Illegality.<sup>48</sup>—Equity will not usually grant relief from a judgment on the sole ground that the claim represented by the judgment is illegal.<sup>49</sup>

Usury.—The fact that the claim upon which the judgment is based is tainted with usury, is not ordinarily a ground for equitable relief.<sup>50</sup>

[a] Character of Diligence Required.

"A court of equity cannot grant relief against a verdict obtained against a party by his own negligence, where his defense was not prevented by fraud or fault of the other party. It is not enough that the circumstances constitu-ting the obstacle, were beyond the con-trol of the party at the time; it must be shown that no reasonable degree of care and diligence could have pre-vented their occurrence. The party would not, therefore, be entitled to re-lief, unless he has used every reason-able effort to ascertain the nature and bearing of his defense before the trial, and has taken the proper steps to make his defense effectual at the time the case is tried. . . . The principle that runs through all the modern cases, and is now the settled doctrine of a court of equity is, that when a party is sued at law, he has notice of the plaintiff's purpose to obtain a judgment against him on the claim, or demand, the sub-ject of the litigation, and if he fails, have not intervened under such circumstances as to bar the right to relief.<sup>77</sup>

(II.) Where Defense Is Unavailable.—If the character of the defendant's defense is such that it could not have been set up at law, equity will set aside the judgment.<sup>78</sup> Thus where by the rules of law one cannot avail himself of a defense, relief from the judgment may be had in equity.<sup>79</sup> So also where a party has a defense which has oc-with the active diligence of a prudent man, thus notified of the purpose of his opponent, to take all the necessary steps demanded, to make good whatever defense he may have against such claim, he cannot ask the aid of another court to relieve him from the consequences of his neglect." Chester v. Apperson, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 639.

[b] "The circumstances which are relied upon to excuse the failure to defend at law, must have been such that no exercise of diligence on his part could have guarded against." The highest degree of diligence is exacted from the party and if it is not exhibited, the court will not intervene. Norman v. Burns, 67 Ala. 248.

[c] If after it has become apparent that a party must fail in his suit, he must avail himself of all means at his disposal to arrest the judgment and exhaust every legal remedy to vacate it after it is rendered, or he will be denied relief in equity. Dick v. Collins, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 12, 68 S. W. 1015.

[d] Not Negligent To Rely On Court's Announcements.—The oral announcement of the judge that the case would be dismissed may be relied upon by the attorney. He is not negligent in failing to see that the clerk enters the order directed, and if later a judgment is rendered against the client, he may have relief in equity. Henry v. Seager, 80 Ill. App. 172. See also Beveridge v. Hewitt, 8 Ill. App. 467.

[a] "There may be cases cognizable at law, and also in equity, and of which cognizance cannot be effectually taken at law; and therefore, equity does sometimes interfere, as in cases of complicated accounts, where the party has not made defense, because it was impossible for him to do it effectually at law." White v. Cahal, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 550, quoting Bateman v. Willoe, 1 Sch. & Lef. (Irish) 201, 205.

curred since the trial in the court at law, whereby it would be a virtual fraud on the party recovering at law to insist upon enforcing the judgment, equity will grant relief.<sup>80</sup>

Equitable Defense.—A defense may be unavailable at law because it is purely equitable in its nature, in which event relief from the judgment may be had in equity.<sup>81</sup> But in jurisdictions where statutes permit the interposition of equitable defenses in actions at law, it is sometimes held that a defendant cannot withhold defenses equitable in nature and afterwards obtain relief in equity,<sup>82</sup> though there are

have been so embarrassed or complicated that equity would take jurisdiction because of the embarrassment of the remedy at law, or the complication of the account required in making out the defense and the difficulty of presenting it before a jury, equity will grant relief. Huff v. Handy, 35 La. Ann. 816.

[b] Payment of the note since the rendition of judgment on it is a defense not cognizable at law, and equity will enjoin the judgment. Hawkins v. Harding, 37 Ill. App. 564, 576.

[c] But payments made after verdict and before judgment cannot be credited on a judgment by bill in equity, as they should have been credited before rendition of judgment. The party would no doubt have obtained relief by summary application to the court. The defense should have been set up in the original action. McGraw v. Pettibone, 10 Mich. 530.

[a] The accident must be that of the losing party.—Maddox v. Apperson, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 596.

[b] A defense is not to be deemed lost by accident or mistake if it was or ought to have been within the knowledge of the party when he was called upon for his defense in the action at law. Pickford v. Talbott, 225 U. S. 651, 32 Sup. Ct. 687, 56 L. ed. 1240.

[c] Where an executor mislaid and forgot the receipts for payments made by his testator on the notes in litigation, the unjust judgment was obtained by accident or mistake and equity will grant relief. Wilday v. McConnell, 63 Ill. 278.

[d] Refusal of Court to Entertain Plea.—In Humphreys v. Leggett, 9 How. (U. S.) 297, 311, 19 L. ed. 145, the court refused to entertain a plea of payment made pending suit because it considered it had no discretion to allow it, in view of a mandate from the supreme court to enter a certain judgment. The mandate was made without regard to the consequences that might flow from it. It was held that this was an accident which prevented the defendant from presenting his defense, and that he was entitled to relief in equity.

86. Engler v. Knoblough, 131 Mo. App. 481, 110 S. W. 16.

[a] Professor Pomeroy's definition of accident (1) is "an unforeseen and unexpected event, occurring external to the party affected by it, and of which his own agency is not the proximate cause, whereby, contrary to his own intention and wish, he loses some legal right, or becomes subjected to some legal liability, and another person acquires a corresponding legal right, which it would be a violation of good conscience for the latter person, under the circumstances, to retain." (Pom. Eq. Jur. §823). This has been (2) quoted with approval and followed in U. S.—L. Bucki & Son Lumber Co. v. Atlantic Lumber Co., 116 Fed. 1, 53 C. C. A. 513. Mo.—Jackson v. Chestnut, 151 Mo. App. 275, 131 S. W. 747. N. J.—Herbert v. Herbert, 49 N. J. Eq., 70, 81, 22 Atl. 789. N. Y.—Ludwig v. Walker, 59 Misc. 62, 111 N. Y. Supp. 1102.

[b] "By the term accident is included not merely inevitable casualty or the act of Providence, or what is technically called vis major or irresistible force, but such unforeseen events, misfortunes, losses, acts or omissions as are not the result of any negligence or misconduct in the party." Byrne v. Edmonds, 23 Gratt. (64 Va.) 200, quoting 1 Story's Eq. Jur. §78.

[c] Whether or not the accident must be unavoidable, it "must be of such a kind or nature as would have been prevented by the ordinary care and diligence of a prudent man in the conduct of ordinary business," Rogan v. Walker, 1 Wis. 631, 645.

[d] Mistake differs from accident in that it presupposes the action of the will, while in the latter case no such action is implied. Nye v. Sochor, 92 Wis. 40, 65 N. W. 854, 53 Am. St. Rep. 896. Mistake as ground for equitable relief, see infra, XV, E, 7.

ment.<sup>87</sup> But where it appears that the personal presence of the party is necessary to let in his defense,<sup>88</sup> a court of equity may grant relief on a showing that his absence was caused by sickness or other accident,<sup>89</sup> that he has been guilty of no laches,<sup>90</sup> and that had he been present, there would probably have been a different result more favorable to him.<sup>91</sup>

The exercise of the power of the court in refusing an application for continuance is discretionary with the court and is not even the subject of review on direct appeal, much less on application for relief in equity. Furthermore, courts of equity uniformly refuse to usurp appellate jurisdiction by granting new trials on grounds already considered and adjudged at law, however erroneous the action of the court may have been. [a] "What is meant by fraud, as a ground for enjoining and setting aside a judgment, is not mere falsity of claim or proof, but fraud outside of them, perpetrated by some artifice or contrivance of the party or person benefited, or by some collusion of both parties, whereby in the course of the trial, or in entering judgment, the injured party or the court has been imposed upon or betrayed into inattention and deceived." [a] The fraud must be an actual positive fraud, a meditated and intentional contrivance to keep the parties and the court in ignorance of the real facts of the case and obtaining that decree by that contrivance. Mere constructive fraud not originating in actual contrivance, but consisting of acts tending possibly to deceive or mislead, without any such intention or contrivance would not be sufficient, at least after a considerable delay. *Patch v. [a] Fraud as to Excess of Damages. The cases of relief in equity against judgments at law founded in fraud, are, when the fraud goes to the whole judgment, and not to the mere excess of damages in a cause properly sounding in damages. Smith v. Lowry, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 320. See Riddle v. Baker, 13 Cal. 295; Provins v. Lovi, 6 Okla. 94, 50 Pac. 81 (which was a proceeding by petition to vacate a judgment obtained by fraud, holding the correct rule to be: Where it is shown that an judgment, and must, of course, have been successful.<sup>36</sup> To be defrauded the party must have been ignorant of the fraud at the time it was practiced, for not knowing of the fraud, he is not chargeable with neglect or inattention.<sup>37</sup>

award of damages is grossly excessive, and that a new trial will probably relieve against such excess, and it is also shown that the excessive judgment was obtained by the fraud of the party procuring the same, then the courts should set aside the judgment so obtained; but unless these facts are clearly made to appear a new trial should be refused).

[a] Time Fraud Must Exist.—It matters not when the fraud in procuring an attorney's signature to a consent judgment was committed, if it caused the plaintiff's attorney to sign the judgment in ignorance of its existence. The fraud need not be repeated when the judgment was actually signed for it is to be taken as having continued from the date of its origin down to the time of the signing. Moody v. Wike (N. C.), 87 S. E. 350.

[b] Illustrations.—To come within the rule, the fraud must relate to the proceedings, such as falsifying the entries, improperly influencing the court, jury, witnesses, etc. It must be such misconduct as has some direct bearing on the rendition of the judgment. Hardeman v. Donaghey, 170 Ala. 362, 54 So. 172.

[c] Where the unsuccessful party has been prevented from exhibiting fully his case, by fraud or deception practiced on him by his opponent, as by keeping him away from court by a false promise of a compromise; or where the defendant never had knowledge of the suit, being kept in ignorance by the acts of the plaintiff; or where an attorney fraudulently connives at his defeat; or where the attorney regularly employed corruptly sells out his client's interest to the other side—these, and similar cases which show that there never has been a real contest in the trial or hearing of the case, are reasons for which a new suit may be sustained to set aside and annul the former judgment or decree, and open the case for a new and a fair hearing. U. [a] A party who obtains a judgment by changing and mutilating the evidence filed of record, thereby depriving his opponent of a part of his evidence, will not be allowed in equity to enjoy the fruits of his fraud. Cox v. Bank of Hartsville (Tenn.), 63 S. W. 237.

As to fraudulent alteration of judgments, see infra, XV, E, 6, b, (VI).

[b] A false statement as to the truth of the complaint, made out of court and not affecting the conduct of the case cannot be shown for the purpose of impeaching a judgment. Andes v. Millard, 70 Fed. 515.

[c] Though no representation be made to a defendant inducing him not to make his defense, yet if a plaintiff bring on his action without the knowledge of the defendant, and at a time when he knows the defendant has reason to expect the trial of it will not be had, equity will relieve against it. *Thomas v. raised in the original action.<sup>65</sup> If, however, the party was prevented by fraud or some adventitious circumstance from setting up the fraud, equity will grant relief;<sup>66</sup> but this is on the ground of fraud preventing the interposition of a defense, not on the ground of fraud in the cause of action.<sup>67</sup>

(V.) Fraud by Concealment.—A judgment will not usually be set aside in equity because of the suppression of facts by a party.<sup>68</sup> But if the suppression of facts is made under such circumstances that it amounts to a fraud upon the party, equity will grant relief against a judgment so obtained.<sup>69</sup> In an adversary proceeding where there is

[a] Fraud in an antecedent transaction not connected with a judgment is not sufficient as a basis for equitable relief; it must have intervened in the action or proceeding in which the judgment was obtained. Klabunde v. Byron Reed Co., 69 Neb. 120, 95 N. W. 4, 98 N. W. 182; Shufeldt v. Gandy, 34 Neb. 32, 51 N. W. 302.

[b] Fraud as an Equitable Defense. In Boyce's Exrs. v. Grundy, 3 Peters (U. S.) 210, 7 L. ed. 655, it was held proper to rescind a contract on the ground of fraud although a judgment had been obtained on the contract. Although the fraud might have been resorted to, it is not an adequate remedy because it is in the instant case only a partial remedy. The complainant would still have been left to renew the contest upon a series of suits. But see Peyton v. Rawlens, 4 Hayw. (Tenn.) 77, holding that as fraud is available at law, it must be interposed there and relief cannot afterwards be had in equity on the ground that the defendant has an equitable defense. To same effect, see Brown v. Wyncoop, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 230. As to relief where the defense not interposed is equitable, see supra, XV, E, 5, b, (II).

[a] The rule is that where a judgment has been procured by artifice or concealment on the part of the plaintiff, a court of equity will grant appropriate relief. Phillips v. Kuhn, 35 Neb. 187, 52 N. W. 881; Stilwell v. Carpenter, 2 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 238-264. Fraud in procuring judgment as ground of relief, see supra, XV, E, 6, b, (II).

[b] What Suppression Constitutes Fraud.—"Suppression of a fact material to be known, and which the party is under an obligation to communicate, constitutes fraud. The obligation to communicate may arise from the confidential relations of the parties, or from the particular circumstances of the case." Capital Bank v. Rutherford, 70 Ga. 57.

[c] Character of Facts Suppressed. Before equity will set aside a judgment on the ground of fraud by suppression of evidence, it must appear, especially after a lapse of a long period of time, that the evidence was material, and would unquestionably have changed the result. Where the evidence is in the possession of the adverse party, the facts withheld must be such, as under the circumstances of the case, that party was under a legal obligation to have revealed or furnished, or he must have used some artifice by which they were concealed from the other party and he thereby prevented from obtaining that which, without such artifice, he would have had, and thus have been able to have changed the result. The facts suppressed must be specifically stated in the bill, verified by affidavit. Maddox v. Apperson, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 596.

[d] Intentional Concealment.—Where fraudulent concealment of a fact is relied on for the purpose of impeaching and setting aside a judgment regularly obtained, it must be an intentional concealment of a material and controlling fact for the purpose of misleading and taking an undue advantage of the opposite party. Ward v. Southfield, 102 N. Y. 287, 6 N. E. 660.

[e] When a defense rests in the peculiar knowledge of the plaintiff and he conceals it from the defendant, fraud attaches to and vitiates the judgment, and it may be set aside in equity. Wonderly v. Lafayette Co., 150 Mo. 635, 650, 51 S. W. 745, 73 Am. St. Rep. 474, 45 L. R. A. 386.

[f] If one party who alone has knowledge of the fact conceals such fact from his adversary, by which means an unjust verdict is obtained, equity will grant relief. Reeves v. Hogan, Cooke (Tenn.) 172, 5 Am. Dec. 684.

[g] In Equity Suits.—It is not true of a complainant in equity that he must come prepared to sustain his bill and meet any defense that may be interposed. He may search the conscience of his adversary by requiring him to answer under oath, and if possessed of no other competent evidence or means of obtaining it he must accept or at least yield to the answer as true. In such a case, it is imperative upon the defendants to make a full disclosure and not, by concealing anything which good faith and common honesty required confession, to mislead the complainant into abandonment of his suit. A false answer under such circumstances is a positive and actual fraud justifying the annulment of the decree. The complainant having failed to reply and the case being submitted under a statute which made the answer conclusive proof, there was no conflict or weighing of testimony to bring the case within the rule that equity would not annul a decree founded on forged documents, perjured evidence or any matter actually presented and considered in the judgment assailed. Technically the answers were evidence at the hearing, but before the hearing they served the distinct purpose of denying the plaintiff information which they were bound to furnish which is an extrinsic and collateral fraud. Graver v. Faurot, 76 Fed. 257, 22 C. C. A. 156.

any revelation of his case to his adversary,<sup>70</sup> and therefore, the bare omission,<sup>71</sup> perversion,<sup>72</sup> or misrepresentation,<sup>73</sup> of facts in a pleading will not constitute fraud or subject the judgment to impeachment on that ground. But if a defendant, without fault or laches is ignorant of a material matter of defense which is known to the complainant and artfully concealed by him from the defendant when it is his moral duty to communicate it to him by reason of the confidential relationship between them, such concealment is a fraud upon the defendant which will be relieved in equity.<sup>74</sup> In an ex parte pro-

70. Ward v. Southfield, 102 N. Y. 287, 6 N. E. 660.

[a] "Where there is no relation of confidence between the plaintiff and the defendant the parties stand at arm's length. They come into court as adversaries, and neither party is bound to make any revelation of his case to the other. The plaintiff must be prepared to prove all the facts constituting his cause of action and to meet any defense which the defendant may interpose; and the defendant must be prepared to establish any defense which he may have. Neither party can mislead the other by any positive or actual fraud. Nor can he, for the purpose of perpetrating a fraud upon the other party, conceal such facts as good faith and common honesty require him to reveal." Ward v. Southfield, 102 N. Y. 287, 6 N. E. 660. This rule is not strictly true in equity. Graver v. Faurot, 76 Fed. 257, 22 C. C. A. 156, cited in preceding note.

[b] The presentation of a claim without disclosing a defense which exists to it is not ground for setting aside a judgment. Kretschmar v. Ruprecht, 230 Ill. 492, 82 N. E. 836; Evans v. International Trust Co. (Tenn.), 59 S. W. 373.

[c] If the means of a defense are only available in equity by bill of discovery or bill of relief and the party knows of the existence of those means before a trial at law and neglects to use them and goes to trial upon other proofs and other questions, equity will not grant him relief. Paterson v. Bangs, 9 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 627.

[a] Insisting upon rights which upon a due investigation thereof, might be found to be overstated or overestimated is not the kind of fraud authorizing a court to set aside a judgment or decree. Patch v. Ward, L. R. 3 Ch. App. (Eng.) 203. To same effect see III.—Kretschmar v. Ruprecht, 230 Ill. 492, 82 N. E. 836. Ia.—Hedrick v. Smith & Reed, 137 Iowa 625, 115 N. W. 226. N. Y.—Stilwell v. Carpenter, 59 N. [a] A false answer is a positive fraud justifying equitable relief against a decree thereon where the plaintiff in an equity suit, without knowledge as to certain facts, required an answer under oath, and finding himself without evidence to maintain his suit failed to reply. Graver v. Faurot, 76 Fed. 257, 22 C. C. A. 156.

[a] Collusion of Complainant and Defendant.—Where a plaintiff and a defendant sued in a representative capacity collude to suppress material evidence, equity will vacate the judgment at the instance of an injured complainant. First Baptist Church v. Syms, 52 N. J. Eq. 545, 31 Atl. 717. Enjoining judgments obtained by collusion see supra, XV, E, 1.

[b] Where Defendant Is Widow of Cotenant.—In an action for partition against the widow and heirs of his deceased cotenant, the suppression by the plaintiff of the fact, unknown to the defendants, that he had procured from such cotenant a conveyance of a part of the common property under an agree-ceeding, too, a concealment of facts tending to show the invalidity of the claim will sometimes afford ground for equitable relief to the absent party.<sup>75</sup> Of course, if a party fraudulently keeps his adversary in ignorance of the action, equity will not permit him to take advantage of his own wrong.<sup>76</sup>

c. By Whom and on Whom Practiced.—The fraud must have been practiced upon the unsuccessful party,<sup>79</sup> by the prevailing party,<sup>80</sup>

ment to convey to him other parts of equal value, is a fraud which will avoid the judgment. Tucker v. Whittlesey, 74 Wis. 74, 41 N. W. 535, 42 N. W. 101.

75. Curtis v. Schell, 129 Cal. 208, 61 Pac. 951, 79 Am. St. Rep. 107.

[a] Where on ex parte motion for judgment against the sheriff for the amount due on execution because of his failure to make return of the execution, the plaintiff conceals the fact of payment and takes a judgment for more than is due, it is a fraud in the plaintiff against which equity will relieve. Smith v. Van Bolder, 1 Swan (Tenn.) 110. See also McTeer v. Briscoe (Tenn.), 61 S. W. 561; Kinzer v. Helm, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 672.

[b] In case of foreign attachments auditors are appointed before whom the claims are proved and from whose decision there is no appeal. If a plaintiff imposes a fictitious claim upon the auditors or a claim which has been satisfied and for which the defendant has a receipt, the proceeding being ex parte—in fine, if he conceals from the auditors any fact which tends to show that his claim is not a valid one, he commits a fraud upon the absent party, from the consequences of which equity will grant relief. Tomkins v. Tomkins, 11 N. J. Eq. 512.

8. Prejudice of Community.—Equity will not grant a new trial because of prejudice in the community, as this must be availed of by application for change of venue.<sup>2</sup>

9. Act of Counsel.<sup>3</sup>—Where an attorney fraudulently pretends to help a party and connives at his defeat,<sup>4</sup> or, being regularly employed, corruptly sells out his client's interest,<sup>5</sup> equity will relieve

[a] "The remedy by set-off, as enforced in equity, is undoubtedly somewhat broader and more liberal than that given by statute, but it has limits. The mere existence of a cross-demand is not enough to establish a right to it, nor will the existence of an unsettled account, out of which a cross-demand may arise, be sufficient. Hewett v. Kuhl, 10 C. E. Gr. 24; Whyte v. O'Brien, 1 Sim. and Stu. 551; Dodd v. Lydall, 1 Hare 337; Gordon v. Pym, 3 Hare 223; 2 Story's Eq. Jur. §1436. Nor will a suitor who has recovered damages at law for a breach of contract, be restrained in their collection, though he be a non-resident and insolvent, merely because he may hereafter be found to be indebted to the defendant on the adjustment of an unsettled account. Rawson v. Samuel, ubi supra (1 Cr. Ph. 161). And even where the cross-demands are debts of fixed and certain amount, but had their origin in distinct and independent transactions, equity will not set-off one against the other unless such course is made necessary by some peculiar, equitable consideration, as, for example, where there has been a mutual credit given by each upon the footing of the debt of the other, so that a just presumption arises that the one is understood by the parties to go in liquidation or set-off of the other. Dade v. Irwin, 2 How. 389. The ground upon which the remedy is claimed here is, it will be ob-of a demand in favor of a judgment debtor against his judgment creditor, not connected with the subject-matter represented by the judgment, is not sufficient cause for equitable relief by way of set-off.<sup>31</sup> For as a general rule, equity will not act upon the subject of set-off in respect to distinct and unconnected debts, unless some peculiar equity calling for relief intervenes.<sup>32</sup> This jurisdiction is inherent in equity and exists independently of statute;<sup>33</sup> and the fact that jurisserved, the mere assertion of a right to damages. Not only is the amount unliquidated, but the right itself is unestablished, and, therefore, uncertain. The demand is a matter belonging exclusively to the common law courts; until established there by a judgment, this court can exercise no control over it. Where both demands have been established by the judgment of a competent court, so that the sums recoverable are fixed and certain, it is common practice for the common law courts to set-off one against the other. Brown ads. Hendrickson, 10 Vr. 239. And the same practice prevails in equity, regardless of the nature of the demand upon which the judgment is founded, whether it be a debt or a tort. Williams v. Davies, 2 Sim. 461; Simson v. Hart, 14 Johns. 62. But courts of equity will never set-off a claim for unliquidated damages against an ascertained sum established by a judgment; nor will they, as a general rule, stay the enforcement of a judgment in order that the defendant may have an opportunity to recover a counter-judgment. Murray v. Tolland, 3 Johns. Ch. 569; Winchester v. Hachley, 2 Cranch 342; Rawson v. Samuel, ubi supra; Waterman on Set-Off, §423; Kerr on Inj. 67. The departures from this rule have been very rare indeed, and have occurred only in cases where the counter-claims have had a common origin and were so inseparably connected that one appeared to be the natural product or outgrowth of the other, and where it was manifest that, if one was permitted to be enforced without allowing the other, the party having the benefit of the enforcement, would derive a profit or advantage from his own wrong. That was the case in Beasley v. Darcy, 2 Sch. & Lef. [Irish] 403. There a tenant owed his landlord rent, and the landlord had committed a trespass on the land which rendered it of less value, and prevented the tenant, to a certain extent, from getting his rent out of it. The landlord brought ejectment against the tenant, claiming a forfeiture of his term in consequence of the non-payment of the rent, and had a recovery. The tenant then sought relief in equity and obtained an injunction restraining the landlord from ejecting him; he also obtained an order directing an issue to be tried at law to ascertain what damages he had suffered by the landlord's trespass, and had a recovery for a sum nearly equal to the rent in arrear. He was subsequently permitted to redeem his term by recouping his damages against the rent. O'Connor v. Spaight, 1 Sch. & Lef. 305; Piggott v. Williams, 6 Madd. 95, and Lord Caswdor v. Lewis, 1 Y. & C. 427, are cases of the same class. . . . But where the claims originate in separate transactions, or have perfectly independent sources . . . equity will neither afford a remedy by set-off, nor stay the collection of a judgment founded on one until a counter-judgment has been recovered on the other." *Jackson v. b. Character of Judgments To Be Set-off.—Although as a general rule, the judgments to be set off against each other should be mutual,<sup>40</sup> equity will allow the set-off of judgments as between the real parties in interest, regardless of the nominal parties.<sup>41</sup> The assignee of a judgment, like the assignee of other choses in action, takes it subject to all equities existing between the debtor and creditor, and therefore takes the judgment subject to set-offs existing against the assignor at the time of the assignment.<sup>42</sup> While, as a general rule, cross-demands cannot be set off where they exist in different rights,<sup>43</sup> judgments to be set off against each other need not be in the same right.<sup>44</sup> It has been held that where the judgments are recovered in different courts, there is no remedy except in equity and a set-off will be decreed.<sup>45</sup> It is immaterial what is the nature of the demands upon which the judgments are founded, whether debt or tort.<sup>46</sup>

c. Effect of Remedy at Law.<sup>47</sup> — Where a party has an adequate remedy at law to set off judgments, relief in equity may be denied.<sup>48</sup> The general rule denying equitable relief to a party who has a defense at law which he failed to plead does not preclude relief where the defense is a judgment which a party seeks to set off against the judgment at law.<sup>49</sup> If the judgment was pleaded as a set-off at law and relief was there denied, equity will not grant relief.<sup>50</sup>

[a] The objection that the judgments are not in the same right is untenable for it is well settled that although the demands, as being joint and several, are not, strictly speaking, due in the same right, yet if the legal or equitable liabilities or claims may become vested in or urged against one, they may be set off against separate demands, and vice versa. Russell v. Conway, 11 Cal. 93.

[b] It is not necessary that judgments to be set off against each other be in the same right; it is sufficient if the judgment prayed to be set off may be enforced at law against the party recovering the judgment to be diminished or satisfied by the set-off; as where a judgment in trespass recovered by A against B and C is to be set off against a judgment recovered by B against A, for the whole amount of the judgment may be collected from B who can have no contribution from C. *Simson v. [a] The underlying principle upon which this doctrine is founded is that when there is a cross-demand, the debtor-creditor has only a claim for any balance remaining after crediting the one with the other as the debt due him. If there is no remaining balance due by the complainant to the judgment creditor, but his claim exceeds the amount of the judgment and the judgment creditor is insolvent, it would be opposed to natural equity to require him to pay the judgment and remand complainant to a court of law for the enforcement of this demand which would inevitably result in his getting nothing upon his judgment, should he recover one. Dunham Lumber Co. v. Holt, 124 Ala. 181, 27 So. 556.

[c] As To Set-Offs Acquired After Suit Brought.—Insolvency may be an important factor in supporting an appeal to chancery to make available a set off under certain circumstances, but

If the cross-demand cannot be availed of at law, it may be established as such in equity upon allegation and proof of the insolvency of the judgment creditor.<sup>54</sup>

Nonresidence. — The nonresidence of a judgment creditor is recognized as a ground of equitable interposition in some jurisdictions,<sup>55</sup> but not in others.<sup>56</sup>

b. Nature of Offset. — Generally the set-off must be liquidated and certain as to amount.<sup>57</sup> A right accruing subsequent to the judgment cannot, it has been held, be set off against the judgment.<sup>58</sup> There must be mutuality in the demands to be set-off.<sup>59</sup> But it is not necessary that the judgment run to the person against whom the set-off is asked;<sup>60</sup> a court of equity will look beyond the nominal parties to the real parties in interest and adjudicate the rights of the parties accordingly.<sup>61</sup> An assignee of a judgment creditor stands in no better position than his assignor.<sup>62</sup> The general rule in regard to set-offs that debts to be set off against each other must accrue in the same right,<sup>63</sup> prohibits setting off an individual indebtedness of the judgment plaintiff, against a judgment for him in a representative capacity.<sup>64</sup>

[a] Debt to Principal Set-Off Against Judgment Against Principal and Surety.—Where the plaintiff in a judgment against two defendants, one as principal, the other as surety, is a

c. Effect of Remedy at Law.<sup>65</sup>—Equity will not set off a claim against the judgment where the party has an adequate remedy at law,<sup>66</sup> as by an action at law.<sup>67</sup> If, however, there exists some cir-

[a] But see Chicago, D. & V. R. Co. v. Field, 86 Ill. 270, holding that the rule that equity will not enjoin a judgment when the defense might have been pleaded in the action at law does not apply to the defense of set-off, and this is a defense which a defendant may waive and then later enforce by action. Compare, Winchester v. Grosvenor, 48 Ill. 517, holding with the general rule stated in the text.

[b] Where Defendant Is Insolvent. If the matter of set-off is available in the suit at law and also in equity because of the insolvency of him against whom the demand exists, the party cannot withhold his set-off at law because available in chancery, and when the judgment is rendered, and then set it up in equity against the judgment. Middleton v. Foshee (Ala.), 68 So. 890; Pearce v. Winter Iron Wks., 32 Ala. 68. But see Chicago, D. & V. R. Co. v. Field, 86 Ill. 270; Wright v. Salisbury, 46 Mo. 26.

Matters presented must not have been considered by law court, see supra, XV, E, 2.

[a] When a defendant is prevented by accident, surprise or other cause from proving his set off, the practice is to withdraw it in order that the judgment may not be a bar to an action for the amount. A defendant under such circumstances who should suffer a judgment to be obtained against him without withdrawing his set-off, would no more be entitled to relief in equity against the judgment on the ground of accident or surprise, than a plaintiff would be entitled to like relief on a like ground who failed to suffer a nonsuit. Hudson v. Kline, 9 Gratt. (50 Va.) 379.

[a] Where it is claimed that the offsets were not pleaded because of sickness of the petitioner's family, an injunction will be denied where it appears the offsets were neither pleaded nor filed, and that counsel of the petitioner was present at the trial and no continuance was asked. Griffith v. Thompson, 4 Gratt. (45 Va.) 147.

[b] Reliance upon erroneous advice of counsel is not sufficient excuse for failure to interpose set-offs. Duckworth v. Duckworth's Admr., 35 Ala. 70.

Party must not have been at fault, see supra, XV, C, 3.

posing his set-off in the action at law, by reason of fraud,<sup>73</sup> accident,<sup>74</sup> mistake,<sup>75</sup> surprise,<sup>76</sup> his ignorance of the set-off,<sup>77</sup> or some unavoidable occurrence,<sup>78</sup> equity will set off the amount of the claim against the judgment. If there exists some well defined equitable ground such as insolvency, which makes the remedy at law inadequate,<sup>79</sup> So if the offset could not have been interposed in the law suit,<sup>80</sup> as where the offset is cognizable only in equity,<sup>81</sup> equity will compel the offset.

4. Proceedings To Obtain Set-off.—A suit to set off a judgment of one court against the judgment of another is equitable in nature,<sup>82</sup> and usually brought in a court of chancery.<sup>83</sup>

Pleadings.—A set-off against a judgment may be had in equity either by motion or by bill.<sup>84</sup> If the proceeding is by motion the right to set off does not exist unless both demands have been reduced to judgment.<sup>85</sup> But it is otherwise where the proceeding is by original

Character of judgments to be set off, see supra, XV, F, 2, b.

[a] Where Debt Is Assigned Pending Litigation.—The right to set off one judgment or decree against another by motion in equity exists only in those cases where the debts on both sides have been liquidated by judgment or decree before the assignment of either bill. In such a case a mere indebtedness may be set off against a judgment.<sup>86</sup>

The plaintiff must in his bill allege facts sufficient to entitle him to the relief sought.<sup>87</sup> The general rules as to certainty in pleading must be observed.<sup>88</sup> The reasons why the complainant may not proceed at law to recover the claim he seeks to offset against the judgment must be alleged.<sup>89</sup> The plaintiff must show that he has a definite credit.<sup>90</sup>

to a third party. A debt having no connection with another which is assigned to a stranger pending litigation, and before it is liquidated by a final judgment or decree, cannot be set off against the other on motion in equity. Gay v. Gay, 10 Paige Ch. (N. Y.) 369.

[a] Showing as to Claim.—The party should at least disclose as much, or as strong a claim to be paid the debt sought to be offset, as if he was suing originally on such debt, to say nothing of other matters and equities it may be necessary to show. Walker v. Ayres, 1 Iowa 449.

[b] That the judgment to be offset remains unsatisfied and in full force must be shown. Walker v. Ayres, 1 Iowa 449.

[c] Where a party subsequent to the rendition of a judgment against him purchases a judgment against the other party, equity will not set off the judgments against each other in the absence of an affirmative showing that there is no other judgment liens which can claim priority, for otherwise, a junior judgment might be purchased and satisfaction had thereof out of the defendant's property to the exclusion of judgment creditors having prior liens. Wellborn v. Bonner, 9 Ga. 82.

[d] Showing as to Purchase of Claims.—An averment that plaintiff had "acquired" the claims he seeks to offset, is not sufficient. He must aver and prove that he had not merely acquired, but that he had bought and paid for the claims, precisely when he purchased the claims, and that he purchased them without notice of an assignment of the judgment. Townsend v. Quinan, 36 Tex. 548.

[e] Absolute insolvency of the judgment creditor must be shown. An averment that the judgment creditor is in "failing circumstances" is insufficient. Townsend v. Quinan, 36 Tex. 548.

[f] Where the insolvency of the assignor of a claim reduced to judgment by the assignee is the ground for set-off in equity, it must be shown that the assignor was insolvent at the time he assigned the claim, and therefore that, at that time, the plaintiff had a right to an equitable set-off against him. Markham v. Todd, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 364.

88. Brown v. Pegram, 149 Fed. 515; Duckworth v. Duckworth's Admr., 35 Ala. 70.

[a] An averment that judgment has been recovered against H. and B. and the plaintiff as surety of H., "which said sum of money said B. and W. have been compelled to pay," is not a distinct allegation that plaintiff paid any money for H. entitling him to an equitable set-off. There is no averment that the plaintiff has actually paid out of his own money or property any part of said sum, or any statement of the amount justly due him which he claims to have set off. Wolcott v. Jones, 4 Allen (Mass.) 367.

cedure apply to the hearing and determination of a suit to compel a set-off.<sup>91</sup>

A temporary injunction will be granted in a proper case.<sup>92</sup>

Where a portion of the judgment will remain due after offsetting the demand, equity will enjoin the judgment only to the sum covered by the off-set, and the judgment creditor will be allowed to enforce his judgment for the remainder.<sup>93</sup> Where the off-set exceeds the judgment, a decree ordering payment of the excess is erroneous.<sup>94</sup>

In granting relief where the claim has not been reduced to judgment, the court frequently enjoins the collection of the judgment until the set-off is liquidated in an action at law, and then makes the injunction perpetual in whole or part or dissolves it as the determination at law may require.<sup>95</sup> On dissolution of an injunction on motion, the

[a] A party applying to equity to set off judgments is entitled to relief as a matter of right. Holles v. Duff, 20 Cal. 596, 629; Simsen v. Hart, 14 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 63. Compare, Love's Adm. v. Pizer, Wright (Ohio) 412, denying relief where the plaintiff refused offers of the relief now asked for.

[b] Undertaking.—If the bill states a precise sum as a set-off, it is proper for the judge to require an undertaking in that amount and permit the creditor to proceed with his execution for the residue. Faison v. Mellwaine, 72 N. C. 312.

92. Davidson v. Alfaro, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 353; Nicoll v. Nicoll, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 446.

[a] An undertaking for less than the amount of the judgment does not authorize an injunction restraining the entire judgment. Faison v. Mellwaine, 72 N. C. 312.

[b] Affidavit.—But the court cannot properly grant a temporary injunction restraining a judgment because of the existence of offsets, in the absence of an affidavit to a definite sum by way of set-off. Faison v. Mellwaine, 72 N. C. 312.

93. Ala.—French v. Garner, 7 Port. 519. Ky.—Markham v. Todd, 2 J. J. Marsh. 364; Terrill's Adm. v. Southall, 3 Bibb 458. La.—Palfrey v. Shuff, 2 Mart. (N. S.) 51. Md.—Hodges v. Planters Bank, 7 Gill & J. 306. Mo. Sumner v. Whitley, 1 Mo. 708. N. C. Kerr v. Coates, 17 N. C. 378.

[a] The injunction should be granted with a proviso, that the plaintiff at law may proceed by execution to collect the undisputed balance of the judgment, where the credit is less than the judgment. Hodges v. Planters' Bank, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 306.

[b] Form of Decree.—In Sumner v. Whitley, 1 Mo. 708, it was held the proper decree should be that "S. pay to W. the difference between his judgment and W's., with six per cent interest, unless such difference has already been paid; that the balance of such judgment stand perpetually enjoined, except the costs, and that, as to the costs respectively, each have his execution, and that S. recover his costs in this court, and that S. pay the costs accrued in this chancery proceeding in the court below."

[c] In Whitehead v. Jessup, 7 Colo. App. 460, 43 Pac. 1042, the judgment was reversed with instructions to decree the set-off so as to cancel J's. judgment, and apply its amount as a credit on the judgment of W., leaving the unpaid balance of the latter judgment to be collected by the ordinary legal methods.

94. The court should not take cognizance of the demands farther than is necessary to meet the judgment. Hughes v. M'Coun's Admr., 3 Bibb (Ky.) 254.

95. If an executor sued for his testator's debt is prevented from proving a set-off by unconscionable conduct of an insolvent plaintiff and by his own mistake, equity may, in its discretion, enjoin the collection of the judgment until the set-off is liquidated in an action at law. Wells v. Cochran, 88 Neb. 367, 129 N. W. 533.

[a] But compare, Markham v. Todd, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 364, holding that where the matter of set-off consists of an account, the amount of the set-off court should merely dissolve the injunction and award statutory damages, if any. A decree of payment of the judgment at law is unauthorized.<sup>96</sup>

G. PROCEEDINGS TO OBTAIN RELIEF.—Ordinarily equitable relief against a judgment is had by bill to impeach the judgment.<sup>97</sup> Relief may also be had by a proceeding to compel a set-off of one judgment or demand against another judgment.<sup>98</sup>

Who Entitled to Relief.—This relief is available to plaintiffs to the original action at law as well as to defendants, although it is most frequently granted to the latter.<sup>99</sup> Such relief is not confined, however, to the parties to the original action; strangers to the action may apply for equitable relief from a judgment in a proper case.<sup>1</sup>

H. EFFECT OF INJUNCTION ON JUDGMENT.—An injunction against enforcing a judgment suspends the execution of the judgment,<sup>2</sup> and, by consequence, the enforcement of lien;<sup>3</sup> but it does not destroy either. The execution is merely restrained, but the force and effect of the judgment is not at all impaired. As soon as this restraint is removed by a dissolution of the injunction, it is again restored to all its legal incidents.<sup>4</sup> Where an injunction bond<sup>5</sup> providing for the should be ascertained by a commissioner or jury. If the party waive certain matters in the case, then the trial court shall ascertain the amount of the set-off in this manner and perpetuate the injunction pro tanto.

[b] If insolvency or some other equity exists, equity will restrain the enforcement of the demand against which the set-off is to be applied until the cross-demand can be liquidated. Central Appalachian Co. v. Buchanan, 90 Fed. 454, 33 C. C. A. 598; Davidson v. Alfaro, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 353.

[c] Where a plaintiff brings an action in assumpsit to recover certain commissions and later a suit in equity to enjoin a judgment against him and enforce a set-off against it of the claim pending in the law suit, all the relief which the plaintiff needs and is entitled to, is a stay of the collection of the judgment until the time of the determination of his demand in the law suit, and then to have the injunction made perpetual in whole or part, or dissolved, according as such determination might be. *Chicago, D. & V. satisfaction of the judgment lien is given the lien has been held to be destroyed. An injunction against enforcing a judgment does not have the effect of prolonging the lien beyond the statutory period as against purchasers from the judgment debtor,<sup>6</sup> in the absence of statutes providing otherwise.<sup>7</sup> But the person who causes an injunction to issue may be estopped from asserting that the lien is barred by the statute of limitations.<sup>8</sup>

XVI. REVIEW.<sup>9</sup>—A. GENERAL STATEMENT.—There are several methods by which a judgment may be reviewed both by the court rendering the same or one of similar jurisdiction, or by an appellate court.<sup>10</sup> Thus, a judgment may be reviewed by the court in which it was rendered for the purpose of making some amendment thereto,<sup>11</sup> or opening, vacating and setting it aside.<sup>12</sup> It may also be reviewed in an equitable action to obtain relief therefrom,<sup>13</sup> or by the remedy of audita querela.<sup>14</sup> An action to review a judgment is provided for in some jurisdictions.<sup>15</sup> An appeal,<sup>16</sup> a writ of error,<sup>17</sup> writ of error coram nobis,<sup>18</sup> writ of certiorari,<sup>19</sup> are also proper methods for reviewing the judgment.

Perkins, Mart. & Yerg. (Tenn.) 367, distinguished in Miller v. Estill, 8 Yerg. (Tenn.) 542.

[a] The principle on which the injunction is held to discharge the lien of the judgment or execution is that the bond furnishes the plaintiff with another security for his debt upon which he may have an execution after the injunction is dissolved. Bartlett & Waring v. Doe ex dem. Gayle & Phillips, 6 Ala. 305, 41 Am. Dec. 52; Mansony v. United States Bank, 4 Ala. 735.

[b] Where the condition of the bond is merely to pay all damages sustained by the wrongful suing out of the injunction and not to pay and satisfy the judgment, the lien of the judgment is not discharged. Bartlett & Waring v. Doe ex dem. Gayle & Phillips, 6 Ala. 305, 41 Am. Dec. 52.

6. Work v. Harper, 31 Miss. 107, 66 Am. Dec. 549; Tucker v. Shade, 25 Ohio St. 355.

[a] If, because of an injunction, no levy or sale is made within twelve months, a purchaser from the debtor takes title superior to the lien regardless of the condition of the creditor personally. Miller v. Estill, 8 Yerg. (Tenn.) 452.

7. Apelgate v. Edwards, 45 Ind. 329.

8. A mortgagee of property conveyed by the judgment debtor will not be entitled to hold it discharged of the lien of the judgment which was prior and superior to the lien of the mortgage, when the lien of the judgment has become barred by the statute of limitations, in a case where the judgment creditor has been restrained at the instance of the mortgagee from enforcing his judgment within the period prescribed by the statute. *Work v. provide for an action to review a judgment.<sup>20</sup> Such an action is an outgrowth of the old chancery bill of review,<sup>21</sup> and is of an equitable, rather than a legal, nature.<sup>22</sup> It is not, generally speaking, an independent proceeding;<sup>23</sup> but it is incident to the original action.<sup>24</sup> In the sense that in the proceeding for review no new steps may be taken in the original action, such proceeding is an independent one, however.<sup>25</sup> It is a direct, rather than a collateral attack upon the judgment.<sup>26</sup> When based upon some error of law, it partakes of the nature of an appeal,<sup>27</sup> or a writ of error.<sup>28</sup>

The purpose of the action to review, broadly stated, is to afford the trial court an opportunity to review its judgment and proceedings leading thereto, and to correct its own errors.<sup>29</sup> From the litigant's

[a] "Bills of review are so far in the nature of petitions for a rehearing, that they cannot be independent of the original action in the sense of giving new character to the subject-matter in litigation, and of invoking a jurisdiction forbidden to the original action. If the independence of the bill . . . could be maintained, we would have the anomalous practice of permitting the shifting of jurisdiction by seeking a revision of the judgment, and in permitting an appeal to one court for the review of errors, which otherwise would be the subject of review in another court of appeals, or would not be the subject of appeal at all." Ex parte John Kiley, 135 Ind. 225, 34 N. E. 989.

[a] Where the ground set forth in the complaint can only be shown by matter dehors the record, the proceeding resolves itself into a collateral attack which cannot proceed as an action to review. Harman v. Moore, 112 Ind. 221, 13 N. E. 718.

[a] As a proceeding to review a judgment has for its object the correction of some error upon the face of the proceedings, by invoking the action of the court committing the error, it is a substitute for the remedy by appeal, and is of the same nature. State v. King, 30 Ind. App. 389, 66 N. E. 85.

[b] "Each is a proceeding to review a judgment, and any question that arises upon an appeal may be reached by a bill to review, and any question that does not arise upon an appeal cannot be reached by proceedings to review. In this respect they are precisely alike." Searle v. Whipperman, 79 Ind. 424.

point of view, its object is to set aside the original judgment and procure a new trial.<sup>32</sup> An action to review a judgment will not have the effect of staying execution thereon unless a bond is filed as required by statute.<sup>31</sup>

2. Concurrent Remedies.—A party may not prosecute both an appeal and an action to review based upon the same judgment, but must elect as to which remedy he will adopt;<sup>32</sup> the pursuit of one operates as a waiver of the other,<sup>33</sup> except where the appeal was for error of law and a subsequent complaint to review is predicated on new matter.<sup>34</sup> Occasion may arise where an injunction would afford the desired relief,<sup>35</sup> but in jurisdictions where the action to review is available, extending as it does to judgments at law as well as decrees in equity,<sup>36</sup> the latter remedy is generally considered exclusive.<sup>37</sup> But a party is not bound to resort to the remedy afforded by a legal action to review a judgment where this remedy is not as practicable and efficient to the ends of justice and its prompt administration both in respect to the ultimate relief and the mode of obtaining it, as the equitable remedy by injunction.<sup>38</sup>

3. Judgments Which May Be Reviewed.<sup>39</sup>—Under the common law, where the jurisdictions of law and equity courts are separate, bills of review were maintainable only for relief against decrees in equity.<sup>40</sup> The action to review, however, is generally extended so as to afford relief from judgments at law as well as decrees in equity,<sup>41</sup> with the limitation that the judgment attacked be in a civil and not a criminal case.<sup>42</sup> Decrees of divorce are not reviewable by action, however, by express provision of statute in some states.<sup>43</sup> Nor are judgments in matters growing out of the settlement of decedents' estates,<sup>44</sup> or judgments obtained in ex parte proceedings,<sup>45</sup> or entered by agreement,<sup>46</sup> or orders which are only interlocutory,<sup>47</sup> reviewable by action. Default judgments are reviewable by action or not depending upon the ground presented therefor.<sup>48</sup>

4. When Maintainable.<sup>49</sup> — *a. b. Errors of Law Apparent. — (I.) In General. — Any error of law appearing in the proceedings and judgment is ground for action to review the same.<sup>54</sup> The error must appear on the face of the record,<sup>55</sup> and must be one which might have been urged on an appeal from the essential features was that the remedy should be applied in the same court which committed the error. In no instance has one court employed the remedy to review the action of a court of an entirely different character, and possessing jurisdiction of an essentially different type."

judgment which it is sought to have reviewed.<sup>56</sup> An error which would, on such an appeal, be regarded as having been waived, will be viewed in a like manner on proceedings to review.<sup>57</sup> Only errors committed prior to, and in connection with the judgment, are grounds for review.<sup>58</sup> A mere error in the form of the judgment is not ground for an action to review the same, where the complaint in the original action states facts entitling the plaintiff to some relief.<sup>59</sup>

(II.) Default Judgments. — Judgments by default can be reviewed where the court which rendered the judgment has no jurisdiction of the subject-matter,<sup>60</sup> or when the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.<sup>61</sup> An error in rendering a judgment by default prematurely will also sustain an action for review,<sup>62</sup> as will an error in rendering judgment by default on an instrument calling for usurious interest.<sup>63</sup> But where all the proceedings prior to a judgment by default are regular, and the complaint states facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action as against a demurrer, it is not reviewable by action.<sup>64</sup> Nor are errors in the form of the judgment,<sup>65</sup> or insufficiency of the title of the cause contained in the complaint in the original action,<sup>66</sup> grounds for an action to review a default judgment.

[a] If there were anything irregular as to the issuing of the execution, or in the levy thereunder, was void or avoidable, such matters are not cause for, and cannot be considered in, an action to review the judgment. The court may review any of its proceedings that enter into, or are connected with, and form part of, the judgment rendered by it, but not the acts of an officer, after judgment, in trying to enforce the collection of the same. *Ferguson v. (III.) Necessity for Exception or Objection, Motion for New Trial, etc. Where no objection is made or exception reserved to rulings made during the progress of a trial, or on the motion for a new trial, an action to review the judgment cannot be maintained upon the ground that there was error in such rulings,<sup>67</sup> unless the errors objected to are of a character which are never waived.<sup>68</sup> And before errors can be assigned in a complaint to review a judgment, a motion for a new trial must have been made and denied.<sup>69</sup> In the case of a default judgment, a motion to correct or set aside the default must first have been made,<sup>70</sup> unless the ground for review be that the complaint in the original cause does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.<sup>71</sup>

A party is required to file a motion for a new trial, before he can present a question on appeal to the supreme court, and the same rule applies in like manner before error can be assigned in a complaint to review a judgment. [a] As where an attorney innocently advises his client as to a matter in which he was, at that time adversely interested, which fact was not discovered until after judgment, this is new dition of the judgment complained of,<sup>74</sup> and which could not, with reasonable diligence, have been discovered,<sup>75</sup> or called to the attention of the court at an earlier date,<sup>75</sup> is a ground for review, provided it be such matter as would entitle the party to a different judgment.<sup>76</sup>

New matter as a ground for the action to review a judgment is different from and should not be confused with newly discovered evidence, which is not a ground for such an action, but only for a new trial.<sup>77</sup> Nor does the term "new matter" include new matter of law, such as a curative statute.<sup>78</sup>

d. Fraud.—Fraud in obtaining a judgment is not a ground for an action to review.<sup>79</sup> But fraud which goes to make up the original cause of action or defense may, under some circumstances, be available on such a proceeding as new matter.<sup>80</sup>

[a] In Jones v. City of Tipton, 142 Ind. 643, 42 N. E. 221, it is said, "It is very clear that new matter, discovered since the rendition of the first judgment, in order to entitle the losing party to a review of that judgment, must be such matter, as, if alleged in the original pleadings, and supported by the evidence, would have entitled such party to a different judgment."

Newly discovered evidence as ground for new trial, see generally the title "New Trial."

78. Worley v. Town of Ellettsville, 60 Ind. 7, wherein the court said: "We are of opinion, that the 'new matter' contemplated by . . . the code of procedure, . . ., means new matter of fact material to the case in which the judgment sought to be reviewed was rendered, and which existed before the judgment was rendered, and does not include new matter of law subsequently enacted."

As ground for equitable relief, see supra, XV, E, 6, b, (II).

80. Ferguson v. Hull, 136 Ind. 339, 344, 36 N. E. 254.

[a] "It is said, in the syllabus to one case, that a judgment may be reviewed on the ground that it was obtained by fraud, but the case does not so decide, and clearly such is not the law. The new matter contemplated by the statute must mean some fact or facts going to make up the original cause of action or defense, and not some act of fraud by which the judgment was obtained. If the fraud goes to constitute the cause of action, it is a fact that may amount to new matter within the statute. But where the fraud is in obtaining the judgment, while it may be ground for setting it aside, it is not ground for review." Works Prac. and Pl., §1049, quoted with approval in Ferguson v. Hull, 136 Ind. 339, 344, 36 N. E. 254.

As to new matter as a ground for this action, see supra, XVI, B, 4, c.

6. Parties.<sup>83</sup> — The right to review a judgment by action is generally limited to a party to the judgment affected,<sup>84</sup> and the heirs,<sup>85</sup> devisees,<sup>86</sup> or personal representatives of a deceased party,<sup>87</sup> or a person in privity with such party.<sup>88</sup> One not a party to a judgment and not claiming as heir, devisee, or personal representative of a deceased party, or otherwise in privity with a party to the judgment, cannot maintain an action to review it.<sup>89</sup> All the parties to the original suit, who are adversely interested, are necessary parties to an action to review.<sup>90</sup>

[a] "It is not only proper, but imperative," that the action to review be brought in the court in which the original judgment was obtained. Jones v. Ahrens, 116 Ind. 490, 19 N. E. 334.

[b] The institution of proceedings looking toward an appeal will not divest the trial court of jurisdiction of such an action. If the appeal may be said to have been "perfected," however, jurisdiction is lost to the trial court to entertain a subsequent action to review. State v. Kolsem, 130 Ind. 434, 29 N. E. 595. [a] Under a statute providing that "any person who is a party to any judgment, etc.," may file a complaint for a review, an accommodation guarantor or indorser of a note is entitled to review a judgment against him without reviewing the judgment against the makers, where after the judgment against him the makers defeated the claim against them in the same action, on the ground of failure of consideration. Michener v. Springfield Engine & Thresher Co., 142 Ind. 130, 40 N. E. 679, affirming 23 Ind. App. 130, 55 N. E. 32.

[a] In Sloan v. Whiteman, 6 Ind. 434, it was held that, as a general rule, a bill of review ought to have the same parties as the proceeding sought to be reviewed, but they may be either complainants or defendants, according to their interests in the matter to be reviewed.

7. Time for Filing Complaint. — The statute prescribes the limit of time within which an action to review a judgment may be brought,<sup>91</sup> and must be complied with.<sup>92</sup> Persons under a legal disability are usually allowed by statute a certain time after the removal of such disability within which to bring an action to review a judgment against them.<sup>93</sup> But the only limitations on these proceedings are those set forth in the statutes;<sup>94</sup> the general statutes of limitations do not apply to actions of this character.<sup>95</sup>

8. Form, Contents and Sufficiency of Complaint.<sup>96</sup> — a. In General. — A complaint for review of a judgment stands upon the same footing as a complaint in all other causes: to be sufficient it must exhibit a good cause of action.<sup>97</sup> It must proceed upon a single, definite theory and be good upon the theory upon which it proceeds.<sup>98</sup> Thus, a complaint, bad as a complaint for review, will not be treated as an application for relief on the ground of mistake, inadvertence, surprise

[a] The requirement that a complaint for review on the ground of new matter shall be filed "without delay after the discovery of such material new matter," operates to modify and control the provisions of the statute which extends the time for filing such a complaint when the complainant is under some recognized disability. Thus it has been said, "The provision in favor of parties under disabilities relates to the time of filing the complaint for review; but the complaint, based upon the discovery of new matter, whenever filed must be verified by the complainant, and show that the new matter could not have been discovered before judgment by reasonable diligence." *Debolt v. [c] A complaint to review a decree quieting title to land, against a subsequent purchaser, on the ground that the defendant in the quiet title suit was wrongfully informed by plaintiff's attorney that the complaint did not include any land owned by him, must show by specific averment that the purchaser acted with knowledge of such information and that the same was false. *Majors v. or excusable neglect.<sup>99</sup> Where the defects in a complaint for review are of a character curable by verdict, it is good as against a motion in arrest of judgment.<sup>1</sup>

Joinder of Actions. — An action to review a judgment cannot be joined with an action against an officer for a wrong done in enforcing the collection of such judgment.<sup>2</sup>

b. Particular Averments. — (I.) Where Based on Errors of Law.<sup>3</sup> The complaint in an action to review a judgment for errors of law must show upon its face some prejudicial error of the court in the former trial,<sup>4</sup> to which exception was properly taken and reserved,<sup>5</sup> and that the necessary steps were taken, by way of motion or otherwise, to enable the party complaining to present such supposed erroneous rulings for review.<sup>6</sup> It should set forth a complete record of the case, or at least so much thereof as is necessary to fully present the error complained of,<sup>7</sup> without resorting to the exhibits filed with [a] The reason given for this rule is that the complaint for a review, under the code, for error apparent in the record, is in the nature of an appeal, just as in equity "a bill of review was in the nature of a writ of error." The question must be tried by the record of the case to be reviewed, and hence the same necessity for the presentation of a complete record, as in the case of an appeal. Stevens v. City of Logansport, 76 Ind. 498.

[c] "The complaint for review should itself set forth a complete record of the case, or at least so much thereof as is necessary to fully present the error complained of. This record should be embodied in the complaint, or should, at least, be so referred to and identified as an exhibit as to become substantially a part of the complaint." Findling v. Lewis, 148 Ind. 429, 47 N. E. 831. See Stevens v. City of Logansport, 76 Ind. 498.

[d] Where the complaint in an action for review sets out the complaint in the original cause, "the appearance of the defendants, their motion to strike out parts of the complaint, and the action of the court upon it, their demurrer to the complaint, the judgment of the court upon the demurrer, the answer of the defendants to the complaint, the demurrer of the appellant to the second paragraph of the answer, the judgment of the court upon the demurrer, the trial, finding and judgment of the court in favor of the appellant, the order of injunction and service of the same, . . . it sufficiently appears that a full record of the proceedings sought to be reviewed is contained in the complaint." Lecch v. Perry, 77 Ind. 422.

[e] If a motion for a new trial was made this fact, as well as the grounds upon which the same was urged, should appear by proper averments in the complaint. Lightcap v. Konovosky, 161 Ind. 609, 69 N. E. 396.

[a] To constitute a valid complaint for review, enough of the issuable facts of the former case to show the grounds, effect, and limitation of the rulings complained of must be set out in the complaint, together with the nature of the rulings and exceptions, so that the court may be able to see from the body of the complaint itself, and without referring to exhibits filed therewith, that the plaintiff is entitled to relief against an error that has been committed by the court against him. Hague v. First Nat. Bank, 159 Ind. 636, 65 N. E. 907. To same effect, Wabash R. Co. v. Young, 154 Ind. 24, 55 N. E. 853; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. School Twp., 151 Ind. 36, 49 N. E. 1, 51 N. E. 100.

[b] "In such a complaint the rules of good pleading require that all the facts relied upon as entitling the party to relief should be averred, and particularly set forth in the complaint, with accuracy and clearness, so that without resort to the exhibits filed the court may have before it a full and complete statement of the case. If pleadings, proceedings, or entries are referred to, while they need not be set out in haec verba, yet the substance of such portions of them as are necessary to a right understanding of the real matters of the complaint should be incorporated in that pleading. A complaint to review a judgment is not founded upon the proceedings and judgment sought to be reviewed, and copies of such proceedings and judgment filed with the complaint cannot supply omissions of necessary allegations of their contents in the complaint itself." Murphy v. Branaman, 156 Ind. 77, 59 N. E. 274.

[c] Repeated allegations that "the court erred" are "only conclusions which lend no aid to the requirement that the complaint should disclose an error in some ruling of the court." Travelers' Ins. Co. v. School Twp., 151 Ind. 36, 49 N. E. 1, 51 N. E. 100.

(II.) Where Based on New Matter.<sup>13</sup> — Since new matter to be available as a ground for review must be such as could not, with due diligence have been discovered in time to be presented at the trial of the original action,<sup>14</sup> in a complaint based on this ground, it must be alleged that such matter was unknown at the time the judgment was rendered,<sup>15</sup> and could not have been discovered by the exercise of due diligence before the rendition of judgment.<sup>16</sup> The facts constituting the diligence used to ascertain such new matter must be made to appear by specific and detailed averments:<sup>17</sup> a general allegation is insufficient for this purpose.<sup>18</sup> If the diligence consisted in making inquiries, the time, place and circumstances thereof must be stated.<sup>19</sup> A complaint on this ground must also affirmatively show that with the

[a] A general averment (1) which follows the language of the statute as to the amount and nature of diligence used is insufficient. Debolt v. Debolt, 86 Ind. 521. (2) Thus, an allegation that the party "could not, by any reasonable diligence, have discovered these facts before the recovery of the judgment," is not sufficient. Warne v. Irwin, 153 Ind. 20, 53 N. E. 926. (3) The reason for this is founded upon that policy of the courts which views with disfavor actions upon this ground. Davis v. Davis, 145 Ind. 4, 43 N. E. 935.

19. Davis v. Davis, 145 Ind. 4, 43 N. E. 935; Osgood v. Smock, 144 Ind. 387, 40 N. E. 37; McDonald v. Coryell, 134 Ind. 493, 34 N. E. 7.

[a] This requirement is placed upon the ground that only such pleading will inform the court as to whether or not "the inquiries were made in the proper quarter and in due season." Davis v. Davis, 145 Ind. 4, 43 N. E. 935; Jones v. City of Tipton, 142 Ind. 643, 42 N. E. 221.

[b] It is not sufficient to state that discovery of the alleged new matter the party promptly instituted legal proceedings to bring it to the attention of the court;<sup>20</sup> and a mere averment to this effect is not sufficient; the complaint should show that this is so by stating when the discovery was made.<sup>21</sup> The materiality of the newly discovered evidence must also be made to affirmatively appear: it must not be left to inference from the pleadings and evidence in the original case.<sup>22</sup> But if the complaint is otherwise sufficient, it is not bad on demurrer for want of facts merely because it fails to show that the suit was commenced within the time limited for filing such suit,<sup>23</sup> or after the removal of the disabilities of the person bringing the suit.<sup>24</sup> As in the case of a complaint for review on the ground of errors of law,<sup>25</sup> the complaint should set out a complete record of the judgment which seeks to review.<sup>26</sup>

Where the complaint to review is based on new matter it should be verified by the complainant.<sup>27</sup> But it need not be further supported by the affidavit of the witness by whom this new matter is to be proved.<sup>28</sup>

c. Amendment.—Leave may be given to amend a complaint for review.<sup>29</sup>

d. Exhibits.<sup>30</sup>—Affidavits, where the ground of review is new matter,<sup>31</sup> and the bill of exceptions, where the ground is error in law,<sup>32</sup> may be made a part of the complaint as exhibits. They are, however, restricted to the single purpose of showing the former evidence and proceedings and the new matter discovered, if any.<sup>33</sup>

9. Form, Contents and Sufficiency of Answer or Demurrer. When a complaint is filed for errors of law apparent on the face of the record, the defendant can answer any other error apparent on the face of the record which, if assigned as cross-error on appeal, would the plaintiff was diligent in making inquiries of such persons as he believed would be likely to know anything about the case. Osgood v. Smock, 144 Ind. 371, 40 N. E. 37.

The procedure upon the hearing is, in many respects, controlled by the rules governing that on applications for a new trial,<sup>46</sup> and by the rules of procedure which are applied to appeals.<sup>47</sup> Where the grounds for review are errors of law, the alleged errors depend upon the record the complaint alleges nothing as to the legal disability of the plaintiff, a demurrer will not lie. Funk v. Davis, 103 Ind. 281, 2 N. E. 739; Whitehall v. Crawford, 67 Ind. 84; Harlen v. Watson, 63 Ind. 143.

The relief granted may consist in reversing or affirming the judgment,<sup>50</sup> in whole or in part,<sup>51</sup> or in modifying the same,<sup>52</sup> as the justice of the individual case may require. Thus should the record show the plaintiff in the original action to be entitled to all the relief therein awarded, the judgment will not be disturbed;<sup>53</sup> and on the other hand, a judgment which, as appears from the record, is wholly unauthorized, will be set aside.<sup>54</sup>

Costs are awarded according to the rule prescribed for the awarding of costs in the supreme court on appeal.<sup>55</sup>

b. Operation and Effect of Determination. — The result of a successful application to review is the same as a successful appeal to the supreme court.<sup>56</sup> A judgment either for or against a review of a former judgment puts an end to the action for review.<sup>57</sup> A judgment for the plaintiff in such an action operates to reinstate the former case,<sup>58</sup> and concludes the defendant therein on that score unless an appeal is properly perfected.<sup>59</sup> After a judgment has been reviewed and reversed it is in no way a bar to a subsequent suit on the same cause of action;<sup>60</sup> but an affirmance of the original judgment on an action to review is a bar to a second action to review the same judgment.<sup>61</sup>

C. WRIT OF ERROR CORAM NOBIS.<sup>68</sup>—1. Nature and Scope of Remedy.—The function of the writ of error coram nobis is to bring a judgment before the court which rendered it for review and correction as to some error of fact not appearing in the record.<sup>69</sup> It is Wills*, 104 Tenn. 382, 58 S. W. 301. (2) Thus "if the defendant be dead, and his death be pleaded in the action, but the court disregard it and render judgment, that is error of law, because the court having the fact before it in the record has rendered a judgment contrary to law, . . . and a writ of error in an appellate court would correct it; but where the death is not presented, and judgment is rendered, that is error in fact, to be corrected by writ of error coram nobis." *Withrow v. [a] The matter of fact which is meant in this connection is such a character of fact as would, if known, disable the court from rendering the judgment. It is not the office nor within the purview of a writ of error coram nobis to give a new trial merely because certain facts in the nature of evidence going to the merits of the case were undiscovered by a litigant in time for use at the original trial. Such . . . is not what is meant by latent matter of fact unknown to the court or party affected. Marble v. Vanhorn, 53 Mo. App. 361.

the correction of errors of law. It is not a writ of right.<sup>72</sup> Nor is such a writ a supersedeas in itself, though under some circumstances it may operate as such.<sup>73</sup>

The remedy by writ of error coram nobis is now practically obsolete, the same relief being obtained in most jurisdictions by motion in the same court and cause.<sup>74</sup>

2. Grounds for.—The matter of fact, which the remedy by writ of error coram nobis is designed to reach, may consist of some defect in the process,<sup>75</sup> or a misprision or default of the clerk,<sup>76</sup> or the death of a party before judgment,<sup>77</sup> or the coverture of the defendant,<sup>78</sup> or some fraud, accident or mistake, which, unmixed with any fault

[a] "The reason that on error coram nobis, an error of the court in deciding a question of law or adjudicating a question of fact, cannot be taken advantage of, is, that a trial court cannot, after the term has passed, review its decisions." Utley v. Cameron, 87 Ill. App. 71.

of the applicant, resulted in the judgment complained of.<sup>79</sup> It is also a sufficient ground for the issuance of this writ that the judgment complained of was had against a party who was not sui juris, and was not represented by a guardian ad litem,<sup>80</sup> as in the case of an infant.<sup>81</sup> The insanity of a defendant has been held not to be a ground for this writ,<sup>82</sup> though upon this proposition there are authorities to the contrary.<sup>83</sup> Newly discovered evidence cannot be made the basis of this writ.<sup>84</sup>

As a general qualification to all these grounds, it must be noticed that facts which were known, or, by reasonable diligence might have been ascertained, prior to the trial, will avail nothing on this writ.<sup>85</sup> Moreover, nothing may be assigned as error of fact which is contradictory to the record,<sup>86</sup> nor which was presented to the court and passed upon at the time of trial.<sup>87</sup>

would render the litigation interminable, as each party might say from time to time, that then he or she had fuller proof, which would establish the fact to be contrary to the last finding." *Williams v. [b] A statute limiting the time for bringing a writ of coram nobis for correction of errors in replevin or forthcoming bonds, does not apply to a writ to correct a judgment invalid on account of coverture of defendant. Breckinridge v. Coleman, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 331.

93. In Powell v. Gott, 13 Mo. 458, 53 Am. Dec. 153, where the ground of the writ was infancy, it was said that a statute of this sort did not apply "for the reason that the entering of a judgment against an infant is not an irregularity, but an error."

c. Application and Order.—The writ can only be issued on petition or motion to the court having jurisdiction,<sup>1</sup> and cause shown by affidavit.<sup>2</sup> The application must show that the facts urged as error would, if presented at the trial, have resulted in a different judgment.<sup>3</sup>

A notice of making application for the writ is usually required.<sup>5</sup>

The court said: "As to the second ground of objection; we are aware that an ordinary writ of error must be brought in the names of all the parties to the judgment, and if one or more of them be unwilling to join in it, there must be a summons and severance of such objecting party or parties. . . . Without stopping to inquire, whether this rule, in relation to writs of error for matter of law, may not be altered by an equitable construction of the 27th section of the 4th chapter of the Revised Code, which gives to one or more defendants the right to appeal, alone, from a judgment against him or them and others, we do not find any direct authority that the rule ever has been applied to writs of error coram nobis, and we do not perceive any reason why it should be so applied. The usual instances of error in fact, requiring the intervention of this writ, are those of judgments against infants and femes covert, where the fact of such infancy or coverture does not appear on the record. In such cases, it is manifest that the judgment, if otherwise proper, will be erroneous only as to them and not as to the other defendants. Why, then, should the other defendants be parties to the writ, when they cannot have any interest in reversing the judgment?"

XVII. JUDGMENT AS ESTOPPEL. — A. COLLATERAL IMPEACHMENT. — 1. General Statement. — An attack upon a judgment must be made in one of two ways, that is, either directly or collaterally.

2. Definitions and Distinctions. — a. Direct Attack Defined and Illustrated. — A direct attack on a judgment is an attempt to amend, correct, reform, vacate or enjoin the execution of the same in a proceeding provided by law for that purpose.<sup>14</sup> It contemplates, as a of an application for a writ of error coram nobis against "faulty replevin and forthcoming bonds, or any faulty or erroneous execution" does not embrace a case where the writ is sought on the ground of death of a party (Breckenridge v. Coleman, 7 B. Mon. [Ky.] 331), and failure to give this notice, even in the face of such a statute, has been held to be fatal only when a supersedeas issued with the writ, Combs v. Carter, 1 Dana (Ky.) 178; Case v. Ribelin, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 29.

[a] But if the error assigned be undisputed, but it is sought to raise the question whether the fact can be inquired into, or whether, if true, it can affect the judgment previously rendered, a plea in nullo est erratum should be pleaded and the question submitted to the court. Shoffet v. Menifee, 4 Dana (Ky.) 150 (such a plea is in the nature of a demurrer); Case v. Ribelin, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 29.

[a] After satisfaction of a judgment, the court, on writ of error coram nobis, can do no more than vacate its former judgment. It cannot in that proceeding order the money to be refunded. Bigham v. Brewer, 4 Sneed (Tenn.) 432.

As to enjoining the enforcement of judgments, see supra, XV, and the title "Judgments and Decrees, Enforcement of."

[a] For Want of Service.—A suit to restrain the enforcement of a judgment on the ground of want of service of summons is a direct attack. Smith v. Morrill, 12 Colo. App. 233, 55 Pac. 824.

[b] An intervention by equity to prevent an injustice resulting from further execution is not a collateral attack. Shanley v. York (Tex. Civ. App.), 118 S. W. 146.

[c] An attempt to stay supplementary proceedings after judgment on a note, on the ground that a suit is pending to compel the judgment creditor to surrender the note is a collateral attack. McCray v. Whitney, 56 Ind. App. 94, 104 N. E. 979.

In some jurisdictions such proceedings are deemed collateral. See infra, XVI, B. 4, a, (II).

[b] A cross-complaint seeking to vacate a decree setting aside a will, on the ground of fraud, is a direct attack upon that decree, when filed in a suit brought by the contestant of the will to quiet title to decedent's lands. Kirby v. Kirby, 142 Ind. 419, 41 N. E. 809.

[c] An answer and cross-bill setting up fraud and perjury in the judgment sued upon constitute a direct attack. Patruccio v. Selkirk (Tex. Civ. App.), 160 S. W. 635.

[d] A cross-bill to set aside a judgment on which a creditor's bill is based, on the ground that the defendant in the prior action at law was prevented through no fault of his own from presenting a good defense which he had, is a direct attack. Congregation of the Resurrection v. Laibe, 152 Ill. App. 417.

[e] The contest of a foreign will by a bill filed for that purpose is a direct attack. Dibble v. Winter, 247 Ill. 243, 93 N. E. 115.

[f] Contradicting Recitals.—A suit brought for the very purpose of establishing by evidence aliunde, the untruthfulness of the recitals as to service, and to have the judgment declared void, is a direct attack. Pinnacle Gold Min. Co. v. Popst, 54 Colo. 451, 131 Pac. 413.

[g] An action to quiet title to land, attacking a divorce decree through which the adverse claimant's title was derived, is a direct attack upon such decree where the grounds set up are that it was not only based on stipulation obtained by fraud and duress practiced on the plaintiff, but also that it was altered after being passed. Kwentsky v. Sirovy, 142 Iowa 385, 121 N. W. 27.

[h] Correcting Judgment. — An equitable proceeding by a third party to correct a judgment as to its amount

3. General Rule as to Collateral Attack.—Orders, judgments and decrees of a court having jurisdiction of the subject-matter and the parties, however erroneous, being valid, binding and conclusive determinations of the matters in controversy, cannot in the absence of fraud or collusion be impeached in a collateral proceeding.<sup>27</sup>

[a] Matters Dehors the Record.—An attack upon a judgment for want of jurisdiction in the court to render it, predicated upon matters de hors the record is collateral. Cal.—Parsons v. Weis, 144 Cal. 410, 77 Pac. 1007. Ind. Clark v. Hillis, 134 Ind. 421, 34 N. E. 13; Cohee v. Baer, 134 Ind. 375, 32 N. E. 920, 39 Am. St. Rep. 270; Cully v. Shirk, 131 Ind. 76, 30 N. [b] Res judicata and collateral attack are sometimes confused. Res judicata is concerned only with final judgments on the merits and, admitting the validity of the prior judgment, it is concerned merely with the scope claimed for it as an adjudication. Collateral attack applies to every order made in the proceeding whether upon the merits or not, as well as to the final judgment, and denies any validity whatever to such orders and judgment. [a] Collateral Attacks Not Encour-aged.—Collateral attacks upon judicial proceedings should not be encouraged, because if successful, the tendency is generally to bring courts into disrepute and property rights thereby afterward become wrested from innocent purchasers. Jewett v. Iowa Land Co., 64 Minn. 531, 67 N. W. 639.

[b] "This rule has its foundation (1) in the policy of the law and is intended to give permanency to all judicial transactions and rights acquired thereunder." Harris v. Lester, 80 Ill. 307. (2) In Crawford v. McDonald, 88 Tex. 626, 630, 33 S. W. 325, the court said: "On grounds of public policy the courts in order to protect property rights, apply the rule afore-said, which precludes inquiry into facts dehors the record for the purpose of showing the invalidity of the judgment and therefore for all practical purposes in such collateral attack the judgment is held valid."

(II.) Enjoining Enforcement of Judgment. — A proceeding to enjoin the enforcement of the judgment is regarded in many jurisdictions as a direct attack upon the judgment;<sup>30</sup> in some states, however, it is considered collateral, and, as such, cannot prevail in the absence of want of jurisdiction, fraud, or some other defect rendering the judgment void.<sup>31</sup>

(III.) Mandamus Proceedings. — An attack upon a judgment is collateral where made in proceedings for a writ of mandamus to compel obedience to it,<sup>32</sup> or to compel action in aid of its execution, as for

c. Actions Growing Out of the Proceedings.—(I.) Generally. Attempts to assail a judgment are collateral to it when made in actions involving the enforcement of some obligation growing out of the judgment itself or out of the proceedings in the case in which the judgment was rendered.<sup>38</sup> Thus an action on a bond is collateral to the proceeding in which the bond was given,<sup>39</sup> and an action for dam-

[a] In Baker v. Baker, Eccles & Co., 162 Ky. 683, 694, 173 S. W. 109, a separate action was filed attacking the validity of a domestic judgment and the point was made that the procedure constituted a direct and not a collateral attack upon the judgment. In overruling that contention the court said: "We are also clear that the attack made on this Kentucky judgment was a collateral attack, as a direct attack on a judgment can only be made in the manner pointed out in the Code; that is to say, by prosecuting an appeal or by proceedings had under the Code and in the manner pointed out in sections 344, 414 and 518 for the modification or vacation of judgments. An attack made on a judgment in any other way is a collateral attack."

[c] Distinction Between Parties and Third Persons.—In Moore v. Neil, 39 Ill. 256, 89 Am. Dec. 303, the court held that where a bill in chancery is filed to set aside an administrator's sale, the proceeding should not, perhaps, be regarded as collateral to the former suit so far as it relates to the parties to that suit, but as to purchasers, whose title derived from the sale is sought to be divested, it is as purely collateral as an action of ejectment.

[d] Where acts done pursuant to an order are attempted to be annulled by a suit in equity, this constitutes a collateral attack upon the order. Cody v. Cody, 98 Wis. 445, 74 N. W. 217.

[a] In an action on a note given in payment of a judgment any attempt to impeach the judgment is a collateral attack. Mitchell v. State Bank, 2 Ill. 526; Wallace v. Usher, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 508.

[b] Enforcing Stockholder's Liability.—Attacks upon a judgment against a corporation are collateral thereto when made in an action to enforce the stockholder's liability determined by the judgment. American Nat. Bank v. Supplee, 115 Fed. 657, 52 C. C. A. 293.

[c] A proceeding to cancel a mortgage is collateral to a judgment, the satisfaction of which was a part of the consideration for the mortgage. Mathias v. Miller, 164 Ill. App. 113.

(II.) Criminal Prosecutions.—But the state in prosecuting a party for criminal conduct, such as fraud or perjury, in obtaining the judgment does not collaterally attack it.<sup>41</sup>

d. Recovering Money Paid in Satisfaction.—A proceeding to recover money paid in satisfaction of a judgment is collateral thereto.<sup>42</sup>

e. Second Action on Same Subject-Matter.—Another action on the same subject-matter is collateral to the prior judgment.<sup>43</sup>

f. Revivor of Judgment.—Attacks made upon a judgment in proceedings to revive it by seire facias or otherwise, are deemed collateral.<sup>44</sup>

An answer to complaint on an administrator's bond is collateral to the judgment of the probate court settling the administrator's account. Bonner v. Common, 71 Ark. 480, 77 S. W. 692.

[c] An action on the bond of a trustee appointed pursuant to a decree in equity is collateral to the decree (Richardson v. State, 2 Gill [Md.] 439), and to the order ratifying the trustee's audit. State v. Graham, 115 Md. 520, 81 Atl. 31.

[d] A suit on clerk's bond for exacting illegal fees is not a collateral attack on the judgment for costs. State v. Stevens, 163 Ind. 55, 2 N. E. 214, 53 Am. Rep. 482.

g. Judgment as Basis of Title or Right. — (I.) In General. — Whenever a judgment is introduced in evidence or relied upon in another proceeding as the basis of a right or title, any objection drawing in question its validity is a collateral attack,<sup>45</sup> unless its validity is put in issue by the pleadings in such a way as to constitute a direct attack upon it.<sup>46</sup>

(IV.) Consent Judgments. — Consent judgments and decrees are likewise invulnerable to collateral attack when jurisdiction appears and no invalidating fraud or collusion is present.<sup>90</sup>

(V.) Judgments by Confession. — Judgments by confession, also, come within the rule, and unless for some reason void, they are not open to attack in any but a direct proceeding.<sup>91</sup>

(VII.) Of Dismissal. — The court having proper jurisdiction of the subject-matter and the parties, its order dismissing the cause cannot be impeached in a collateral proceeding.<sup>93</sup>

6. As Affected by Person Attacking.—As to the scope of the doctrine of collateral attack with respect to the persons as to whom it may be applicable there is some confusion in the cases. It seems obvious that as to persons against whom the judgment is not operative as an adjudication of the matters determined by it, either conclusively or presumptively, the term collateral attack can logically have no application, since it is wholly unnecessary for them to attack a judgment which as to them adjudicates nothing. The general rule is that a judgment is admissible in evidence as an adjudication of facts, only against the parties thereto and those persons in privity with them,<sup>23</sup> and therefore generally the rules as to collateral attack have no application to persons who are neither parties nor privies.<sup>29</sup> In some classes of cases, however, it seems to be held by some authorities that a judgment, though not in rem, is at least prima facie, and sometimes even conclusive evidence of the facts adjudicated, against third persons who are neither parties nor privies,<sup>30</sup> in which event, of course, it becomes necessary for such persons to attack the judgment if they wish to avoid its consequences. The limits within which attack is permitted in such cases seems to depend upon whether the adjudication is regarded as conclusive or as merely prima facie evidence of the facts adjudged.<sup>31</sup>

[a] Though no fraud or collusion was practiced in obtaining the judgment a third party may award it. In an early case in Massachusetts the court expressed itself upon this point thus: "Although the judgment in favor of the plaintiff, in the present case, was not recovered by collusion with his debtor, or with any fraudulent intention, yet we think the defendant has a right to avoid it in the same manner; because he is neither party nor privy to the plaintiff's judgment, and is not entitled by the rules of law to reverse it by a writ of error. . . . This rule of law does not appear, in any case, to have been controverted, and it seems reasonable and just, that where a judgment is recovered contrary to law, and prejudicial to a third party, he should have a right to avoid it." Downs v. Fuller, 2 Met. (Mass.) 135, 35 Am. Dec. 393.

third persons even in a collateral proceeding. Shamblin v. Hall, 123 Ala. 541, 26 So. 285.

[c] A trustee who is not a party to an action at common law against the cestui que trust is as a rule not bound by the judgment, and he, in an action that seeks to subject the trust estate to the satisfaction of that judgment may contest the correctness of the judgment and show that it is void, in order to protect the trust property. Roberts v. Yancey, 94 Ky. 243, 21 S. W. 1047.

[d] A mortgagee of land on which a building is subsequently erected may collaterally attack a judgment foreclosing a mechanic's lien against the building for materials, he not having been a party to the foreclosure proceedings. Russell v. Grant, 122 Mo. 161, 26 S. W. 958.

[e] In an action to recover for support furnished an alleged pauper, the plaintiff attempted to show by a certain probate decree the fact that the person was a pauper. The defendants were allowed to impeach the probate judgment because they were neither parties nor privies to it. Cook v. Town of Morris, 66 Conn. 137, 33 Atl. 594.

[f] Parties interested in property subject to a mechanic's lien, who are not made parties to the suit to enforce the lien may, in a suit upon the title under the lien, object to the regularity of the proceedings. Hauser v. Hoffman, 32 Mo. 334.

[g] A judgment declaring a ditch assessment to be a lien upon certain land may be collaterally attacked by one who is attempting to foreclose a mortgage which is a prior lien on the same land. Deisner v. Simpson, 72 Ind. 435.

Injury to Third Persons.—Statements are sometimes made that a third person or stranger to the record will not be permitted to collaterally attack a judgment unless he has been injured by it.<sup>32</sup> The cases in which these statements appear are almost invariably cases in which the so-called third person or stranger is in reality in privity with a party to the previous proceedings or in which, contrary to the general

[a] In Vose v. Morton, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 27, 50 Am. Dec. 750, it was sought to recover land levied on and sold under an execution on a judgment. The defendant in possession of the land claimed under a deed from the judgment creditor, which deed was executed prior to but not recorded till after the attachment of the land in the previous action. In permitting the defendant to attack the judgment on the ground that there was no jurisdiction of the parties acquired the court used this language: "At the time the judgment was rendered, the tenant (defendant) had no reason, no occasion, and no right, to question its validity. Being neither a party nor privy to the judgment, he can not have a writ of error to reverse it, although it may be erroneous and void; but when such judgment is set up collaterally to defeat the tenant's title, which is otherwise good, and the tenant can show that the judgment is erroneous, either in matter of law or fact, he may do so by proof. It is a general and established rule of law, that when a party's right may be collaterally affected by a judgment, which for any cause is erroneous and void, but which he can not bring a writ of error to reverse, he may, without reversing, prove it so erroneous and void, in any suit, in which its validity is drawn in question." The court cites Alexander v. Gould, 1 Mass. 165; Smith v. Saxton, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 483; Pond v. Makepeace, 2 Met. (Mass.) 114; Leonard v. Bryant, 11 Met. (Mass.) 370.

[b] One having the naked possession of land cannot collaterally attack a decree divesting the title to that land out of the original patentee and vesting it in another, though the decree be erroneous. Mylar v. Hughes, 60 Mo. 105.

[a] The regularity of a judgment on a scire facias obtained on a mortgage cannot be questioned collaterally by one not connected with the mortgagor's title as grantee, mortgagee, judgment creditor, etc. Glass v. Gilbert, 58 Pa. 266.

[b] In Freydendall v. Baldwin, 103 Ill. 325, judgment creditors attempted to impeach prior judgments against their debtor on the ground that they were fraudulent. In denying them the relief prayed for the court said: "Certainly they can not demand that the judgments at law in favor of defendants against the common debtors shall be set aside, unless they are in some rule, the judgment is given prima facie or conclusive effect as an adjudication, against persons who are neither parties nor privies; the typical instances being where an attack is made by a creditor upon an execution sale as a fraudulent conveyance, or a judgment is relied upon as a link in a chain of title.<sup>33</sup>

The parties and their privies being equally bound by the judgment the rules as to collateral impeachment are the same whether the attack be by a party or privy.<sup>34</sup> There is an apparent exception, however, way injuriously affected by them, and then only to the extent such judgments interfere with their prior or superior equities. Whether such judgments are absolutely void for want of jurisdiction in the court to render them, is a matter in which complainants have no concern. That question can only be made by a party to the record. A judgment or decree absolutely void for want of jurisdiction in the court, if it affects his prior or superior equities, may be assailed by a stranger to the record. Otherwise he may not intermeddle with it."

33. See the cases cited in preceding note, the title "Res Judicata," and infra.

[a] Prior Grantee.—In ejectment where the plaintiff's title depended upon the levy of an execution in favor of the plaintiff against the defendant's grantor, made subsequent to the conveyance, the defendant was not permitted to impeach the judgment upon which the execution issued, since he could not show that there was a want of jurisdiction in the court rendering the judgment, or that it was obtained through fraud or collusion. Sidensparker v. Sidensparker, 52 Me. 481, 83 Am. Dec. 527.

[b] In trover by a prior mortgagee against a sheriff and a purchaser at an execution sale for the value of the mortgaged property, which had been seized on several executions issued in favor of judgment creditors of the mortgagor and on one of which it had been sold, the defendants justified under the judgment and execution sale. The plaintiff offered evidence to show that the judgment was obtained by fraud and collusion. The appellate court after noticing the jurisdiction over the parties and subject-matter appeared of record, said: "The record, therefore, imported absolute verity, and could not be contradicted. But this rule applies only to parties and their privies. It does not apply to such third persons, or strangers to the record, as would be prejudiced in regard to some pre-existing right if the judgment were given full credit and effect." Eureka Iron, etc. Works v. Bresnahan, 66 Mich. 489, 33 N. W. 834.

7. Grounds of Attack. — a. Invalidity or Voidability in General. A judgment or decree, void on its face, binds no one; it may be disregarded by anyone against whom it is sought to be enforced whether parties or strangers to the record.<sup>36</sup> But to be open to successful at-the same. Sanders v. Peck, 87 Fed. 61, 30 C. C. A. 530.

Vignaud*, 10 Mart. O. S. [La.] 482), and show that same is null for any cause inherent to the judgment itself (Peets v. Wilson, 19 La. 478); yet his rights, in this respect, are just the same as those of his vendor as judgment debtor—no greater, and nothing less." Wolfe v. Joubert, 45 La. Ann. 1100, 13 So. 806.

[m] Subsequent execution creditors cannot collaterally attack the judgment upon which a prior execution issued because of mere irregularities therein. Lowber's Appeal, 8 Watts & S. (Pa.) 387, 42 Am. Dec. 302.

[n] The heirs at law cannot as against bona fide purchasers collaterally attack a judgment foreclosing a mortgage against an insane person, though no guardian ad litem was appointed. Dunn v. Dunn, 114 Cal. 210, 46 Pac. 5.

[o] Persons claiming through the heirs may not attack a judgment foreclosing a mortgage against the decedent's lands, when the same is introduced in evidence to prove plaintiff's title in ejectment, when the judgment is merely voidable and not void. Swiggart v. Harber, 5 Ill. 364, 39 Am. Dec. 418.

[p] A subsequent judgment creditor (1) may not attack a judgment by confession against his debtor though the same was entered without authority, there being no collusion in the case. Drexel's Appeal, 6 Pa. 272. (2) Nor can he attack such a judgment for irregularities and defects in the form thereof. Breading v. Boggs, 20 Pa. 33.

consent of the parties to the exercise of such jurisdiction cannot add anything to the validity of the judgment.<sup>49</sup>

(D.) JUDGMENT BEYOND THE ISSUES.—The mere fact that a judgment is outside the issues should not invalidate it on collateral attack, providing the court has kept within the power it might exercise in a proper case. While many of the decisions sustain this view,<sup>50</sup> there

[a] It is not the result reached which determines whether or not the judgment is void but the power or authority which lies behind the mere conclusion that determines the question. To decide wrong where authority exists to pronounce judgment is error which can only be corrected in a direct proceeding. To decide wrong where no jurisdiction exists to pronounce judgment of the character involved renders the adjudication void and it can be attacked anywhere and collaterally. Crew v. Pratt, 119 Cal. 139, 51 Pac. 38.

[b] A justice judgment in excess of the highest limit which the statute allows, is void and collaterally attackable. Jones v. Jones, 14 N. C. 360; Houser v. McKennon, 1 Baxt. (Tenn.) 287.

[c] Excessive Fine.—A fine which is greater than the court could in any case impose is a nullity. People v. Carter, 48 Hun 165, 14 Civ. Proc. 241, 15 N. Y. St. 640; People ex rel. Stokes v. Riseley, 38 Hun 280. But see Clark v. Holdridge, 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 61, 40 How. Pr. 320.

[f] A probate court's judgment ordering a sale and seizure of land is void as to such seizure when the court had no power to order it. Wisdom v. Buckner, 31 La. Ann. 52.

[g] A judgment of condemnation and sale of the fee to land is void for the excess above a life estate when the statute expressly prohibits the court from condemning any rights outlasting the life estate. Bigelow v. Forrest, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 339, 19 L. ed. 696.

[h] In all special statutory proceedings, (1) the measure of the court's power is the statute itself, and the exercise in such proceedings of power not authorized by the statute renders the judgment null and void and subject to collateral attack. Murray v. American Surety Co., 70 Fed. 341, 17 C. C. A. 138. (2) The fact that the court might have power to appoint a receiver for a bank under other proceedings which the code authorizes, does not give it power to appoint a receiver in proceedings instituted by the attorney general on behalf of the people to enjoin an insolvent bank from the further transaction of any business. *Murray v. [c] Consent Judgment.—In regard to a consent judgment attacked collaterally on the ground that it was not authorized by the pleading, the court said: "We can conceive of no reason why a judgment entered by agreement, by a court of general jurisdiction, having power in a proper case to render such a judgment, and having the parties before it, should not bind those by whose agreement it is entered, notwithstanding the pleadings would not, in a contested case, authorize such a judgment. The object of a complaint is to inform the defendant of the nature of the plaintiff's case. It is for his protection that it is required. If he wishes to waive it, or agree to the granting of greater relief than could otherwise be given under its averments, without amendment, and such relief is given by his consent, we think that the judgment is not even erroneous, much less void, as to him." Fletcher v. Holmes, 25 Ind. 458.

[d] An assignment of dower is void which includes land not contained in the petition for the assignment. Falls v. Wright, 55 Ark. 562, 18 S. W. 1044; Corwithe v. Griffing, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 9.

[e] Trustee's sale void which contains land not described in the petition. Shriver's Lessee v. Lynn, 2 How. (U. S.) 43, 11 L. ed. 172.

[f] Retention of Jurisdiction.—A petition asking for the appointment of a new trustee and that he be vested with the trust property empowers the court to decide only the issues thereby framed. When that is done, the court's power is exhausted and it may not by a clause in the decree retain jurisdiction of the estate for further purposes

(III.) Judgment Premature.—A judgment rendered in advance of the time at which the court lawfully acquires jurisdiction is void.<sup>52</sup> But the premature entry of a judgment after the court has acquired jurisdiction in the case is at most an irregularity which must be availed of in a direct proceeding.<sup>53</sup>

(IV.) How the Question of Jurisdiction Determined.—(A.) INSPECTION OF THE RECORD.—Whether or not the court rendering the judgment had

of administration. State ex rel. McManus v. Muench (Mo.), 117 S. W. 25.

[g] "The courts cannot, ex mero motu, set themselves in motion, nor have they power to decide questions except such as are presented by the parties in their pleadings. The parties, by their attorneys, make the record, and what is decided within the issue is res adjudicata; anything beyond is coram non iudice and void." State ex rel. McManus v. Muench, 217 Mo. 124, 117 S. W. 25.

52. Prior to Date Set for Appearance.—A decree pro confesso taken against non-resident defendants before the date fixed by the order of publication for the appearance of such defendants is void. Morse v. United States, 29 App. Cas. (D. C.) 433.

[a] The appointment of a receiver before the date specified in the notice of hearing is void where there was no appearance or stipulation. Gibson v. Sexson, 82 Neb. 475, 118 N. W. 77.

[a] A decree appointing an administrator before the time authorized by the notice is such an irregularity. Hanson v. Nygaard, 105 Minn. 30, 117 N. W. 235.

[b] Entry of Default.—It is not a valid objection collaterally that the decree was taken before the default was actually entered. Drake v. Duvenick, 45 Cal. 455.

[c] Prior to Verdict.—It is not fatal collaterally that the judgment was entered and recorded before the verdict was filed. Weiland v. City of Ashton, 18 S. D. 331, 100 N. W. 737.

[d] A justice's judgment by default rendered before the expiration of three hours does not render the judgment void. Wise v. Loring, 54 Mo. App. 258; Klein v. Wielandy, 15 Mo. App. 581.

[f] Judgment on Claim Not Due. Where the statute permits an attachment suit on claims not due but forbids judgment until they become due, a judgment rendered before that time is void. King v. Frazer, 2 Wills. Civ. Cas. (Tex.) §788.

[g] Before Petition Filed.—A decree cannot be collaterally attacked upon the ground that it was rendered before the formal filing of the petition. Pollard v. American Freehold Land Mtg. Co., 103 Ala. 289, 295, 16 So. 801.

[h] That a note sued upon was not filed with the clerk when default was entered is a mere irregularity. West Duluth Land Co. v. Bradley, 75 Minn. 275, 77 N. W. 961.

[i] Time For Answer Not Expired. Where the court has acquired jurisdiction it is not a fatal defect that the judgment is entered prior to the expiration of the time allowed for answer. Crawford v. Lees, 84 N. J. Eq. 324, 93 Atl. 201.

[j] A judgment in attachment entered before the expiration of the delay required by statute is not open to collateral attack. Stephenson v. Newcomb, 5 Harr. (Del.) 150; Porter v. Partee, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 168. But see People v. Jarrett, 7 Ill. App. 566.

[k] Approval of Sale.—Though by statute an administrator's or guardian's sale must be approved at the term foljurisdiction of the parties and the subject-matter must be ascertained from an inspection of the record,<sup>54</sup> even though the record be irregular and defective.<sup>55</sup> The record imports verity and cannot be contralowing that in which it took place, the approval of such sale at the term when made does not invalidate it on collateral attack. Henry v. McKerlie, 78 Mo. 416; Wilkerson v. Allen, 67 Mo. 502.

[a] Conclusiveness of Record.

"The record of a court can never be contradicted, varied or explained by evidence beyond or outside of the record itself. Any other rule would be most disastrous in its results. A judicial record contains evidence of its own validity, and should testimony deors the record itself be admitted to contradict or vary its recitals it would render such records of no avail, and definite sentences would afford but slight protection to the rights of parties once solemnly adjudicated. Hence all records must be tried and construed by themselves." Harris v. Lester, 80 Ill. 307.

[b] Parol Evidence.—See Butterfield v. Miller, 195 Fed. 200, 115 C. C. A. 152; Ryan v. Staples, 76 Fed. 721, 23 C. C. A. 541. See 10 ENCY. OF EV. 936.

(B.) PRESUMPTIONS WHERE RECORD SILENT. — (1.) Generally. — It may be, however, that the jurisdictional facts do not appear on the record. In such case it becomes important to ascertain the nature of the jurisdiction exercised by the court. Certain presumptions operate in aid of the judgments of courts of general jurisdiction which are withheld from those of inferior tribunals.<sup>58</sup>

(2.) Courts of General Jurisdiction. — (a.) Rule Stated. — The rule of universal application is that every intendment consistent with the record will be indulged to sustain the proceedings of domestic courts of general and superior jurisdiction.<sup>59</sup> Consequently the mere silence of the

[a] A distinction (1) has been made between a proceeding in rem and one that involves merely a determination of the personal liability of the defendant. Kingsborough v. Tousley, 56 Ohio St. 450, 47 N. E. 541. (2) "In an action on a personal judgment, whether rendered by a court of this state or elsewhere, it is competent to plead and prove in defense, though it be in contradiction of the record, that the defendant was not served with process, nor jurisdiction of his person otherwise obtained by the court rendering the judgment." Paulin v. Sparrow, 91 Ohio St. 279, 110 N. E. 528.

58. Superior Jurisdiction Defined. "To constitute a court, a superior court, as to any class of actions, its jurisdiction of such actions must be unconditional, so that the only thing essential, to enable the court to take cognizance of them, is the acquisition of jurisdiction of the persons of the parties." Simons v. De Bare, 8 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 269, 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 547.

[a] A court of general jurisdiction is one "which is competent by its constitution to decide on its own jurisdiction, and to exercise it to a final judgment, without setting forth in their proceedings the facts and evidence on which it is rendered, whose record is absolute verity, not to be impugned by averment or proof to the contrary." Lessee of Grignon v. Astor, 2 How. (U. S.) 319, 11 L. ed. 283.

[a] Judgment Entered by Clerk.

The same presumption does not attend a judgment entered by the clerk as is indulged in favor of one entered pursuant to judicial action by the court. Shirran v. Dallas, 21 Cal. App. 405, 132 Pac. 454, 462.

[b] From the identity of names of sumed, where the record is silent that jurisdiction was duly acquired and properly exercised in a manner consistent with its retention.<sup>60</sup>

(b.) Presumption's as to Process or Appearance.—This presumption extends to all matters going to the authority of the court to render the plaintiff and defendant it will not be presumed on a collateral attack that the parties were the same, where such presumption would invalidate a judgment regular on its face and entered in a cause of which the court had jurisdiction. Allen v. Evans, 7 Ariz. 354, 64 Pac. 414.

[c] The entry of judgment by cegnovit under a warrant of attorney to confess judgment is a proceeding which the courts entertain in the ordinary exercise of their authority as courts of general jurisdiction. The fact that the statute has regulated the mode of procedure, does not convert the proceeding into one of such a special character that the same presumptions do not obtain as in the case of ordinary judgments of superior courts of general jurisdiction. Bush v. Hanson, 70 Ill. 480.

[d] Judgments of the court of first instance, a tribunal established during the early history of California prior to its admission into the union, were aided by the same presumption as affected the judgments of other courts of general jurisdiction. Ryder v. Cohn, 37 Cal. 69.

[c] The supreme court of the United States in Applegate v. Lexington & C. Co. Min. Co., 117 U. S. 269, 6 Sup. Ct. 742, 29 L. ed. 892, endorses the rule. The language of that case is: "The result of the authorities and what we decide is, that where a court of general jurisdiction is authorized in a proceeding, either statutory or at law or in equity, to bring in, by publication or other substituted service, non-resident defendants interested in, or having a lien upon property lying within its territorial jurisdiction, but is not required to place the proof of service upon the record, and the court orders such substituted service, it will be presumed in favor of the jurisdiction, that service was made as ordered, although no evidence thereof appears of record, and the judgment of the court so far as it affects such property, will be valid. The case of Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. 250 [85 U. S. 350, 21 L. ed. 959], cited by counsel for defendant, is not in conflict with this proposition. The judgment set up on one side and attacked on the other in that case was rendered on service by publication. The law permitted service to be made by publication only where certain facts were made to ap-either expressly or by necessary implication requires the steps taken to secure jurisdiction by publication to be spread upon the record, the silence of the record in this respect would be fatal.<sup>64</sup>

(c.) Attachment Proceedings.—Jurisdiction over attachment proceedings is part of the general jurisdiction conferred upon the courts in which they are cognizable, and that jurisdiction is supported by the same presumptions as in other cases.<sup>65</sup>

(3.) Courts of General Jurisdiction Over Particular Matters.—The court may possess a general jurisdiction over a limited number of matters. In such case if the record discloses a subject-matter falling within that class, the usual presumptions of jurisdiction and regularity apply.<sup>66</sup> pear to the satisfaction of the court, and the court by a precedent order, which must necessarily appear of record, authorized service to be made by publication. But the record showed no order, and the publication, therefore, was the unauthorized act of the party, and appeared affirmatively to be invalid and ineffectual.”

[b] Strict Compliance Necessary. “The statute provides, in case of absent and non-resident defendants, for constructive service of process by publication. It requires an order of the court; . . . it designates the facts which must exist to authorize the order, the manner in which such facts must be made to appear, the period for which publication must be had, and the mode in which the publication must be established. These provisions, . . . must be strictly pursued, for the statute is in derogation of the common law.” Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 350, 21 L. ed. 959.

[a] "There is a marked distinction between a court having general and exclusive jurisdiction over a limited number of subjects and a court having no jurisdiction over certain subjects except in cases in which certain essential and indispensable facts shall exist. In the latter case the rule that the facts conferring the jurisdiction must appear in the record of the proceedings applies to all courts, circuit as well as county. The rule does not grow out of nor depend upon the fact that the court . . . has not full and complete jurisdiction of the subject-matter about which it assumes to act. If the jurisdiction over the subject-matter is complete and unlimited, the action of the court will always be taken to be within its authority and jurisdiction, unless the contrary appears." *Jacobs' Admr. v. [a] "A court of general jurisdiction, . . . may have special and summary powers, wholly derived from statutes, not exercised according to the course of the common law, and which do not belong to it as a court of general jurisdiction. In such cases, its decisions must be regarded and treated like those of courts of limited and special jurisdiction. The jurisdiction in such cases, both as to the subject-matter of the judgment, and as to the persons to be affected by it, must appear by the record; and everything will be presumed to be without the jurisdiction which does not distinctly appear to be within it." *Galpin v. ognized by the common law, and when a foreign divorce judgment of a common law court, though of general jurisdiction, is offered, its proceedings in relation to divorce stand on the same footing with those of courts of limited and inferior jurisdiction, so that its powers in the case must be shown and appear to have been strictly pursued. *Com. v. 70. A court of special jurisdiction is one which "is so constituted that its judgment can be looked through for the facts and evidence which are necessary to sustain it, whose decision is not evidence of itself to show jurisdiction and its lawful exercise." Grignon's Lessee v. Astor, 2 How. (U. S.) 319, 11 L. ed. 283.

[a] Limited and Special Jurisdiction Distinguished.—"I apprehend the term, 'limited jurisdiction,' to be somewhat ambiguous, and that the books sometimes use it without due precision. Our supreme court is limited by acts of the legislature; so likewise is the court of common pleas; and the newly constituted circuit courts; yet each of them exercises a general jurisdiction. The word limited, seems to be used sometimes carelessly instead of the term special, for I take the true distinction between courts to be such as possess a general, and such as have only a special jurisdiction for a particular purpose, or clothed with special powers for the performance of specific duties, beyond which they have no manner of authority: and these special powers to be exercised in a summary way; either by a tribunal already existing for general purposes, or else by persons appointed or to be appointed in some definite form. . . . Unless their proceedings, on the face of them, show a compliance with the directions required by the statute under which they act, it never could be known whether they acted within their jurisdiction, or exceeded it." *Den ex dem. (b.) Justice Courts.—The court of a justice of the peace is generally considered an inferior court whose judgments are not aided by any presumptions as to jurisdiction.<sup>73</sup> In a few states justices of the peace are deemed to exercise general jurisdiction over certain matters and when acting within those defined limits their judgments are attended by the same presumptions of jurisdiction as are those of superior courts.<sup>74</sup>

As to effect of judgments of federal courts in state courts and vice versa, see infra, XVIII.

[1] "The courts of the United States (1) are all of limited jurisdiction, and their proceedings are erroneous, if the jurisdiction be not shown upon them. Judgments rendered in such cases may certainly be reversed, but this court is not prepared to say that they are absolute nullities, which may be totally disregarded." *Marshall in Kennedy Lessee v. (2) Their jurisdiction, though limited to certain subject-matter, is general as to all such matters, and their judgments upon such subject-matter are entitled to the same presumptions as other courts of general jurisdiction. See Grignon's Lessee v. Astor 2 How. (U. S.) 319, 11 L. ed. 283.

[b] "Although the presumption in every stage of a cause in a circuit court of the United States is that the court is without jurisdiction unless the contrary affirmatively appears from the record, . . . yet, if such jurisdiction does not so appear, the judgment or final decree cannot, for that reason, be collaterally attacked, or treated as a nullity." *Dowell v. [g] Confiscation Proceedings.—A district court of the United States has been held a court of limited jurisdiction in confiscation proceedings and its judgment held void where the record showed neither an order for seizure nor an actual seizure of the land. Mason v. Tuttle, 75 Va. 105.

[a] The United States supreme court has stated the rule thus: "... Such presumptions, ... only arise with respect to jurisdictional facts concerning which the record is silent. Presumptions are only indulged to supply the absence of evidence or averments respecting the facts presumed. They have no place for consideration when the evidence is disclosed or the averment is made. When, therefore, the record states the evidence or makes an averment with reference to a jurisdictional fact, it will be understood to speak the truth on that point, and it will not be presumed that there was other or different evidence respecting the fact, or that the fact was otherwise than as averred." Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 350, 21 L. ed. 959.

[b] Reason for the Rule.—"Were not this so it would never be possible to attack collaterally the judgment of a superior court, although a want of jurisdiction might be apparent upon its face; the answer to the attack would thus affirmatively disclosed upon the record are insufficient to confer jurisdiction the judgment is a nullity and subject to collateral attack.<sup>91</sup>

(2.) Jurisdiction of Subject-Matter.—Want of jurisdiction of the subject-matter appearing affirmatively upon the record renders the judgment a nullity and the parties may disregard it.<sup>92</sup>

(3.) Jurisdiction of Parties.—(a.) In General.—A failure of the court to acquire jurisdiction of the parties, when disclosed by an examination of the record itself, renders a personal judgment subject to collateral attack.<sup>93</sup>

(c.) Defects in Service.—In the absence of a voluntary appearance, an entire failure to serve the summons, or a wholly inadequate service when shown by the record, would avoid the judgment collaterally.

Ky. 556, 142 S. W. 1049. W. Va. Ambler v. Leach, 15 W. Va. 677.

See generally the title "Process."

[a] The process is sufficient collaterally if it informs the defendant of the nature of the proceedings, of the interest he has in them and of the court where the hearing will take place. [b] Matters of Form.—That the process does not conform to the statute in matters of mere form is of no importance collaterally. Me.—Boynton v. Fly, 12 Me. 17. N. Y.—Denman v. McGuire, 101 N. Y. 161, 4 N. E. 278. Vt. Allen v. Huntington, 2 Aiken 249, 16 Am. Dec. 702.

[c] An error in the date of the summons is not fatal collaterally. Chicago Dock & Canal Co. v. Kinzie, 93 Ill. 415.

[d] Omission of Clerk's Signature. Ambler v. Leach, 15 W. Va. 677.

[e] Amendable Defects.—Where the defendant has notice of the suit and fails to object to defects in process, he is estopped by the judgment from thereafter questioning them. Baker v. Thompson, 75 Ga. 164.

[f] An incorrect designation in the process will not affect the proceedings when attacked collaterally. Thus a summons against "Miss Sue Dixon" is sufficient to support a judgment against "Sue R. Dixon." Dixon v. Melton, 137 Ky. 689, 126 S. W. 358. See also Farnsworth v. Barret, 146 Ky. 556, 142 S. W. 1049; Ordean v. Grannis, 118 Minn. 117, 136 N. W. 575.

[g] An erroneous return day in the summons does not render the process void (Jones v. Danforth, 71 Neb. 722, 99 N. W. 495), a process requiring the defendant to answer in an interval less than that to which he is by law entitled. Whitwell v. Barbier, 7 Cal. 54, 63.

[h] The praecipe serves as a guide to the clerk in issuing the summons and likewise serves to mark the time when the action begins even though the clerk should be dilatory in issuing the summons. Its filing is not jurisdictional and defects in it do not affect the validity of the proceedings. McMillon v. Harrison, 66 Fla. 200, 63 So. 427.

[a] On Former Agent.—Service upon a person who had at one time been an agent of the defendant but who at the time of service was no longer such, confers no jurisdiction. Eureka Mercantile Co. v. California Ins. Co., 130 Cal. 153, 62 Pac. 393.

[b] Attempted service upon a corporation by serving persons who at the time were not officers of the corporation will not give the court jurisdiction, and its decree is subject to collateral attack. Campbell Printing Press & Mfg. Co. v. Marder, Luse & Co., 50 Neb. 283, 69 N. W. 774.

[c] Where the statute requires service by the sheriff of one county and the record shows service by the sheriff of another county the judgment is collaterally attackable notwithstanding a general recital of due and legal service. Munson v. Pawnee Cattle Co., 53 Colo. 337, 126 Pac. 275.

An irregularity in the manner of service is not available on collateral attack where it appears that the defendant was in fact served.<sup>97</sup>

(d.) Return Defective.—The return appearing upon the record may show such want of jurisdiction as to invalidate the judgment.<sup>98</sup> An informal or imperfect return, however, which does not defeat the court's jurisdiction will not subject the judgment to impeachment in a collateral proceeding,<sup>99</sup> particularly where the judgment recites that

[d] Service upon minor under fourteen years made upon the minor personally will not confer jurisdiction, where the statute requires such service to be made upon the minor's father, mother or guardian. Herdlicka v. Evans, 165 Iowa 207, 145 N. W. 84. See generally the title "Infants."

[a] Service two days before return day when the statute requires service to be made three days before the return day, will not render the judgment subject to collateral attack. Foster v. Thompson, 10 Ala. App. 365, 65 So. 414.

[b] That process was served after the return day does not invalidate the judgment, where defendant could have answered long before judgment. Batjer v. Roberts (Tex.), 148 S. W. 841.

[d] Service on the agent of a foreign corporation designated to accept process was good on collateral attack although made in a county where no designation of agency was filed, and though there was no agent in the county where the land in suit was situated. Austin v. King, 25 Colo. App. 363, 138 Pac. 57.

[e] Service in Wrong County.—That the service of process was made upon defendant in a county other than that of his residence is not ground for collateral attack on a judgment of a court of general jurisdiction. Wing v. Little, 163 Ill. App. 468.

[a] An unsworn return by a constable will rebut the presumption of jurisdiction arising from recitals in the decree, where the statute requires such return to be verified. Herdlicka v. Evans, 165 Iowa 207, 145 N. W. 84.

[b] Affidavit by Deputy in His Own Name.—Where proof of extraterritorial service is made by a deputy in his own name, the judgment is thereby invalidated; the process being directed to the sheriff. Stuckert v. Thompson, 181 Mo. App. 518, 164 S. W. 692.

[c] A return made before a deputy clerk is fatally defective, and confers no jurisdiction, where the statute requires service of process in a sister state shall be proved by an affidavit of an officer of the sister state making the service, made before the clerk or judge of the court of which affiant is an officer. *Givens v. [b] Made Too Late.—A return upon the summons not made within the period required by statute will not render the judgment impeachable collaterally. Sacramento Bank v. Montgomery, 146 Cal. 745, 81 Pac. 138; Rivard v. Gardner, 39 Ill. 125.

[c] That the place of service is not state is not fatal. Stoddard Mfg. Co. v. Mattice, 10 S. D. 253, 72 N. W. 891.

[d] Variance.—(1) An immaterial variance in the return is not ground for collateral attack. Kavanagh v. Hamilton, 53 Colo. 157, 125 Pac. 512. (2) Spelling defendant's name "George B. Hamilton" in the return whereas her name was Georgie B. Hamilton, will not overcome a recital of proper service in the judgment. Kavanagh v. Hamilton, 53 Colo. 157, 125 Pac. 512.

[e] Verification.—(1) It is not a good objection that the return is not verified (Ostby v. Secor [Iowa], 94 N. W. 571; Muchmore v. Guest [Neb.], 96 N. W. 194), (2) unless a sworn return is made indispensable by the statute, Herdlicka v. Evans, 165 Iowa 207, 145 N. W. 84.

[f] Age of Server.—Where the affidavit of service does not state that the affiant was twenty-one years of age at the time of the service, the defect is not fatal collaterally. Peck v. Strauss, 33 Cal. 678.

[g] That a joint service instead of a several one is shown by the return does not make it void. McMillon v. Harrison, 66 Fla. 200, 63 So. 427.

[h] Copy of Complaint.—Failure of the return to show that a copy of the complaint was served with the summons is not fatal to default judgment when questioned collaterally. Shirran v. Dallas, 21 Cal. App. 405, 132 Pac. 454, 462.

[a] A party who appears to object to the jurisdiction of the appellate court on the ground that the appellate proceedings were not instituted within the statutory period, cannot collaterally attack the court's erroneous decision that it had jurisdiction. Radil v. Sawyer, 84 Neb. 143, 120 N. W. 957.

[b] A mere intruder who voluntarily intervenes in the action before being summoned and who is not mentioned in the complaint or process is bound by the judgment and cannot attack it collaterally. Tyrrell v. Baldwin, 67 Cal. 1, 6 Pac. 867.

[c] Attacking Manner of Service. One who specially appears before a justice of the peace to attack the manner of the service of process cannot collaterally impeach an adverse judgment there rendered. David Bradley &

(BB.) Authority of Attorney.—Since the court in proceeding with the cause necessarily determines the attorney's right to act for a party, a number of decisions regard this as conclusive collaterally and refuse to entertain any objection based on the attorney's authority to make appearance in the case.<sup>3</sup> There are cases, however, holding a judgment upon unauthorized appearance of an attorney without service, to be void and collaterally attackable,<sup>4</sup> particularly in the case of a foreign judgment.<sup>5</sup>

to find defendant,<sup>12</sup> and that he could not be found within the state,<sup>13</sup> or that he was a non-resident.<sup>14</sup> Where the statute requires a positive affidavit, one made merely on information and belief is not sufficient even collaterally.<sup>15</sup>

But where the affidavit is merely defective, as in the mode of stating a material fact or in the degree of proof furnished, the resulting judgment even though erroneous is not subject to collateral attack.<sup>16</sup>

[a] Post Office Address.—An affidavit that affiant is informed and believes that the post office addresses of the defendants are unknown will not give the court jurisdiction. Gibson v. Wagner, 25 Colo. App. 129, 136 Pac. 93.

[b] If not required by statute to be stated positively, an affidavit on information and belief will suffice. The circumstance that the affidavit is thus made affects merely the degree of proof. Consequently where the court accepts it as legal evidence, it must be deemed sufficient on collateral attack to confer jurisdiction over the subject-matter. Thompson v. Thompson, 226 U. (CC.) Order for Publication.—The order for publication appearing on the record may disclose a fatal insufficiency, rendering the judgment impeachable collaterally,<sup>17</sup> but mere irregularities and omissions therein, not going to the jurisdiction of the court, can have no effect collaterally.<sup>18</sup>

[d] Jurat Not Signed.—The fact that the jurat to an affidavit of attachment wanted the officer's signature, is not ground for collateral attack. Kruse v. Wilson, 79 Ill. 233; Steel v. Stearns Coal & Lumber Co., 148 Ky. 429, 146 S. W. 721.

[e] Authority of Notary.—It is not fatal that the notary who swore to the affidavit of non-residence did not state in his certificate that he was authorized under the laws of the state to administer oaths. Figge v. Rowlen, 185 Ill. 234, 57 N. E. 195.

[f] Affidavit Amendable.—If the affidavit in attachment is amendable, it is not void and no objection can be based on it in a collateral proceeding. Kruse v. Wilson, 79 Ill. 233; Daivson v. Bankers' Life Assn., 166 Mo. App. 625, 150 S. W. 713.

[g] Fact of Agency.—A judgment is not invalid and subject to collateral attack because the affidavit for publication fails to recite that deponent was plaintiff's agent where he was in fact such agent. Daivson v. Bankers' Life Assn., 166 Mo. App. 625, 150 S. W. 713.

[h] Though sworn to before the attorney for plaintiff, the affidavit is nevertheless sufficient to sustain the judgment upon collateral attack. Harris v. Burbery, 85 Kan. 201, 116 Pac. 206; Swearingen v. Howser, 37 Kan. 126, 14 Pac. 436.

[a] Order Not Dated.—An objection that the order of publication is not dated and that therefore it does not appear that such order was made before publication cannot be sustained where the publisher's certificate is annexed to the order and states that it was published, as the order must have been made before it could have been published. *Foster v. [b] Where one of several statutory methods of publication is designated by the court's order, and the affidavit of publication shows that another method was followed, the court will acquire no jurisdiction. Carter v. Frahm, 31 S. D. 379, 141 N. W. 370.

[c] No Publication as to Minor Heirs.—Vandervort v. Finnell, 96 Neb. 515, 148 N. W. 332.

[d] Description of Land.—In an action to quiet title a notice by publication which does not describe the land is not sufficient notice to adverse claimants not named in the notice and they may attack the judgment collaterally. Fenton v. Minnesota Title

(4.) Pleadings and Deficiencies Therein.—(a.) Necessity of Complaint or Petition.—The court's power to proceed in a case is called into operation by the declaration, complaint, petition, affidavit, or other statement of the party seeking relief. It is thus that the court's jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the cause is invoked.<sup>22</sup> Where the statute

[e] If insufficient to advise defendants that a suit was pending against them the notice will not confer jurisdiction. For example a notice in a tax suit for taxes due on the "A. Netherly" survey, which is directed to the unknown owners of the "A. Wetherby" survey is not sufficient, and the judgment based thereon is subject to collateral attack. Harris v. Hill, 54 Tex. Civ. App. 437, 117 S. W. 907.

[f] Variance.—Where the order of publication recites that "the defendant has deserted the plaintiff, and has absented himself from his usual place of abode in this state, so that the ordinary process of law cannot be served upon him," and the affidavit recites that the defendant was a non-resident of the state and for that reason the ordinary process of law could not be served upon him the publication is void. Kunzi v. Hickman, 243 Mo. 103, 147 S. W. 1002.

[g] Mere Irregularities.—That a published process required the person to appear "before" instead of "at" the day fixed in the order was a harmless irregularity not affecting the court's jurisdiction. Wilson v. Wilson, 255 Mo. 528, 164 S. W. 561.

[h] Before Filing of Petition.—A notice in drainage proceedings has been considered sufficient though published before petition was filed. Deegan v. State, 108 Ind. 155, 9 N. E. 148.

[i] Naming Defendants.—A decree in a proceeding in personam to enforce a levee assessment against heirs of a deceased person is void where neither the complaint nor the warning order contains the names of such persons. Indiana & Arkansas Lumb. & Mfg. Co. v. Brinkley, 164 Fed. 963, 91 C. C. A. 91.

[j] Idem Sonans.—If the true name of defendant and the name given in the publication be substantially alike when printed, it matters not that they are not strictly idem sonans. Ordean v. Grannis, 118 Minn. 117, 136 N. W. 575.

21. Haywood v. Collins, 60 Ill. 328.

[a] Not Signed by Publisher or Printer.—Where the certificate of publication is not signed by the publisher or printer as required by statute, and jurisdiction does not otherwise appear, the judgment cannot be sustained. Haywood v. Collins, 60 Ill. 328.

(c.) Sufficiency in Substance.—(AA.) Generally.—Jurisdiction does not depend upon the sufficiency of the allegations as a matter of law. All that is required is that the pleading show a subject-matter and a demand for relief that are within the jurisdiction of the court.<sup>32</sup> Whether a complaint does or does not state a cause of action is, so far as concerns the question of jurisdiction, of no importance collaterally, for, if it states a case belonging to a general class over which the authority

[a] The rule was stated by the supreme court of Illinois thus: "It is well settled that jurisdiction does not depend upon the sufficiency of the bill. If the court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter and of the parties nothing further is required. The cause of action may be defectively stated, but that does not destroy jurisdiction. A bill may state conclusions, but if not demurred to and the evidence supports a decree conforming to the general allegations of the bill and the decree is within the power of the court to ren-of the court extends, jurisdiction attaches and the court has the power to decide whether the pleading is good or bad.<sup>33</sup> The complaint or petition might have been uncertain, irregular or entirely insufficient upon demurrer or motion, but the judgment is nevertheless binding collaterally.<sup>34</sup> And, providing the pleading is sufficient to invoke such jurisdiction as the court possesses over the subject-matter it cannot be objected collaterally that the complaint fails to make material averments, such as the completion of steps preliminary to suit,<sup>35</sup> aver-der, the court has jurisdiction. Jurisdiction is the power to hear and determine the subject-matter in controversy between the parties to a suit. If the law confers the power to render a judgment or decree, then the court has jurisdiction." O'Brien v. People, 216 Ill. 354, 75 N. E. 108.

[b] "It would be difficult," says the court in Ruppin v. McLachlan, 122 Iowa 343, 98 N. W. 153, "to imagine a case where the court, having jurisdiction in other respects, could not render . . . a judgment proof against collateral attack because of the insufficiency of the petition."

[c] That the legal conclusion which the pleader sought to have drawn from his complaint is not supported by the facts is not a valid objection collaterally. Ruppin v. McLachlan, 122 Iowa 343, 98 N. W. 153.

[d] That the relief awarded by the judgment is other than the facts stated in the complaint entitle the plaintiff to, cannot be set up in a collateral attack. Poor v. Boyce, 12 Tex. 440.

[b] Tax Proceedings.—It is not ground for collateral attack upon a tax judgment that the petition to sell the land for delinquent taxes does not properly describe the ownership. Hall v. Morris, 94 Ark. 519, 127 S. W. 718. See generally the title "Taxation."

[c] Where the original action was to assess property alleged to have been omitted from taxation it does not invalidate the judgment on collateral attack, that the property sought to be assessed was described in general instead of special terms. Com. v. Helm, 169 Ky. 194, 183 S. W. 502.

[a] Remedy at Law.—Where a bill in equity fails to show that petitioner did not have an adequate remedy at law the defect is not available collaterally. Thomson v. Morris, 57 Ill. 333.

[a] Possession.—In an action to quiet title against a mortgagee, the omission of an allegation that complainant is in possession of the mortgaged premises is not a ground for collateral attack. Figge v. Rowlen, 185 Ill. 234, 57 N. E. 195.

[b] A partition judgment is not void because it was not alleged that plaintiff was of full age (Lessee of Glover's Heirs v. Ruffin, 6 Ohio 255), nor because of a failure to give the names of those who were of full age. Thompson v. Tolmie, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 157, 164, 7 L. ed. 381.

ment petition, not appearing upon the record of the confirmation proceedings, cannot be availed of in an application for an order of sale for non-payment of the assessment. Perisho v. People, 185 Ill. 334, 56 N. E. 1134.

[d] A judgment imposing a lien upon lands, in favor of one who has paid the taxes thereon, is not void even where the petition fails to aver that the plaintiff was seized of, or had the care of the lands, although in view of the statute upon which the proceeding is based such averments would seem to be material. 41. See preceding section.

[a] Failure of a creditor's petition to have a debtor declared bankrupt to aver that the debtor was not a wage earner or a person engaged chiefly in farming or in tilling the soil as required by the bankruptcy act, is not available collaterally. Edelstein v. United States, 149 Fed. 636, 79 C. C. A. 328, writ of certiorari denied, 205 U. S. 543, 27 Sup. Ct. 791, 51 L. ed. 922.

[b] "Attached on Contract." Where the petition in involuntary bankruptcy did not show that the estate of the debtor had been "attached on contract" it is not fatal collaterally. Partridge v. Hannum, 2 Mete. (Mass.) 569.

attacks on adjudications in probate proceedings to appoint executors and administrators,<sup>42</sup> to sell decedent's property,<sup>43</sup> or distribute the estate,<sup>44</sup> or for a guardian's sale.<sup>45</sup>

(5.) Recitals of Jurisdiction.—(a.) Generally.—Recitals in a judgment, decree or other adjudication, to be evidence of jurisdiction on collateral attack, need not set forth the fact showing how jurisdiction was acquired, but it is sufficient that they state in some general way, the fact that jurisdiction was duly and regularly obtained in accord-good on collateral attack. Frary v. Dakin, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 75.

42. Johnson v. Johnson's Estate, 66 Mich. 525, 33 N. W. 413; Shane v. Peoples, 25 N. D. 188, 141 N. W. 737.

[a] The amount and value of an estate are not jurisdictional. Lucas v. Todd, 28 Cal. 182.

43. Howell v. Hughes, 168 Ala. 460, 53 So. 105; Smith v. Black, 231 Mo. 681, 132 S. W. 1129; Grayson v. Weddle, 63 Mo. 523, 537; Pattee v. Thomas, 58 Mo. 163; Overton v. Johnson, 17 Mo. 442.

[a] Necessity of Showing Statutory Grounds.—The jurisdiction of the court does not depend upon the showing in the application of one of the statutory causes for the sale. The absence of such showing or the statement of a reason which would not authorize the sale might make the order of sale erroneous but not void. Abernathy v. O'Reilly, 90 Ala. 495, 7 So. 919; Taffinger v. Merrell, 95 Tex. 95, 65 S. W. 177; Weems v. Masterson, 80 Tex. 45, 15 S. W. 590; Poor v. Boyce, 12 Tex. 440; Finch's Heirs v. Edmonson, 9 Tex. 504; Lynch v. Baxter, 4 Tex. 431, 51 Am. Dec. 735; Wilkin v. Simmons (Tex. Civ. App.), 151 S. W. 1145. But see McNally v. Haynes, 59 Tex. 583.

[b] Failure of the petition to allege the estate on hand and the amount of claims allowed and paid, though irregular, does not make the sale attackable collaterally. Ill.—Bradley v. Drone, 187 Ill. 175, 58 N. E. 304; Moffitt v. Moffitt, 69 Ill. 641. Ia.—Myers v. Davis, 47 Iowa 325; Read v. Howe, 39 Iowa 553. N. Y.—Germon v. Swartwout, 3 Wend. 282.

[c] Negating Power of Sale. Where such a petition shows the existence of a will, it must negative a power of sale in the will for under the statute that is the only contingency in which the court has power to order the sale. Howell v. Hughes, 168 Ala. 460, 53 So. 105; Wilson v. Holt, 83 Ala. 528, 3 So. 321; Arnett v. Bailey, 60 Ala. 435; Hall's Heirs v. Hall, 47 Ala. 290, 298.

[d] Filing Inventory.—It is not necessary to the validity of a sale of decedent's property that the inventory appraisement, lists and accounts of the estate be filed with the petition as required by statute. Smith v. Black, 231 Mo. 681, 132 S. W. 1129; Grayson v. Weddle, 63 Mo. 523; Pattee v. Thomas, 58 Mo. 163; Overton v. Johnson, 17 Mo. 442.

[e] A request for allotment of dower in a proceeding for the sale of land, though not authorized by statute, will not affect the court's jurisdiction to order the sale. Swearegen v. Gulick, 67 Ill. 208.

44. Carter v. Frahm, 31 S. D. 379, 141 N. W. 370.

[a] Heirs Unknown.—Where the statute authorizes the issue and service by publication of a warning order to unknown heirs when the fact appears in the complaint that the names of such heirs are unknown to plaintiff, an averment in the complaint to that effect is indispensable to the validity of such an order and service. Indiana & Arkansas Lumb. & Mfg. Co. v. Brinkley, 164 Fed. 963, 91 C. C. A. 91.

45. Young v. Lorain, 11 Ill. 624, 52 Am. Dec. 463; Watts v. Cook, 24 Kan. 278.

[b] That statutory grounds (1) are not averred does not avoid the sale (Weems v. Masterson, 80 Tex. 45, 15 S. W. 590), (2) but failure to set out a debt for which the sale could be allowed has been held fatal. Coffield v. McLean, 49 N. C. 15.

It will not suffice to overcome the recitals in the judgment that the record is otherwise silent as to jurisdictional steps.<sup>61</sup>

(8.) Adjudication of Jurisdiction.—A court of general jurisdiction in assuming the power to proceed in a case, thereby impliedly adjudges that the requisite jurisdictional facts exist and, though its determination in this respect be erroneous, the judgment is not for that reason subject to collateral attack.<sup>62</sup> If in the particular case the question

[a] Writ Misdated.—Where one of two writs of scire facias found in the papers bears date subsequent to the judgment, it will be presumed from a recital in the judgment that two separate writs of scire facias issued that there was another and proper writ issued and returned, which was lost from the files or destroyed. Chicago Dock & Canal Co. v. Kinzie, 93 Ill. 415.

[b] Replacing Void Summons.—Although the summons in a proceeding be void, it will be presumed from the recital in the decree that all the parties were properly served, that a second and valid summons was issued. Bradley v. Drone, 187 Ill. 175, 58 N. E. 304.

[b] Where the place of service is not stated in the acknowledgment of service, the presumption arising from a recital of service is not thereby rebutted. Stoddard Mfg. Co. v. Mattice, 10 S. D. 253, 72 N. W. 891.

[c] Time of Making Return.—The fact that the return upon the summons was not made within the statutory period will not contradict a recital in the decree of proper service. Sacramento Bank v. Montgomery, 146 Cal. 745, 81 Pac. 138.

[d] Service on Wrong Person.—A judgment recital of proper service is not rebutted by the sheriff's return showing service on the wrong person. Quivey v. Porter, 37 Cal. 458.

59. Order Not Dated.—A recital that the order of publication against a non-resident had been published according to law will prevail though the record shows an order of publication which bears no date. Foster v. Givens, 67 Fed. 684, 14 C. C. A. 625.

[c] Appointment of Conservator. Where the decree recited that the court found a conservator had been appointed for defendant, and the record was silent as to service of process, the service of process will be conclusively presumed in a collateral proceeding. Searl v. Galbraith, 73 Ill. 269.

[a] "If, then, jurisdiction consists in the power to hear and determine . . . and the court errs in holding that a case has been made either under its inherent power or its statutory authority, can it be said that it has usurped jurisdiction and that its decrees are absolute nullities? To this we cannot consent. If the court was one of general and not special jurisdiction, if under its inherent power, supplemented by statutory enlargement, it had jurisdiction under any circumstances to sell the real estate of minors for reinvestment, it had jurisdiction to examine and determine whether the particular application was within or beyond its authority." Hine v. Morse, 218 U. S. 493, 31 Sup. Ct. 37, 54 L. ed. 1123.

formation in lunacy to be filed by a daughter against her mother, its determination that the daughter has sufficient interest to file such information, is conclusive collaterally. State ex rel. Gardiner v. Dickman, 175 Mo. App. 543, 157 S. W. 1012.

[c] Residence of the deceased at the time of his death within the territorial jurisdiction of the court is essential to give the probate court jurisdiction to grant administration of an estate. But the probate court having general jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the settlement of estates, if such court has assumed jurisdiction of a particular estate and granted administration thereof then in accordance with the rule in regard to the acts of courts of general jurisdiction that all intendments of law are in favor of such acts and that they are presumed to have jurisdiction to give the judgments they render until the contrary appears, such grant of administration is conclusive and not subject to collateral attack. Balsewicz v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., 240 Ill. 238, 88 N. E. 734.

[d] Whether a debt was of an equitable nature and therefore cognizable in the circuit court sitting in equity cannot be determined in a collateral attack on the decree. Hatcher v. Hendrie & Bolthoff Mfg. & Supply Co., 133 Fed. 267, 68 C. C. A. 19.

[e] Whether Indictment Charged Offense Against Laws of United States. In the leading case of Ex parte Watkins, 3 Pet. 193, 7 L. ed. 650, wherein a prisoner asked release on habeas corpus on the ground that no offense against the United States was charged in the indictment, Chief Justice Marshall said: "Had any offense against the laws of the United States been in fact committed, the Circuit Court for the District of Columbia could take cognizance of it. The question whether any offense was or was not committed, that is, whether the indictment did or did not show that an offense had been committed, was a question which this court was competent to decide. If its judgment was erroneous, a point which this court does not determine, still it is a judgment; and, until reversed, cannot be disregarded."

adjudication on any other matter submitted to it.<sup>63</sup> Consequently where the court expressly finds that sufficient personal service was had in the case,<sup>64</sup> or that appearance was made,<sup>65</sup> or that there was due service by publication,<sup>66</sup> such findings are evidence that the court possessed jurisdiction to render the judgment,<sup>67</sup> and parol evidence is

d. Fraud and Collusion. — (I.) In General. — Judgments and decrees are frequently drawn in question collaterally on the ground of fraud and collusion. [b] Certificate of Publication. Where the only evidence of the notice by the collector that he would apply for judgment for delinquent taxes was the certificate of the publisher printed at the conclusion of the list of delinquent lands, and without any separate certificate made since the publication, the court obtained no jurisdiction in the matter, notwithstanding its finding as to due publication. Senichka v. Lowe, 74 Ill. 274.

70. Adversary Proceeding Prevented. Where by fraud practiced in the litigation the court apparently had jurisdiction of the cause and the parties but in reality the court had no jurisdiction of the subject-matter or of the adverse party because he was not duly served with notice or did not have a hearing on account of the fraud practiced on him, the trial is not one of adversary rights in a proper subject-matter and the judgment is null and void. [b] Fraud Upon the Court.—“Judgment obtained by fraud upon a court, binds not such court or any other, and

its nullity upon that ground though it has not been set aside or reversed, may be alleged in a collateral proceeding." Mumfreville v. Reynolds, 68 N. Y. 528. See also Eysaman v. Nelson, 79 Misc. 304, 140 N. Y. Supp. 183.

[c] Service of Process Secured by Fraud.—Plaintiff, a resident of Wisconsin, desired to serve process on a Pennsylvania insurance company, having no agent in Wisconsin. Being a policy holder in the insurance company, he represented to the company that he wished to pay his premiums through the cashier of a local bank, and to obtain a receipt for a renewal premium at the same time. The company complied with his wishes. Plaintiff paid the premium to the cashier and on the same day caused summons in an action against the company to be served on him, relying on a Wisconsin statute which constitutes any person who collects any premium for insurance an agent of the company. Such service, it was held, on collateral attack, having been obtained by fraud or trick, was insufficient to confer jurisdiction. *Frawley, Bundy & Wilcox v. [a] If the impeachment be successful in such cases the effect is not to vacate the judgment but only to disallow its interfering lien so far as such subsequent creditors are concerned, leaving it in force as between the original parties, and for all other purposes. Safe-Deposit & Trust Co. v. Wright, 105 Fed. 155, 44 C. C. A. 421.

fraud which will authorize a creditor to impeach a judgment, obtained by another, against his debtor must be fraud against such creditor participated in by the debtor, not a mere overreaching of the debtor in his litigation.<sup>78</sup>

e. Errors and Irregularities in the Proceedings.—(I.) In General. Jurisdiction once having been acquired in the case, no errors or irregularities in the subsequent proceedings which do not actually induce a loss of such jurisdiction will render the judgment subject to collateral impeachment.<sup>79</sup>

[b] No presumption as to fraud exists in such cases. The collusion and fraudulent intent should be alleged in some appropriate written instrument or pleading and it must in all cases be satisfactorily proved. Safe-Deposit & Trust Co. v. Wright, 105 Fed. 155, 44 C. C. A. 421.

[c] Attack by Stockholders.—A judgment obtained against one stockholder by fraud and collusion may be collaterally attacked by other stockholders who were not parties to the suit. Gund v. Ballard, 73 Neb. 547, 103 N. W. 309.

[d] A creditor of a mortgagor may collaterally attack a collusive foreclosure decree, even though his rights were acquired pendente lite. Northern Pac. Ry. Co. v. Boyd, 177 Fed. 804, 101 C. C. A. 18, affirmed, 228 U. S. 482, 33 Sup. Ct. 554, 57 L. ed. 931.

[e] Subsequent creditors and plaintiffs in junior judgments may collaterally impeach the senior judgment as having been entered or obtained by collusion between plaintiff and defendant, with intent to defraud or hinder such subsequent creditors. Safe-Deposit & Trust Co. v. Wright, 105 Fed. 155, 44 C. C. A. 421.

[f] An abandonment of the fraudulent purpose to defraud the creditor will not defeat his right to attack the judgment. Bunn, Raiguel & Co. v. Ahl, 29 Pa. 387.

[g] A sheriff, against whom a judgment is sought to be used, may attack it by showing that it is in fraud of the creditors whom he represents. Clark v. Foxcroft, 6 Greenl. (Me.) 296, 20 Am. Dec. 309.

[h] Attack by Grantee.—Where property conveyed is levied upon under a judgment recovered against the grantor upon a prior indebtedness, the grantee may in a collateral proceeding show that such indebtedness was fraudulent and the judgment was a collusive one. Bergman v. Hutcheson, 60 Miss. 872.

(B.) COURTS OF LIMITED AND INTERIOR JURISDICTION.—When it affirmatively appears upon the record that jurisdiction has attached, the same presumptions as to regularity attend the proceedings of courts of limited and inferior jurisdiction as are indulged to sustain those of general and superior jurisdiction.<sup>81</sup>

(C.) PRESUMPTIONS AS TO PARTICULAR MATTERS.—In the absence, therefore, of any showing on the record to the contrary, a presumption of regularity upholds the proceedings at every stage. Thus it will be presumed that the cause of action was complete when the proceedings for an infant, or insane person,<sup>66</sup> nor an irregularity in the appointment of such guardian,<sup>67</sup> will render the judgment any the less conclusive collaterally. The omission to make some person a party as required by law, does not render the decree void and subject to collateral impeachment by the persons made parties and over whom the court had jurisdiction,<sup>68</sup> but a decree entered in the absence of necessary parties may be disputed collaterally by those not made parties.<sup>69</sup>

Where the court has in fact obtained jurisdiction of a party, it is immaterial on collateral attack that the party was not described or was improperly described,<sup>1</sup> or that a party was sued in the wrong

(B.) DEATH OF PARTY. — Whether a judgment is collaterally attackable because the person for or against whom it was rendered was dead either at the time of the institution of the suit or when judgment was rendered, depends entirely upon whether such a judgment is regarded as wholly void or merely voidable,<sup>4</sup> a matter which is elsewhere discussed.<sup>5</sup>

(IV.) Objections Relating to the Cause of Action. — The existence or non-existence of a cause of action is wholly immaterial to the validity of the judgment when the latter is collaterally assailed.<sup>6</sup> Hence an objection cannot be collaterally urged that the alleged debt or claim upon which the judgment was founded, was not a subsisting obligation,<sup>7</sup> or that the alleged debt or claim was illegal and void,<sup>8</sup> or was

Misjoinder of cause of action does not furnish ground for attacking the judgment collaterally.<sup>11</sup>

(V.) Wrong Form of Action or Remedy. — Where the court had jurisdiction of the parties and the subject-matter, its judgment may not be questioned collaterally upon the ground that the form of action or remedy pursued was not a proper one by which to determine the rights involved.<sup>12</sup> But the remedy pursued must have been one which the court had jurisdiction to administer.<sup>13</sup>

(VI.) Objections as to Venue, Change of, and Removal. — Neither objections relating to the venue of the action,<sup>14</sup> nor those based on errors former decree it will be presumed in a collateral attack upon the judgment in partition, that the court in proceeding with the partition suit had the prior decree before it and properly interpreted it. Hall v. Brittain, 171 Cal. 424, 153 Pac. 906.

[b] Note Not Due.—That one of the notes sued upon was not due at the commencement of the action, but became due before the declaration was filed will not affect the validity of the judgment when questioned collaterally. Lord v. F. M. Dowling & Co., 52 Fla. 313, 42 So. 585.

pointed,<sup>23</sup> or in the report rendered by such officers<sup>24</sup> be fatal, unless a strict compliance with the statute is a jurisdictional essential in the particular case.<sup>25</sup> An erroneous rejection of a report rendered by advisory officers will not defeat the judgment collaterally.<sup>26</sup>

(IX.) Errors in Matters of Evidence.—Errors committed by the court in passing upon matters of evidence cannot in any way deprive it of jurisdiction and are therefore not ground for collateral attack upon the judgment. The court may have been mistaken in its rulings upon the competency of witnesses,<sup>27</sup> the admissibility of evidence,<sup>28</sup> or the manner of conducting the examination,<sup>29</sup> but the judgment would not for such reasons be open to attack except in some direct proceeding. Insufficiency of evidence to justify the judgment is not ground for collateral attack.<sup>30</sup>

(X.) Findings.—If the court has jurisdiction to render the decree, all the findings upon which that decree proceeds are likewise conclusive and inquiry cannot be made into the propriety of the same.<sup>31</sup>

(XI.) Errors or Defects in Judgment.—Providing the court does not exceed the limits of its jurisdiction, its decision upon questions either of law or fact, though palpably erroneous or inequitable, is not subject to collateral attack.<sup>32</sup> Thus the judgment cannot be collaterally im-

[b] A decree of distribution is merely erroneous when made in accordance with the terms of a void trust. Crew v. Pratt, 119 Cal. 131, 51 Pac. 41.

the defendant. Still, the proceeding being quasi judicial, and the subject-matter within the jurisdiction of the officers who conducted it, the result reached is so far conclusive that the legality of it cannot be questioned in an action at law to recover back the one-half of the tax as illegal." Balfour v. Portland, 28 Fed. 738.

[d] Mortgage of Deceased's Property.—An order of the probate court authorizing a mortgage of deceased's real estate to pay a debt of deceased is not impeachable collaterally because it does not include all the debts. Stambach v. Emerson, 139 Cal. 282, 72 Pac. 991.

[a] A judgment by confession rendered after the court obtained jurisdiction but without the oral testimony required by statute concerning confessions of judgment is merely irregular in fact, that it was entered in the absence of any evidence.<sup>34</sup> The amount of the judgment cannot, as a rule, be questioned collaterally,<sup>35</sup> though in some instances the judgment, where excessive, has been held void as to the excess.<sup>36</sup> Errors in regard to costs are not available in such proceedings.<sup>37</sup> No objections going merely to the character of the relief granted can avail collaterally,<sup>38</sup> unless the court thereby exceeds its jurisdiction.<sup>39</sup> Thus too broad or too limited relief<sup>40</sup> may

[a] Erroneously barring a right of redemption does not invalidate the foreclosure decree. U. S.—Andrews v. National Foundry & Pipe Works, 77 Fed. 774, 23 C. C. A. 454, 36 L. R. A. 153. Ill.—Maloney v. Dewey, 127 Ill. 395, 19 N. E. 848. Ia.—Moore v. Jeffers, 53 Iowa 202, 4 N. W. 1084. Kan.—Ogden v. Walters, 12 Kan. 282.

[b] A tax judgment including land outside the county limits is valid though the statute authorizes the auditor to list lands that are within the county only. Williams v. Harris, 4 Sneed (Tenn.) 332. But see Barger's Lessee v. Jackson, 9 Ohio 163.

[c] Provision for Resale Omitted. The failure of a foreclosure decree to provide for resale in case there is no redemption, is not fatal. Huyck v. Graham, 82 Mich. 353, 46 N. W. 781.

[d] Where a life estate instead of a fee is given in a foreclosure decree, the judgment is merely erroneous though the party was entitled to the

be granted, or the relief may be inconsistent,<sup>41</sup> joint instead of several,<sup>42</sup> or several instead of joint,<sup>43</sup> personal instead of in rem, where the court has jurisdiction of the parties,<sup>44</sup> or of a kind not strictly war-latter estate. Derr v. Wilson, 84 Ky. 14.

A decree which fails to reserve to an infant defendant his day in court is not for that reason collaterally attackable. See 12 STANDARD PROC. 777.

[e] That all the matters submitted were not disposed of by the judgment does not impair its conclusiveness. Horton v. Simon, 5 Neb. (Unof.) 172, 97 N. W. 604.

[f] A replevin judgment (1) for value only, and not for the return of the property is valid collaterally (Robertson v. Davidson, 14 Minn. 554), Wright v. Card, 16 R. I. 719, 19 Atl. 709. (2) As is also one for the return of the property, omitting the value (Manrix v. Franke, 9 Kan. 132), (3) or one wherein both provisions are omitted. Fromlet v. Poor, 3 Ind. App. 425, 29 N. E. 1081. But see Beemis v. Wylie, 19 Wis. 318.

[h] Right to Appeal.—Failure of a justice to inform the defendant of his right to appeal and to make an entry that such information was given is of no significance collaterally. Jacoby v. Waddell, 61 Iowa 247, 16 N. W. 119.

[i] Heirs Not Named.—A decree of distribution is conclusive though it fail to name the testator's heirs and the proportion each should take. Jewell v. Pierce, 120 Cal. 79, 52 Pac. 132.

[j] A partition decree (1) which fails to take security to pay the difference where a larger share is assigned to one cotenant, is not void. White v. Clapp, 8 Mete. (Mass.) 365. (2) But such a decree has been held void as to minor children when it failed to take security to pay for their shares. Townsend's Lessee v. Rees, 2 Har. (Del.) 324.

41. Though two distinct and inconsistent reliefs are awarded by the decree it is not thereby rendered void. Merillat v. Hensey, 34 App. Cas. (D. C.) 398, 401.

43. A several judgment on a joint note, though contrary to the statute is not void. Allen v. Mills, 26 Mich. 123.

44. Hatcher v. Hendrie & Bolthoff Mfg. & Supply Co., 133 Fed. 267, 271, 68 C. C. A. 19.

[a] On Secured Note.—A personal judgment rendered on a note secured by a mortgage not yet foreclosed is not void. Staples v. Shiver (Ky.), 122 S. W. 826.

[b] A personal judgment (1) against a garnishee is merely erroneous (Citizens' Bank v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 107 Ark. 142, 155 S. W. 102; Rasmussen v. McCabe, 43 Wis. 471; Rector v. Drury, 3 Pin. [Wis.] 298, 4 Chand. 24), (2) unless absolutely prohibited by statute in which case it is void. Giles v. Hicks, 45 Ark. 271; Missouri Pac. Ry. Co. v. Reid, 34 Kan. 410, 8 Pac. 846.

The finality of the judgment cannot be questioned collaterally for mere clerical errors,<sup>46</sup> nor because the judgment is irregular in form,<sup>47</sup> collateral attack. Givens v. Harlow, 251 Mo. 231, 158 S. W. 355.

[d] A judgment against a married woman cannot be collaterally attacked on the ground that it was general and not against her sole and separate property. Magruder v. Armes, 15 App. Cas. (D. C.) 379.

45. Citizens' Bank v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 107 Ark. 142, 155 S. W. 102.

[a] A divorce decree is merely irregular which grants personal property instead of money. Crews v. Mooney, 74 Mo. 26. But see Crain v. Cavana, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 109, where a grant of money instead of specific property in satisfaction of future dower rights was held void.

[c] A decree confirming a private sale of decedent's property, is not subject to collateral attack, notwithstanding the statute required such a sale to be made at public auction. Sheffey v. Davis Colliery Co., 219 Fed. 465, 135 C. C. A. 177; Apel v. Kelsey, 52 Ark. 341, 12 S. W. 703.

46. Taxing Costs.—A clerical error in not taxing costs in accordance with the terms of the decree does not affect the validity of the decree. Clark v. Barber, 21 App. Cas. (D. C.) 274.

[b] "Against" the Defendant Omitted.—(1) A judgment is not invalid which fails to state that it is "against" the defendant but states that it is in favor of plaintiff (Aldrich v. Maitland, 4 Mich. 205), (2) or which runs against the defendant but not in favor of the plaintiff. Madison County Court v. Rutz, 63 Ill. 65.

[c] Unauthorized use of abbreviations does not affect the conclusiveness of the judgment collaterally. Jackson v. Cummings, 15 Ill. 449; Crowell v. Johnson, 2 Neb. 146.

[d] Amount Blank.—That the amount of a judgment on a note is blank is not fatal where the irregularity can be corrected by amendment. Ind.—Pittsburg, C. & St. L. Ry. Co. v. Elwood, 79 Ind. 306. Ia.—Lind v. Adams, 10 Iowa 398, 77 Am. Dec. 123. But see or is not filed or enrolled.<sup>48</sup> Mistakes or uncertainty in the judgment in the description of persons affected thereby,<sup>49</sup> or of lands involved,<sup>50</sup> or of money awarded,<sup>51</sup> would not invalidate the judgment and subject it to collateral attack when such defective description can be helped out by the pleadings, process or other portions of the record.

f. Defenses Not Made.—Defenses which were or might have been interposed in the original action<sup>52</sup> are not available in a collateral attack

Case v. Plato, 54 Iowa 64, 6 N. W. 128. Mass.—Wells v. Dench, 1 Mass. 232.

48. On Confession of Judgment. Failure to file a written decision in a jury waived case as required by Sec. 1747 of the Revised Laws, as amended by Act 117 of the Laws of 1909, does not render the judgment void and collaterally impeachable in a case in which the defendant confesses judgment for a specified sum and the plaintiff accepts the confession. Carey v. Hawaiian Lumb. Mills Ltd., 21 Hawaii 311.

[a] Decree Not Enrolled.—"While enrollment . . . into the minutes of the court furnishes the only memorial by which an operative decree can be properly proved, nevertheless enrollment does not make the decree nor does its omission destroy it. It is of course true that when a decree is rendered in vacation it is not enough that it is reduced to writing and signed by the judge. It must also be filed by him with the register for enrollment as a decree." Johnson v. Johnson, 182 Ala. 376, 62 So. 706.

[b] A decree foreclosing a mortgage is not rendered invalid because not recorded, especially where the commissioner's deed made pursuant to the decree sets out the foreclosure proceedings and is properly filed. Bryan v. McCaskill (Mo.), 175 S. W. 961.

the merger, rather than transmitted to the judgment.<sup>55</sup> It has been held, however, that the rule is not inflexible, and that it will not be applied by a court of equity, if to do so would produce inequity.<sup>56</sup>

(II.) Is Judgment New Liability. — Generally and for most purposes the merger of the original claim or cause of action in a judgment creates a new and distinct liability.<sup>57</sup> Under some circumstances, however, the court may look to the nature of the obligation upon which the judgment is based for the purpose of determining the character

As to merger of security, see infra, XVII, B, 2, g, (II), (F).

[a] A bond upon which judgment has been rendered becomes merged in the judgment and any remedy available is on the judgment and not on the bond. Bunch v. United States, use of Keppler, 40 App. Cas. (D. C.) 156.

[b] A chattel mortgage is merged in a judgment foreclosing the same. Spokane Merchants' Assn. v. First Nat. Bank, 86 Wash. 367, 150 Pac. 434.

[c] A claim for necessities is merged in and extinguished by a judgment in a suit on such claim, and an action on such judgment is not a suit for necessities furnished, within the purview of the statute. Brown v. West, 73 Me. 23.

[d] Merged Notes as Evidence.—The merger by a foreclosure decree in chancery, of the original notes secured by a trust deed, so they could not form the basis of another action, did not destroy their character as evidence in ejectment founded on the trust deed. Brown v. Schintz, 203 Ill. 136, 67 N. E. 767.

56. Turner v. Stewart, 51 W. Va. 493, 41 S. E. 924.

[b] Note Extinguished by Judg-

of the liability of the judgment,<sup>58</sup> as where it is claimed that the liability has been terminated by a subsequent discharge in bankruptcy, in which event the court will look to the nature of the original obligation to determine whether the discharge operates against it.<sup>59</sup>

b. As to Judgment as Bar.—(I.) In General.—A former recovery operates as an estoppel to a subsequent action, unless reversed, vacated or annulled, where the judgment or decree is final and was rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction on the merits of the controversy between the same parties or their privies, in a suit or proceeding involving the same issues as are raised in the subsequent suit.<sup>60</sup>

ment.—When a note, bearing ten per cent interest, is put into judgment, it is thereby extinguished, and the debt will thereafter draw but six per cent interest. Mitchell v. Mayo, 16 Ill. 83.
